Many stone houses and barns could be made beautiful by spending a very small amount of money and not very much time. Plant a few climbing plants. Virginia creeper and Ampelopsis Veitchii will cling to any kind of wall and can be trained to grow in almost any direction. A few years will change the homely stone building to a beautiful bower of green.

To Make Pulled Bread.

Tear the crust from a part of a loaf of baker's bread. Now tear the crumb of the loaf into long, thin pieces. Spread the torn bread in a pan and put in a hot oven to become brown and crisp. It will take about fifteen minutes. Serve hot with cheese. Pulled bread is also nice with chocolate or coffee.

Why Women Chew Gum.

Some one buying chewing gum at a candy shop lately began to apologize for the plebeian purchase: "Oh, we don't think anything about it any more," replied the saleswoman. "So many women chew gum for dyspepsia that we always take it for granted that that is why it is wanted."

An Object Lesson.

"I don't ever go fishing any more," said the small country boy.

"Why not?" asked the visitor. "Tired of it?"

"No; but I was casting a fly on the pond one day and the hook caught me in the back, and it hurt so I've been sort of too sorry for the fish ever since."—Harper's Young People.

NOTES FOR THE CURIOUS.

Europeans pay $3,350,000,000 taxes per annum.

There are less than 300 pure-blooded Greenlanders.

A Russian is not legally of age till he is 26 years old.

Our annual interest account with England is $125,000,000.

One half of the wealth of England is in the possession of 1,000 individuals.

Over 4,000,000 people in this country live upon the wages paid by railroad companies.

Queer Sights in Mexico.

A visitor finds many things which surprise him in the City of Mexico. When the mail arrives at the postoffice the names of the people to whom letters are addressed are written on a slip of paper and posted on a bulletin board. Merchants go every morning to examine this announcement, and, if they find their names on the list, hand their cards to the delivery clerk, who hands them their mail. No postage stamps are sold outright. Those having letters to mail take them to the postoffice and pay the postage to the clerk, who sticks on the stamps himself. In all public places men are found with pen, ink and paper, ready to conduct the correspondence of anyone unable to do it himself. Finally, everyone smokes, men, women and children, in the shops, in the street cars, at the opera and even in church.

Toothsome Almond Cookies.

One half pound of butter, one-half pound of sugar, 1½ pounds of flour, five beaten eggs, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder; flavor with almond extract. Mix to a smooth dough. Roll to a quarter of an inch in thickness. Brush with the beaten white of an egg, and sprinkle thickly with fine sugar. Cut with a cake cutter into hearts and diamonds, or make simple rounds with the lid of the dredging box. Bake in a quick oven.

Frosting Without Eggs.

Take five tablespoonfuls of milk and one cup of granulated sugar. Boil five minutes. Flavor with lemon or vanilla. Beat it hard until it is cool enough to spread on cake. The frosting is ready to cut as soon as it is cold. It is very nice with the addition of grated chocolate or cocoanut.

Invented the Sewing Machine.

After a long search the house in which Joseph Madersberger, who, the Austrians say, invented the sewing machine, was born has been found in Vienna. His birth occurred on March 6, 1768. The house is to be marked by a suitable inscription.

Good Advice from China.

"Eat at your table as you would eat at the table of the king," said Confucius. The Chinese sage meant that good manners can only be acquired by private practice.

Quack Advertisements

Are a nuisance and we think it behooves publishers to examine into the merits of many articles puffed up in their columns. We do not deny that many meritorious remedies are properly to be classed under this heading. Take the hundreds and thousands relieved from severe suffering by the use of Polson's Nerviline; would it not be unreasonable to expect them to condemn that far-famed remedy? Now we know for a fact that Polson's Nerviline is without exception the most powerful, pleasant and certain remedy in the world for pain. It cannot fail, for it goes right to the bottom of pain, penetrates to the nerves, soothes them into quietness, and affords prompt and permanent relief.

A BAD SCALP DISEASE

Scaly Eruptions on Head. Bleeding When Hair Was Combed. Physicians Tried. No Success. Cured by Cuticura.

Our little daughter of four years was troubled with a disease of the scalp. It looked at first like a heavy dandruff which we undertook to comb off, but found that these lumps would start bleeding. We applied to different physicians without success, until at last tried the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and by using your CUTICURA with CUTICURA SOAP, this scaly raised eruption entirely disappeared after three applications, and had no more trouble with it for a year, when it showed up again. We applied it as before, after which it has never given us any more trouble. Am well pleased with the success we had with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and would cheerfully recommend them in similar cases.

EDWARD KRANICH, Plantsville, Conn.

ITCHING AND BURNING

I have been troubled with Eczema for years, had the best medical help in Boston, and all failed to give me relief from that intense itching and burning. The first application of CUTICURA gave me immediate relief, and at the end of a week the sores were well.

THE CZAR'S ILLNESS.

His Majesty's Strength Diminishing Gradually—The Succession.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 17.—A special edition of the Official Messenger contains a bulletin signed by Drs. Leyden, Zacharin, Popoff and Refaminoff, the Czar's physicians, stating that on consultation they found no improvement in the kidney disease from which the Czar is suffering and that his Majesty's strength has diminished since their last examination. They hope, however, that the climate of the southern climes will benefit him.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 17.—The Politiken of this city publishes a statement that the Czar intends to change the succession to the throne, naming his youngest son Michael as heir, in consequence of the Czarewitch's political views, George's succession being considered impossible owing to his bad health. The story is regarded as absurd.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Grand Duke Vladimir, brother of the Czar, arrived in Paris yesterday and visited President Casimir-Perier at the Palace d'Elysee. The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says that the Grand Duke declared that Russia's pacific policy has not changed and that the Czar's condition has improved in the Crimea and is not considered hopeless.

Protest Against Turkish Outrages.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—A meeting to protest against Turkish outrages in Armenia was held in London last evening. Francis S. Stevenson, M. P., chairman of the Anglo-Armenian Association, presided. The speakers complained of the apathy of the British foreign office and of the Church of England in the Armenian's sufferings. A resolution was adopted to invoke the aid of the Government to induce the Porte to remove the restraint placed upon Azarian, which is declared to be a violation of the Berlin treaty. Other resolutions protest against Turkey's preventing Armenians from emigrating to the United States and other countries, and against other restrictions.

Princess Alix's Backbone.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—The Kreuz Zeitung says the Russian holy synod has made an extraordinary and highly important concession in the case of the adoption of the Greek faith by Princess Alix of Hesse. The Princess refused to declare her former religion accursed or that her conversion was due to the conviction that her own religion was not founded upon truth, as is required by the law of the Greek Church. She merely made the declaration that she had joined the Greek Church in order that she might be of one faith with her future husband, and the holy synod accepted her declaration as sufficient.

Not Too Old for a Long Tramp.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—On a private wager of $1,000 made by John Chamberlain with a New York broker, Edward Payson Weston, the veteran pedestrian, is going to try to demonstrate that he is not too old to walk forty miles a day for twelve consecutive days. He will make the start from Newburg next Monday at 1 p.m. and his route will follow the line of the West Shore road to Albany, thence through the Mohawk Valley to Schenectady, Utica, Rome and Syracuse, thence to Binghampton and Port Jarvis, ending at Middletown Saturday, November 3. The distance is 468 miles.

First Colored Lawyer Dead.

C., after the war, and was judge of the Criminal Court and of the Probate Court of Charleston county, S. C.

Town Swept by Fire.

LA GRANGE, Ky., Oct. 17.—Fire broke out in Sulphur, eight miles east of here, and swept away the entire central part of the town. The list of property destroyed embraces seven stores, deposit bank of Sulphur, livery stables, two hotels and six residences. The Louisville and Nashville railroad depot, which was filled with merchandise, and the water tank were destroyed. Loss over $100,000; partially insured.

Sullivan Swears Off Drinking.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—John L. Sullivan said, in answer to an inquiry if he ever expected to fight again: "I do; I am only in the theatrical business for the time being. I expect to challenge the winner of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight. I can get into condition by that time to enter the ring again." Sullivan was 36 years old on Monday and to celebrate his natal day swore off drinking liquor.

Bad Accident to an Oshawa Man.

OSHAWA, Oct. 17.—A distressing accident happened here to Alfred Snodden, an employe of James Robson, of the South tannery. He was out exercising a bay colt, and when about a mile west of the town the animal became frightened and threw Snodden out of the cart. To prevent his head coming in contact with a telegraph post Snodden put out his hands, but he struck that object with terrific force, breaking the left thigh bone.

Mr. Mercier's Condition.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—Mr. Mercier's condition is not encouraging. It was learned at Notre Dame hospital that the ex-premier had passed a restless night and is perceptibly weaker. There has been a gradual decline for the past week or ten days. The doctors in attendance held a consultation, but the result was not encouraging, as they give no hopes. They state that he may live for several weeks, but his ultimate recovery is impossible.

THE RULING MARKETS.

TORONTO, Oct. 17, 1894.

In Oswego the barley market was rather nervous, Canadians being quoted at 51.

On the street here 400 bushels of wheat sold at 58c for white and 51c for red; 2,000 of barley at 44 to 49c; 150 of peas at 57 to 58c; and 600 of oats at 31 to 32c. Outside prices were unchanged.

Wheat was steady in Chicago and closing prices were about the same. Corn was firm and advanced 3-8 to 1-2. Oats were steady and unchanged.

The London stock markets were dull on account of the illness of the Ameer of Afghanistan. Consols have fallen. Americans were flat on advices that gold shipments from New York to the continent were beginning.

Contrary to general expectation, the New York stock market ruled firm. In some of Monday's weakest stocks there was a sharp reaction. The market as a whole was all but motionless up to the close.

Correspondence in the Behring Sea Case to be Published.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—Sir Charles Tupper, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, on being interviewed, admitted the truth of the report that the Government had asked the permission of the British Government to publish the correspondence in the Behring Sea case. So far that request had not been granted. The publication of the documents would show that the contentions of the Americans in their case had not been carried out. The course the Government pursued would have the approval of the Canadian people.

Senator Robert Read, of Belleville, Ont., was wedded to Mrs. Wartman, sister of Dr. Horsey of this city, in St. John's church yesterday. The bride, whose age is 62, was attired in a quiet travelling dress and was supported by Miss Harvey, her sister. The honorable groom, himself 79 years old, was assisted through the ordeal by Hon. Mackenzie Bowell. The honeymoon will be spent in England.

Contrary to the general expectation the Supreme Court, when it met yesterday, did not give judgment in the power to prohibit case. The Ontario list, which includes all the cases west of the province of Quebec, was proceeded with.

The Ontario fees commission, which has been taking evidence all through the province with regard of payment of sheriffs and other provincial officers by fees instead of salaries, will open its enquiry in Ottawa to-morrow.

Judge Brooks, ex-M.P., will succeed to the position of Acting Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Quebec, rendered vacant by the promotion of Sir Napoleon Cassault to the chief justiceship. It had been erroneously stated that ex-Provincial Treasurer Hall would get the position.

MAY BE A MURDER.

Whitby's Turnkey in a Critical Condition—Arnold Still at Large.

WHITBY, Oct. 17.—The condition of Turnkey Bruce, who was so badly injured by Prisoner Arnold when he made his escape from the jail here, is very critical. The injured man has never regained consciousness since the affair. Dr. Gunn, the jail surgeon, and Dr. Meldrum are attending the wounded man and are using the their utmost endeavors to keep away inflammation and congestion, which they fear may set in.

Dr. Meldrum's opinion of how the affair happened is that Arnold first assaulted Bruce with his fists, of which his eyes and cheeks show every indication; then felled him to the floor with the heavy, sharp, square-edged iron poker, afterwards ferociously kicking him in the head with his heavy prison boots, causing a large depression in the skull.

Not only did he change his clothing as coolly as he did, but he broke into Bruce's private room, smashed his trunk open, threw his papers on the floor and literally ransacked everything in search of money.

He certainly intended to have murdered the turnkey and thought evidently he had accomplished his purpose from the business way in which he handled things after doing his devilish work without any fear of detection whatever.

SIMCOE, Oct. 17.—A detective from Whitby arrived here to identify, if possible, the man arrested here as Arnold, the jail-breaker. The prisoner was not Arnold and was released.

An American Suicides in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—The guests at the St. James hotel, near the Grand Trunk station, were startled last night by the report that one of the guests had deliberately committed suicide. The report proved to be correct. A few days ago a man about 40 years of age of rather shabby appearance arrived at the hotel and registered as James Robertson of New York. He was noticed to be rather despondent and retired to his room somewhat earlier than usual. A short while afterwards moans were heard, and on investigation it was found that he had deliberately cut one of his veins open and he bled to death before anything could be done. He left a letter behind stating that he was in financial trouble and unable to meet his bills.

The Murphy Forgery Case.

HAMILTON, Oct. 17.—The forgery case against Cornelius Murphy came up before Judge Muir yesterday, when A. Bruce, Q.C., acting for the Chicago prosecutors, produced affidavits showing that the prosecution is trying to find Fred Murphy, who is believed to be in hiding in this city, and will not be ready to go on till he is located. He asked for a remand and if Fred Murphy is not discovered in a few days evidence will be brought from Chicago to convict Cornelius. F. Fitzgerald, of Hamilton, and C. L. Mahoney, of Chicago, appeared for Murphy, and the former protested against the remand. The prisoner was remanded until Monday. The judge refused to allow him out on bail.

Journeying to Jerusalem.

HAMILTON, Oct. 17.—A man about 40 years of age with a covered democrat waggon drawn by two burros and a broncho passed through the city yesterday en route for New York. He says he left the Gulf of Mexico in June without a cent and on a wager of $10,000 he must reach Jerusalem within a year. He must travel alone and cook his own meals. He took up a collection here and went through east. He hopes to reach New York in five weeks where he will take steamer for Jerusalem.

Canadian Wheat in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Oct. 17.—There is a big consignment of Canadian wheat here again. The propellers Olympia, Gilchrist, Stone, Craig and Algonquin all came from Port Arthur, and their cargoes foot up 350,841 bushels. This is the largest amount received from a foreign port in one day for a long time.

Fire in Kincardine.

KINCARDINE, Ont., Oct. 17.—Fire destroyed the store of John Puettel, tailor. Mr. Puettel's loss will be $4,000, with an insurance in the Lancashire of $1,700. The building is owned by the Merchants' Bank of Canada and is fully insured in the Royal.

A Fatal Breckinridge Quarrel.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 17.—Buchanan Berry is dying at Turner from a pistol wound in the stomach inflicted by C. B. James, foreman of railroad construction. The two were discussing Breckinridge. James is a cousin of Jesse James. He is in custody.

After Coxey, Junior.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—A special from Massillion, Ohio, says a warrant has been issued for the arrest of Jesse Coxey, jr., on a delicate charge preferred by Miss Tidy Myers. Coxey has disappeared.

Don't commit suicide on account of your "incurable" blood disease. The sensible thing for you to do is to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. If that fails, why then—keep on trying, and it will not fail. The trouble is, people get discouraged too soon. "Try, try, try again."

MR. BLAKE IN NEW YORK

An Exciting Time at a Meeting of Irish Nationalists.

AN ATTEMPT TO BREAK IT UP

Opponents Gain an Entrance to the Meeting and Hiss the Speaker—They Are Ejected—A Pasteboard Bomb Causes Some Alarm—Mr. Blake's Speech.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Edward Blake, who was formerly leader of the Opposition in the Canadian Parliament and who some years ago went to Ireland and was elected to Parliament from an Irish borough, was given an enthusiastic reception in Lennox Lyceum last night. As things look now his visit will be productive of the hottest fight among Irishmen that has been known in years.

Mr. Blake has been visiting in Canada, and came here on Tuesday night. A reception had been planned for him by his friends to take place in Cooper Union last night, but an entirely different one has been arranged for him by the Parnellites, who are not his friends. The purpose of this reception is set forth in a circular issued by the Irish Independent parliamentary party of which Edward O'Flaherty is president, John Brennan, secretary and Henry G. Bannon, treasurer. The circular says among other things:

"The Hon. Edward Blake, M. P., Canadian loyalist and politician, after the death of Mr. Parnell, went to Ireland to find a larger field for the exercise of his peculiar talents, and was received with open arms by those who hounded Parnell to the grave. He comes to the United States as a begging ambassador to replenish the depleted funds of the Whig factions in Ireland, who have openly acknowledged an Englishman as their leader and whose grovelling submission to English influences has placed home rule in the dim regions of future speculation."

The circular winds up by asking if Irishmen remember the lessons of history, and if Irish nationality is a myth, and it is signed by the circular committee as follows: John P. Moran, chairman, Geo. W. M. Gee, secretary, Thomas F. Brady, J. J. Cullen, T. P. Edwards, Edward Dornan, Joseph L. Keane.

Justice Wauhope Lynn said to-day to a reporter that this circular was as good a representation of his position as could be made.

"We propose," said Justice Lynn, "to do all we can to help Irishmen on the other side with money and influence, but we want nothing to do with Mr. Blake."

Judge Lynn and the other Irish-Americans will have a mass meeting in the near future, probably at Cooper Union, and other meetings will be held in different parts of the city, the object being to resent what they term the interference of Mr. Blake and call upon the Irish leaders on the other side to stop wrangling and to get together at this critical time when unity is essential.

The friends of Mr. Blake are in no manner frightened by the onslaught of his opponents in New York.

An attempt, apparently well organized, was made to break up the meeting last night, which under the auspices of the Irish National Federation, was being held. Several hundred men attempted to gain admissions on forged tickets but nearly all were stopped at the doors. There had been reports that trouble might be expected and twenty policemen were stationed at the entrance of the doors and about the interior. The persons who took seats on regular tickets numbered probably 500. Three men who tried to disturb the speaker by hissing were ejected.

One man had gained access to a box by paying $1 for a platform ticket. He remained quiet till shortly before 10 o'clock when he left the box and got out of the building. Almost immediately after he went from the box a thin line of smoke was noticed by a few to arise from a point where the man had been sitting. People in the immediate vicinity arose in excitement. A moment later the smoke suddenly thickened to a dense column and there was a stampede for the door.

Mr. Blake, who was speaking at the time, remained perfectly cool. Raising his arm towards the people who were running, he said: "Don't leave. It is only a little smoke and won't hurt you."

Someone cried, "Dynamite," and three policemen rushed over to the box, which was situated in the southeast corner of the auditorium. The policemen found an ordinary rocket bomb which had been filled with powder and had burned itself out. It had apparently been arranged in an old umbrella and brought in the hall concealed thus. The bomb was a blue-colored pasteboard affair.

The meeting had been called to tender a reception to Mr. Blake and to raise funds for the McCarthy section of the Irish party. Mr. John Walsh, chairman of the City Council of the Irish Federation of America, introduced Judge Daly as the presiding officer of the evening. In doing so he stated that Mayor Gilroy had accepted an invitation to preside, but at the last moment had declined for the reason that he was called away from the city. Among those on the platform was Hon. F. W. Glen, who was a colleague of Mr. Blake in the Canadian Parliament. Judge Daly paid a high tribute to Mr. Blake, speaking of him as one who had made great sacrifices for the Irish Nationalists' cause and whose commission commended itself to everyone who had the good of the Irish people at heart.

Mr. Blake was warmly received by the audience. He said it gave him peculiar pleasure to have at last the opportunity of addressing a body of fellow Irishmen and women, assembled in the city of New York which, he believed, contained the largest aggregate of those claiming Irish birth or descent of any place. He continued in part as follows:

"It would take a practised orator to do what I am about to attempt and I don't set up to be an orator. I am but a plain man, capable of saying plain things in a plain way to plain people like myself, and what I have to try to do is to bring before you in one short address something of the past, something of the present and something of the future of the movement. I believe that we are at this moment arrived at a very critical period in the great struggle in which we have been engaged for so long a period.

"It may do us good to take stock of the situation, to see how we have stood, how we stand, and to see how we expect to stand and by what steps we propose to advance. Now, let me bring before you some of those facts which ought to bear upon our estimate of the situation and our view of the duty of the future. It must be borne in mind that during the last half century Ireland's population has been diminishing with a steadiness and rapidity that is truly appalling. Half a century ago there were 8,175,000 people on the island. In 1891 there were 4,700,000, a loss of nearly 8,500,000, absolutely independent of the natural increase of population altogether.

"Meantime, while this unexampled depopulation was taking place, the population of the neighboring island of Great Britain has been rapidly and steadily increasing, and the result is a great absolute and a still greater relative reduction of our strength, measuring that strength by population as compared with the island of Great Britain. The net result is that in 1841 we had one-third the population of the United Kingdom and that to-day we have about one eighth of the population of the Kingdom.

"Terribly misgoverned, over taxed, Ireland could not have been expected to make progress in comparison with the sister island. Let me say one thing with reference to those whom seem disposed, I believe, to a more forcible programme for the gaining of Ireland's rights and who despair of the constitutional movement. Let me remind them of another obvious fact, that the resources of the undisciplined strength of the people have enormously increased with the invention of weapons of precision, and modern tactics have altogether changed the methods of armies struggling for supremacy."

The speech was warmly applauded, and afterwards a subscription list was opened and over $3,000 was subscribed.

It was feared that violence might be offered to Mr. Blake or members of the committee when they left the building, but sufficient police protection was on hand, however, to prevent any demonstration. The several gangs of men did not disperse until Mr. Blake was safely on his way in a Fourth avenue car to the residence of Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet.

GOING TO ENGLAND.

The Premier to be Sworn in as a Privy Councillor—Capital Gossip.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—A prominent politician who was here to-day confirms the recent report that Sir John Thompson is preparing to leave for England. It is stated that the Premier will be accompanied on this trip by Senator Sanford, of Hamilton, who has been here for a couple of days past. A reporter was unable to ascertain at the Department of Justice what day the Premier would sail. His departure would no doubt depend upon public business. The politician referred to says that Sir John and Mr. Sanford will be away until about the end of November. During his stay in England the Premier will be sworn in a member of the Privy Council. He has not been in England since that honor was conferred upon him. The same politician stated that Parliament will meet early in February. He said that he had been so informed on good authority. It is understood that Senator Sanford's family will accompany him to England. Sir John's departure will put an end for the present to all talk about opening Cardwell and Lisgar.

Mr. Magee, of the Fisheries Department, who was appointed by Order-in-Council to take evidence as to the alleged exorbitant ocean freight rates on cattle, has communicated with the various steamship companies, and they have all expressed their readiness to give evidence whenever the commissioner is ready to hear it. Mr. F. O. Robson, of the Dominion Live Stock Association, whose reply was delayed owing to his absence from Montreal, has written to say that he thinks the investigation had better be postponed until after the close of navigation.

G. F. Blackstock, Q.C., of Toronto, is in town in connection with a large company of English and French capitalists, who are preparing to tender for the construction of the Pacific cable. He had an interview with Hon. Mr. Bowell in reference to the matter.

A scheme is on foot to build an electric railway from Aylmer to Ottawa, a distance of nine miles.

W. A. Plummer, of Sault Ste. Marie, and Mr. MacDonnell, M.P. for Algoma, are here on business with the Government in regard to water privileges on the St. Lawrence.

The King's Daughters.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—The second triennial convention of King's Daughters and Sons opened here yesterday. Elizabeth M. Tilley, of London, the Dominion secretary, presided. Miss A. M. Browne, the Ontario secretary, Toronto, and other provincial secretaries, and Mrs. Marion Bottone, New York, the international president, were among those present. Lady Aberdeen, who is a member of the order, sent a letter of regret at being unable to attend.

A Blaze in Collingwood.

COLLINGWOOD, Oct. 18.—A fire broke out in the stables of the Toronto House and before it could be got under control the stables, the rear part of the hotel, two cottages and several piles of lumber and shingles were destroyed. Wilson Bros., who owned the lumber, lose about $600. No insurance. Mr. Cook, of the Toronto House, loses about $3,000. Insured for $1,800.

LYNCHERS SHOT DOWN

They Attempted to Take a Criminal From Officers of the Law.

A DESPERATE RIOT ENSUES

Militia Protect the Prisoner From the Bloodthirsty Crowd and Receive Orders to Fire—Three of the Mob Killed and Several Wounded.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 18.—In the criminal court at Washington court house yesterday Jasper Dolby, the negro, who assaulted Mrs. Mary C. Bird a week ago, confessed the crime and was sentenced to the penitentiary for twenty years. An attempt to lynch the prisoner had been feared and the court house and jail, which form parts of one building, were surrounded with militia.

As darkness came on a crowd of 1,000 people surrounded the building, yelling "Lynch him, lynch him!"

Finally some one threw a stone, which struck a soldier in the breast. Then Col. Colt, of this city, whose anger was aroused, addressed the people. He told them not to repeat the offence.

"If you want to injure anyone," said he, "hit me and not those young men," and, with hat uplifted, he walked out into the crowd. The crowd gathered around him, but not a man lifted his hand to strike the officer.

As the darkness increased, the crowd surged closer and closer to the court house steps. Col. Colt addressed them again, but they would not listen to him. He shouted that he would have to order the soldiers to fire if they did not fall back, but on they came and finally the order to fire was given. Many were seen to fall and the mob fled like a lot of frightened sheep. The following were killed:

Smith Welch, 18 years old, son of a grocer; shot in the head and abdomen.

Jesse Juty, 25 years old; shot in breast and abdomen.

Mack Johnson, of Williamsburg, shot in bowels.

Eight others were wounded, three seriously.

A CANADIAN COPYRIGHT.

Frederick Daldys Replies to Mr. Lancefield of Hamilton.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The Times of the 11th inst. printed a long letter from Richard Lancefield, dated at the public library in Hamilton, Canada, attacking Frederick Daldys' statements as to the Canadian copyright. The statements were contained in a letter to the Times of last May 3. Daldys now replies at length, contending that the copyright Canada offers is a mockery.

Lancefield complained that Canadian publishers cannot require the copyright of British authors, because the United States publishers buy the Canadian market with the American.

Daldys retorts: "Why does not the Canadian publisher come forward first and buy both markets? It is all a matter of commercial competition. I regret that American copyright of British authors is jeopardized by the apprehension of our allowing Canadian printers to re-print copyrighted books with the authors' sanction."

Daldys finally appeals to Lancefield, who is proud of imperial unity, to advocate copyright unity.

Montreal Police Investigation.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—At yesterday's session of the Montreal police investigation committee Andrew Cullen, chief of the Montreal detective force, was placed on the stand and asked to explain the system pursued in the force. Cullen is a shrewd Irishman who served for many years in the Irish constabulary and the lawyers found it pretty hard to get any admissions out of him. He admitted, however, that the force was entirely too small for a city of the size of Montreal. There were only eight detectives altogether and they had to cover work over the whole district. Cullen produced the books of the department, which showed that the system in vogue was very antiquated.

Mgr. Satolli in Quebec.

QUEBEC, Oct. 18.—Mgr. Satolli was entertained at dinner in the Grand Seminary dining room yesterday, after which he visited the Ursuline and Grey nunnery convents, where addresses were read and appropriate hymns sung. In the evening a controversial debate on theology was rendered before him by his former pupils in Rome at Laval University. He officiated at an evening service at the Basilica. He left by special train this morning for St. Anne de Beaupre.

Attempted to End His Life.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 18.—John Askin, who is employed in the post office here as delivery clerk, attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a very dull knife. Drs. Ashbaugh and Samson were immediately called and after examining the wound declared that it would not be fatal. Askin has been drinking heavily lately and seemed to be laboring under the delusion that his wife was seeking to get him into difficulty with the post office officials.

Heavy Floods in Quebec.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—The inhabitants of Lake St. John Valley have suffered severely during the last week from exceptionally heavy floods. Rain has been incessant for eight days. Bridges and even buildings have been carried away. The damage will reach two hundred thousand dollars. As the bulk of the farmers in this district belong to the poorest class of settlers, great distress is expected during the winter.

Lewis Will Come Back.

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 18.—It is reported that Lewis, the hotel porter, who was arrested with the Grand Trunk conductors, charged with defrauding the company, and who afterwards skipped, has consented to come back and give evidence in the case.

Dundas Will Vote on the By-law.

DUNDAS, Ont., Oct. 18.—At a meeting of the Dundas council it was decided to submit a by-law to the ratepayers of the town asking them to vote $35,000 bonus to the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway to run their line through the town.

HILL TALKS OF TARIFF

New York's Senator Makes a Strong Defence of the Wilson Bill.

WHY REPUBLICANS ARE SORE

Contrary to Their Expectations the Move in the Direction of Tariff Reform is Meeting With the Approval of Manufacturers--A Boom in Raw Materials.

GLOVERVILLE, N.Y., Oct. 18.—Senator Hill made the first extended reference to the new tariff bill in his speech at a big Democratic mass meeting here last night. He said:

"I desire to emphasize the point that the reduction of duties in the present tariff are so reasonable and conservative that the wages of a single workingman in the country need not be lessened. The only disturbance which the enactment of this bill has created is among our Republican friends who are "disturbed" because the bill has not destroyed business, injured manufactures and diminished wages. They predicted these dire results and their predictions have not been fulfilled. They are annoyed and disappointed that the country gives evidence on every hand of returning prosperity; they are annoyed that the country refuses to be panic-stricken, and they are disgusted that the people propose to give the new tariff bill a fair and impartial trial. They hoped for the passage of an extreme measure that would imperil the industries of the nation, but they have hoped in vain. They discover that our manufacturers are delighted with the prospect of free and freer raw materials, especially the boom of free wool, and they are indignant that wool does not rapidly decline in price as they assumed it would.

"The McKinley bill raised the duties upon wool, but wool was cheaper thereafter than before, and since the passage of the present bill, in which wool has been placed on the free list, wool has not declined in price, but maintains an upward tendency. These facts speak volumes in favor of the Democratic policy of using the tariff for public rather than private purpose, and not attempting directly to regulate prices by tariff laws, but leaving prices to be controlled by the natural laws of trade by the great question of supply and demand. In this connection permit me to observe that the new duty placed upon raw sugar does not seem to have enhanced its price in the market, but the price continues about the same as before the passage of the present bill. This illustrates how idle it is to seek to affect prices by statute to any great extent for a long period of time.

"In speeches which I have had the honor of making in other campaigns I have always advocated the policy of adjusting necessary tariff duties, so that they would represent the difference in wages paid in this and in other countries, and I adhere to that policy still. That was all that any workingman ever asked, and all that manufacturers could reasonably expect.

"They have always insisted that they should be placed on an equality with foreign manufacturers by reason of the larger wages paid here than elsewhere, and it gives me pleasure to state that the present bill recognizes the wise policy of this discrimination, and I assert as a fact that there is no manufactured article upon which the duty has been reduced under this bill, upon which there is not still left thereon a duty sufficient to represent the difference in wages paid between this and other countries. If that be so, and I challenge a contradiction of the fact, then the present bill may well be deemed in these particulars to be a fair and reasonable bill, under which no industrial interest will suffer. There is no use, then, anywhere, for the cutting down of wages, and no reason for longer attributing any present business depression to the radical features of the present tariff bill. That bill benefits the consumers of the country by affording them some measures of relief and at the same time it enables their wages to be paid and allows manufacturers to make compensatory profits on their actual investments. More than this no good citizen has a right to demand and no congress could consistently grant."

He Ran His Own House.

ESCANABA, Mich., Oct. 18.—Two woodsmen named Burns and Mercy were shot and killed in a house of bad repute in Rapid River. Burns and Mercy entered the house and wanted to run it to suit themselves, but the proprietor objected and killed them with a rifle.

Also Over a Woman.

SEDALIA, Mo., Oct. 18.—George W. Dixon was shot and killed by S. T. Lupe, owner of the Sedalia elevator. The trouble arose over Lupe's alleged intimacy with Dixon's wife. Lupe is in custody.

Heavy Snow Storms in Germany.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—Heavy snow storms have prevailed in Posen, Bromberg, Mayence and other districts in Poland and Germany, and great damage to wharfage and shipping has resulted at Lueback and Copenhagen from a northerly gale and high seas.

A British Bye-Election.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—A parliamentary election was held in Berkenhold yesterday to fill the seat left vacant by Viscount Bury's succession to the peerage. The Conservatives held the seat, returning Elliot Lees, with 6,149 votes against 6,033 cast for Lover, a Radical.

Armenian Shot by a Turk.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 18.—John Sommonian, an Armenian, was shot four times by Chabourn Chansonian, a Turk, yesterday. Sommonian is dying in the hospital and his assailant is under arrest. The men were enemies.

If you wish to secure a certain and speedy result, when using Ayer's Sarsaparilla, be careful in observing the rules of health, or the benefit may be retarded. A fair and persistent trial of this medicine never fails, when the directions are followed.

Doctors say it is the Best.

GENTLEMEN,—Last July, I took Congestion of the Lungs and was in bed for four weeks. I was very weak and could not speak above a whisper. Dr. Lawson, of Hamiota, attended me and sent a bottle of Milburn's Emulsion. It soon restored my voice and health.

ALF. SMITH, Wheatlands, Man.

H., G. and B. Railway Opened.

HAMILTON, Oct. 18.—The Hamilton, Grimsby and Beamsville Electric Railway was formerly opened yesterday and three special trains left the city conveying hundreds of invited guests, including the municipal representatives, shareholders of the road and others, to Grimsby. At the latter place refreshments were served and speeches of congratulatory nature were made by a number of prominent men. To-day the road opens for general traffic.

Collapse of a Bridge.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Oct. 18.—A portion of the false work located at the south wing of the Louisville and Jeffersonville bridge, between piers 3 and 4, fell with a crash yesterday, injuring three men, one of whom is believed to be hurt fatally. The injured men were conveyed to the Louisville side, where they were taken to the bridge office and their injuries dressed. There were twenty men at work on the structure at the time.

Big Blaze in Madoc.

The Ameer Reported Dead.

A West Oxford Farmer Narrowly Escapes Premature Burial—The Causes of His Threatened Fate and Lucky Escape.

INGERSOLL, Oct. 8.—W. H. Bailey of West Oxford township, claims to have only narrowly escaped premature burial a short time ago. He had had kidney disease for four years back and so badly at times that he was completely laid up. Many doctors treated him, but their treatment, in Mr. Bailey's opinion, made him worse rather than better. His escape from a premature grave was affected by the use of the infallible Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes of these cured completely. Mr. Bailey claims to be able now to do a bigger day's work than his twenty-four-year-old son.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

EXPRESS ROBBERS CAUGHT.

Two of Them Arrested With the Spoils in Their Possession.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—President E. C. Weir, of the Adams Express Company, confirms the reports that two men had been arrested who were undoubtedly concerned in the recent train robbery on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad at Cherry Run, W. Va. He added that the robbers got less than $20,000 in cash, as it has been learned that several packages supposed to contain easily negotiable securities and cash contained in reality drafts with bills of lading attached, which can be stopped and after a little duplicated. The company has over thirty detectives engaged on the case.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Oct. 18.—Officer Beck noticed a man acting in a rather suspicious manner near the Baltimore and Ohio depot. He tried to board express train No. 9 westbound with two satchels. The man answered the description of the one who was implicated in the robbery of the express car at Quantico, Va., last week. As soon as the officer attempted to arrest the man he started to run but was soon caught.

He was taken to the station-house, and upon being searched $1,553 was found hidden in two woollen stockings. The sum of $623 was in notes and $630 in silver; there was one silver watch and one gold one, a lot of pawn tickets and three silver pocket-books. A fine Colt's navy revolver was in his pocket. There were forty three cartridges in his pocket.

A memorandum showed where the entire boodle had been divided between the men. The police are confident they have one of the robbers.

A special from Cherry Run, W. Va., says: An unknown man was arrested near here answering the description of one of the men implicated in the Aquia Creek train robbery. He was as active as an athlete and caused considerable trouble before being overpowered. He carried a 44 calibre, self-acting revolver, and held up a number or men, but was finally arrested by George Spangler, a Western Maryland Railroad contractor, after slightly wounding him and several other men. A pal, who carried a satchel, escaped through a deep ravine in the mountain and has not been seen since. Both men were well dressed.

Ignored Their Passports.

DETROIT, Oct. 18.—Immigratian Inspector Batthey arrested three Chinamen, who arrived on the Grand Trunk train at Port Huron from Canada. Two of the Chinamen carry passports and say they are naturalized citizens of Canada, and are entitled to all the privileges of a Britisher while traveling. Chin Ling says he is a member of the firm of A. Quong Huy & Co., of Montreal, and Sang Weh says he is a member of the firm of On Gin Hong & Co. The arrest may lead to an exchange of diplomatic letters between Washington and London.

Mr. Foster Arrives in England.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Hon. Geo. Foster, Canadian Minister of Finance, has arrived here. He will rest for a couple of days before beginning negotiations with British financial institutions for the coming year. The arrangements will include the floating of a small loan to replace the floating indebtedness on which a much higher rate of interest is being paid.

Fire in Listowel.

LISTOWEL, Ont., Oct. 18.—Yesterday fire broke out in a frame building at Main and Eaglan streets, owned and occupied by A. Morrow as a dwelling, and partially occupied by Mrs. Gibson as a grocery. The building is badly damaged; no insurance. Mrs. Gibson's stock, considerably damaged by removal, is insured in Perth Mutual for $700.

Haldimand Patrons.

CAYUGA, Ont., Oct. 18.—A meeting of the Patrons of Industry was held here yesterday. It was determined to defend the protest that has been brought against Mr. Senn, and to support Mr. Beck, of South Cayuga, in the coming contest for member in the House of Commons.

A Boy Killed by a Train.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Oct. 18.—A boy about 10 years of age named Tommy Day, son of Fred Day, an employe of the Rathbun Co. here, while attempting to cross the track in front of the incoming mail train, was struck in the head by the engine and fatally injured.

THE RULING MARKETS.

TORONTO, Oct. 18, 1894.

Canadian barley in Oswego is held at 61.

The demand for western barley is very light. Some figuring is going on in Canada at Buffalo at 64c, but maisters, as a rule, are waiting for a decline.

On the street here 200 bushels of wheat sold at 53 for white and 51 for red; 3,000 of barley at 44 to 48 1-2, and 400 of oats at 31 1-2 to 32. Outside prices were nominally unchanged.

Wheat was weak in Chicago during the greater portion of the day, but closed firm. Corn was strong at the close and 1-8c higher. Oats were strong.

Most of the 20 cars of Canada lambs on sale at the East Buffalo live stock market had not been disposed of at the close of the market. The choice lots were generally held at $4.30 to $4.35 and sales of good Canadas were at $4 to $4.15. The close was weak with but limited demand.

The London stock markets are still depressed by the political situation abroad. Americans were about the best market, closing at the top, but this was merely a reflection from the New York side.

For the rather decided recovery in New York stocks, there were two causes. One was the published interview with President Roberts of the Pennsylvania; the othe. a formal reduction in sterling posted rates. Mr. Roberts' views were cheerful on the whole and were repdered somewhat more emphatic from the fact that previous utterances from the same authority have not been at all encouraging. Sugar certificates led the early upward movement, advancing a full point further, at the top figure the usual expert profit taking began and the price fell back below the opening. The general market closed a little heavy, professional speculators for the fall using the Baltimore and Ohio dividend reduction with some effect.

Don't commit suicide on account of your "incurable" blood disease. The sensible thing for you to do is to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. If that fails, why, then—keep on trying, and it will not fail. The trouble is, people get discouraged too soon. "Try, try, try again."

SWEET BROWN EYES.

How They Were Made to Sparkle, Wink and Water.

The conductor knew the man in the rear seat, and when the tickets had all been punched sat down beside him. They rode in silence for some time. Then the man in the rear seat asked abruptly, "What's the matter?"

The conductor took his left leg off the right knee and crossed the right one over the left. "I keep thinking about a man that travels with me sometimes," he answered.

"What about him?"

"It's what he told me about his wife. She ran away, you know, and he's trying to find her. He says she's a pretty woman, with large, soft, brown eyes, and a sweet, tender mouth."

The woman in front of him had large, brown eyes, but they were hard and cold, and her mouth was very scornful.

"He asked me to be on the lookout for her."

The woman in front seemed to be counting the telegraph poles along the road.

"It breaks me all up when I see him, and he says, so sort of despairing, 'So, you haven't run across her yet, have you, old man?' and then it keeps running in my mind all the time what I am to say to say to the woman if I find her."

The woman in front moved uneasily, then tried to count the cattle in a pasture that they passed.

"What is it?" asked the man in the rear seat.

"You won't forget, now, will you?" he'll say, putting his hand on my shoulder. 'You're to give her my love, you know, and tell her that it has been hers all the time. Tell her that the other fellow may tire of her, but I never shall. Tell her that if she will come home she'll find me waiting for her, and trying to keep things the way she'd like to see them,' and then he'd clear his throat and turn away with that wistful look on his face.

"One time he told me to tell her that he was saving up to buy a new carpet for the sitting room, because she didn't like the blue one, and last time he said to tell her that he'd planted flower seeds, because he knew she loved a garden, and then he always tells me that I am to know her by those soft, brown eyes and sweet, pretty mouth."

"He's a fool," said the man in the rear seat, bluntly.

"Of course he is," assented the conductor, "though a smart fellow otherwise; but he's clear crazy on that point, for there never was a woman lived worth loving like that."

They were nearing a station and the conductor went out on the platform.

The man in the rear seat took up his newspaper and began to read.

A change had come over the face of the woman in front. She had a sweet, tender mouth, that was trembling with emotion, and she was vainly trying to see the landscape with a pair of soft brown eyes, suffused with tears.

A Remarkable Event

An event which has been the talk of the town for some weeks is the cure of Mr. Edward White, whose sufferings from Salt Rheum (Eczema) were well known. Mr. White's statement is as follows:

For 12 years previous to the last few months I have been a sufferer of the worst kind from Salt Rheum. I tried twelve different doctors, besides many patent medicines but received no benefit, but gradually became worse. Last January I was advised to try B. B. B. by the postmaster here. I soon perceived a decided change for the better, and it only took six bottles to make a complete cure.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the best makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

The Jessie Alexander Concert.

The committee in charge of the Jessie Alexander entertainment report the sale of tickets far in advance of their expectations. In addition to those announced in Saturday's paper to take part are Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, town, and Miss Scheak, Toronto. The chorus now will number about sixty voices. They are practicing twice a week and doing good work. On and after Saturday the reserved seat plan will be at the Peterborough Bookstore. This concert promises, both in numerical attendance and excellence of programme, to be one of the very best entertainments of the season.

Dirty.

Well, we should say so. From the cellar to the garret. With the dust of the summer and the dust of the flies everything is apt to be a little dirty just now, especially the wall paper and window blinds. We offer a remedy for that dirty appearance that comes early in the fall. A new fresh paper and a new set of blinds is the simplest and finest remedy. It will make your home look like new, and give a refreshing appearance to everything around. See the beautiful stock all this month at a genuine discount. A Leading Artiste of the Age.

At the American Legation, in Vienna, Miss Marie Louise Bailey, who appears in the opera house, here, on Friday night, upon the invitation of Mrs. Col. Grant, gave a soiree in the parlours of the legation. Her programme was a circle of the modern and classical schools. Together with a number of high personalities, there were present several of the greatest critics of the Danube city, who were enthusiastic in their praise of the performance of the talented young lady. After the soiree, Mrs. Grant presented Miss Bailey with a beautiful present. Of Miss Bailey, Carl Reinecke, director, Gewandhaus orchestra, says:—"I predict a grand future for Miss Bailey, and that she will take the first place among the leading artists of the age."

MATRIMONIAL.

The Gray—Emmerson Nuptials.

The residence of Thos. Emmerson, Ashburnham, was the scene of a very pleasant event last evening when his daughter, Hannah Georgina, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. R. M. Gray, assistant inspector of the Canadian General Electric Company. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Torrance. The bride looked very pretty in a dress of white cashmere trimmed with lace. The bridesmaid was Miss Lena Emmerson, sister of the bride. They both carried handsome bouquets of cream and pink roses. Mr. W. Lannin assisted the groom during the ceremony. The ceremony being over, a wedding supper was served, after which a pleasant evening was spent. Mr. and Mrs. Gray take up there residence on Rubidge street amid the good wishes and congratulations of their many friends. A number of handsome and well selected presents was received.

Reeves—Dickson Nuptials.

On Thursday, Oct. 18th, Rev. A. C. Reeves of the Presbyterian church, Lakefield, was united in marriage to Miss Bella Dickson, eldest daughter of Mr. Stephen Dickson, of Calabogie, Renfrew county. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hugh Taylor, of Castleford. The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful presents. After a short bridal journey, the happy pair will take up residence in Lakefield, where the many friends of Rev. Mr. Reeves, who has made many of them during his short ministration in Lakefield, will extend their hearty congratulations and wishes that Mr. and Mrs. Reeves may be prospered with all happiness.

The Fraser—Sperry Nuptials.

The residence of Mr. Anson Sperry, 207 Water street at six o'clock last night was the scene of a pretty domestic marriage, Mr. David Archibald Fraser, of Norwood, son of Mr. Thos. Frazer, Division Court Clerk, and senior partner of the hardware firm of Frazer & Fo-ter, having been united in marriage to Miss Nellie Sperry, daughter of Mr. Anson Sperry, town, and organist of the Methodist church, Norwood. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. R. Young. The bride's assistant was her sister, Miss Bertha Sperry, and Mr. Lewis Kirkpatrick supported the groom. The affair was quiet, only a few relatives of the parties being present. The bride received a large number of beautiful presents, among which were a gold watch and chain, the gift of the groom. After the usual banquet, the happy pair went by the C. P. R. midnight express to Norwood, where they doubtless received a most hearty reception, for Mr. Fraser is one of Norwood's most enterprising and respected young business men, and Mrs. Fraser has won many friends during her term of organist of the Methodist church in that village.

THE OUTFALL SEWER AFFAIR.

A Special Session of the Council to Consider the Situat on—The Council Meets and Goes into Committee of the Whole — And Conduct, Private Deliberations.

A special meeting of the council was held last night. There were present Mayor Kendry, Messrs. White, Best, Hall, Dawson, Sutton, Mason and Brady.

The Mayor stated that he had called the meeting on account of the action of the court in issuing an interim injunction, which compelled a cessation of the work upon the sewer, and he would like the council to suggest some line of action to meet the emergency.

On motion of Messrs. Hall and Dawson, the council went into committee of the whole, and adjourned to hold a special session in the clerk's office below, leaving the reporters stranded, and the ratepayers who had assembled, out in the cold.

Mr. Edwards, town solicitor, and Mr. Edmison, solicitor for North Monaghan, were present, and, as well as Mr. W. H. Moore, Mr. Grant, contractor, and Mr. Scott, overseer, were present. All except Mr. Edwards were excluded during the earlier deliberations of the committee. Subsequently the others were admitted: only the press was left out.

As a matter of policy the deliberations of the committee were not divulged, it being considered unpolitic to prejudice any legal course the committee might decide upon by making it public. It was understood, however, that the deliberations took the direction of trying to bring about an amicable solution of the legal muddle. A committee of the town council will hold a conference with the council of North Monaghan to-day.

At considerable expense the manager of the opera house has secured a one-night engagement for Peterborough with Miss Marie Louise Bailey, the celebrated pianiste to His Majesty the King of Saxony. This accomplished musician will be heard here on Friday evening next, Oct. 19th, and the music-loving public of Peterborough should appreciate the opportunity by giving a liberal patronage. Miss Bailey's talents as a superior pianiste are undoubted and a treat is in store for those who attend. The prices will be 25c, 50c, 75c and $1. The plan is now open at the Street Railway office.

THE DEATHLESS ARMY'S GRAND OLD MAN.

HALLELUJAH RECEPTION OF GENERAL BOOTH.

At the Station—On the Streets—At Central Park—The Mayor's Address of Welcome—The General's Brief Acknowledgment—A Big Event in Local Army Circles.

Every soldier of the Salvation Army—lads and lassies—recruits and veterans—was on the qui vive this morning, in busy preparation for the fitting reception of General Booth, the head, front, brains and spirit of the Salvation Army, who, with his staff, was to arrive on the noonday train from Lindsay.

There was a grand rally at the barracks, and as the hour of noon approached, the drums beat, the banner was flung to the soft autumnal breeze, and, led by the band, a large procession of soldiers marched to the Grand Trunk station. The soldiers were formed two deep, facing inwards. At the yard end of the double line were carriages ready for the distinguished guests, and at the track end was stationed the excellent band of the local corps. The entire platform was occupied by a packed mass of citizens by the thousands. The train being a few minutes late, the time was filled in by inspiring music furnished by the band. As the roar of the whistle of the incoming train was heard in the distance Mr. Station Agent Hayden had his work cut out for him in keeping the crowd that overflowed the platform from getting on to the track, and to his success is perhaps due the fact that the ambulance was not needed. The General and his staff occupied the rear coach of the train, the parlour coach, and as the strong, rugged leonine face, framed with snowy hair and beard, and the somewhat stooped, cloaked figure of the great General descended the steps to the platform, followed by his staff, a hearty feu de joie, was fired—the roll of the big drum, the rattling rat tat of his fellow, and the braying of the horns joining in the great shout of welcome.

General Booth's face when in repose has a somewhat stern look, which relaxed into the sunniest of smiles, when bowing low he acknowledged the hearty welcome of his loyal soldiers in Peterborough. The General and his party ran the agreeable gauntlet of hearty hallelujahs as they passed through the lines from the railway coach to his carriage. The carriage he occupied also contained the spruce figure of Mayor Kendry, who was present in person on behalf of the corporation, to extend greetings and welcome to the greatest and most successful of modern religious tacticians and commanders. Among the large crowd at the station were all classes of religious creed and adherence, and conspicuous were the figures of several of the ministers.

The General's carriage and those containing his staff and distinguished Army officers, set out and escorted by the "Army," the band playing its liveliest, proceeded to the Central Park by way of George street. All along the route of march the streets were densely packed with spectators, eager to catch a glimpse of "the general."

Marching up George street the long procession debouched upon Central Park. A raised platform had been erected just east of the drill shed and around this the soldiers of the Army grouped themselves, while the General and his staff, together with a number of the principal officers present and the Mayor, Rev. Mr. Young, Rev. Mr. MacWilliams and Dr. Fife took seats upon the platform.

Upon the ascension of the General to the platform the assembled soldiers fired a volley of considerable magnitude, and the hundreds who had by this time gathered in the park applauded the distinguished old man to the echo.

The proceedings were opened by the singing of a Salvation hymn, after which the General's aide de camp, Colonel Lawlor, offered up a most impressive prayer, while the multitude stood with uncovered heads.

Mayor Kendry then read the following address:

General William Booth, Commander-in-Chief of the Salvation Army.

I desire to bid you, on behalf of the citizens of this town, a cordial welcome to Peterborough. Your name has for some years been a familiar one here, as it has been in all parts of the world, and we are pleased to have an opportunity of welcoming you to our town.

The work you have succeeded in accomplishing bears testimony to the ability, zeal and energy you possess, and establishes your claim upon the respect and goodwill of the people, especially as your labours have been directed to uplifting mankind and making the world better. The Salvation Army, of which you are the father as well as the Commander-in-chief, has, under your direction, spread throughout the world, and wherever its flag floats those who most need the aid of a helping hand have reason to be thankful to you for sending such an agency to give them the help they need.

We have seen, too, that your zeal for humanity, inspired by the Spirit of Him who proclaimed the Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man, has not been confined to one sphere of action, and your plans for the elevation of the fallen, the care of the neglected and the aid of the poorest in large cities, especially in your own great city across the sea, have won world-wide admiration.

To give help and encouragement to the wretched, and to carry the Gospel to the people of all nations, is a noble work, and how much has been accomplished by the great agency you established sixteen years ago, the wonderful record of the Salvation Army gives ample testimony.

We hope that you will be pleased with your visit to Canada and this town, and we feel sure that your inspection of this division will be satisfactory.

When the General rose to reply the silence was most impressive. He stated at the outset that he was too weak to attempt to deliver any remarks of a lengthened nature, and as he intended speaking during the afternoon and the evening also, it would give all ample opportunity of hearing him. Still, his reception, both at the station and in the park, had been of so cordial a nature that he could not refrain from expressing his thanks for the same, and also to say a few words, if only in acknowledgment of the address of the Mayor and council.

Since his arrival in Halifax and since he first set foot on Canadian soil, his march into the interior had been a succession of greetings of the most cordial nature. Every point at which he had stopped had been the scene of unparalleled receptions, and the people of Canada held a warm place in his heart.

In speaking of his great work, the General stated that years ago a revelation came to him to the effect that in the hands of God he had the capability of undertaking and carrying to a successful issue a grand idea for the reclamation of the lost. How well he had succeeded, all knew, yet not unto himself was the glory, but unto the Almighty. Regarding himself, all he could say was that he was sorry he had not been able to live up to the standard, which the Almighty had set for him. Concerning the great organization, of which he was the commander, he wished to state, that in his opinion, it was the best form of religion in existence. If he thought that there was any better, he would belong to it. Still every man, he believed, had the same opinion regarding his own church and it was a poor man, indeed, who wouldn't. The creed of the Salvation Army was a simple one. They were on the look out for the longest ladder possible. A ladder that would reach into the lowest depths of sin and up to the foot of the throne of God, if possible.

The open air meeting was dismissed by a short prayer from Herbert Booth, after which the General, his staff and the members of the Army present adjourned for luncheon.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock an immense concourse of people had gathered in the George street church to hear an address from the General.

At five o'clock a banquet will be held in the armoury and the General will speak on his great social problem during the evening in the same place.

Another Voice From Smith.

SMITH, July 7, 1892.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, and after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

How Slate is Mined.

The manner in which slate is mined and cut up for purposes to which it is applied is a process that is known to only a few people in this country, its principal sources being in upper New England and eastern Pennsylvania. It is not taken out of shafts but is quarried out of big holes in the earth. Some time ago when the writer was at Bangor, Pa., he was invited to go down into one of these quarries, about 200 feet deep, and over-hand on a rope, but he declined the invitation, as I think most inexperienced persons would do. The slate is blasted out in huge blocks and is hoisted out by steam and turned over to the men who know how to reduce it to the proper size. Huge blocks of it are taken in hand by these workmen, who cut a notch into one end of each piece. Then they take a chisel and a mallet, and they are so skillful in directing their blows that they can split the blocks of slate in almost any way they please. If you watch the slab on which one of them is working you will see a little hair line running through it, and presently the block will fall apart on either side of this mark. The workman will make this line go straight through the middle or to either corner just as he likes. I do not know just how he does it, but he invariably accomplishes what he sets out to do.

The smaller pieces thus produced are taken in hand by another set of men, who split them up into sheets of the proper thickness for roofing slate. This they do with a long bladed instrument about the shape of a putty knife, but many times larger, and if you saw them do it you would marvel how they got the sheets only one inch thick and split it thirty-two times. The usual number of divisions is sixteen. These sheets are taken and cut into squares by machinery.

Wherever there are slate quarries you will find a great many Welshmen, for the best slaters come from Wales. Boys follow the trade of their fathers, and there are whole families and settlements who know no other means of earning a living.—New York Advertiser.

The British Regular Army.

The British regular army at the end of last year numbered 220,000 men of all ranks, which was about 3,000 above the "establishment." The reserves number 80,349 men, the militia 124,700, the yeomanry (volunteer cavalry) 10,400 and the volunteers 227,800. During 1893, 34,847 recruits joined the army. Of these 11,582 were 5 feet 7 inches in height or over, 11,215 measured 34 to 35 inches around the chest and 14,234 weighed 130 pounds and upward. These weights and measurements are a better average than in any other recent year.

NAPOLEON AS A CAPTIVE

LAST DAYS OF THE FALLEN CONQUERER AT ST. HELENA.

A British Doctor Who Accompanied "The Trampler" Talks—Bonaparte's Habit of Asking Questions—Opinions of the Great Soldier.

Contributors to Napoleonic history are the fashion. The century is going out profusely placarded with annals of a creature whom Lord Wolseley, in a recent article, declares was "a superlatively bad man, dishonest and untruthful, whose career embraces some serious mistakes in national policy, whose public life ended in disastrous defeat, and who died in prison and is yet so great a man that his name fills more pages in the world's solemn history than that of any other mortal." People never tire, apparently, of reading about this Corsican who revolutionized the Europe of his day, made a new France, and from its new people secured canonization.

It is only a few months since there was published in a leading monthly of the United States the diary of the secretary of the rear admiral (Cockburn) who conveyed the conquered warrior to St. Helena. There was enough new information about the man to justify its addition to history. But there was another diary keeper on board the same ship at the same time, and eighty-seven years ago he put his reminiscences, warm from the brain, into the compass of a little book for circulation among his friends. This writer was Dr. William Warden, surgeon of the man-of-war Northumberland. From his own account thus given, he was brought into closer social relations with the ex-emperor than was the fortune of the admiral's secretary. In his introduction he writes: "Circumstances connected with my profession gave me frequent opportunities of conversing with him and with the principal persons of his suite.

"As to his person, Bonaparte is of small stature, but admirably proportioned," says an account of him, written in 1809. "He is of a spare habit of body, yet robust and qualified to undergo the greatest hardships and fatigues. His complexion, like that of all the males of southern climates, is olive; his chin prominent; the lower part of his face thin and his forehead square and projecting."

On the day of his transfer to his floating prison, Dr. Warden describes him as wearing the uniform of a general of the French infantry—a green coat with white facings, and with the rest of the same color. His stockings were of white silk and his feet were covered with a handsome shoe, with gold oval buckles. His face was pale and unshaved and he had an air of weariness or dejection. His forehead and the top of his head were thickly covered with hair of a dark color. The head was large and of a singular flatness. The little hair on the back of his head was bushy and without the slightest showing of gray. The eyes were gray and in continual motion, turning quickly from one object to another. His teeth were good and well shaped, his neck short, his shoulders of fair proportion, and his entire figure, though having what the doctor calls a "Dutch fullness," was handsome. Later on, when the voyage was half over and the writer had had ample time to study his subject, he adds to his picture of the emperor by saying that his face was an uncommon one, large, full and pale, but not sickly. While in conversation there was no play of the muscles of the face except those close to the mouth; and to those at a distance his face as he talked seemed fixed and the forehead, which with Frenchmen is generally wrinkled, was in Bonaparte's case perfectly smooth. However inexpressive he might be in conversation, there was no distortion of feature. Sometimes, when he became unusually earnest, he gestured with his hand, but the doctor mischeviously insinuates that such display might reasonably be attributed to "the uncommon handsomeness of the hand."

Bonaparte was, according to Warden, an inveterate questioner. From the time he put his captive feet on the quarter deck of the Northumberland until he landed at St. Helena, nearly ten weeks afterwards, he was continually making inquiries about all sorts of subjects. Nothing seemed to escape his notice, nor did he hesitate to apply for information to anyone continually at hand, from midshipman to admiral. "He seldom or never omitted an opportunity of asking a question," is the testimony of the doctor, and "he made a most unexpected inquiry of our orthodox chaplain whether he was not a Puritan. I need not tell you what would be the reply, and you may conjecture, probably what might be the feelings of a gentleman clothed in canonical orders, and firm in canonical principles, when he was saluted with such an interrogatory."

"His conversation," continues the doctor, "at all times consisted of questions which never failed to be put in such a way as to prohibit a return of them. To answer one question by another, which frequently happens in common discourse, was not admissible with him. I can conceive that he was habituated to to this kind of colloquy when he sat upon such a throne as that which supported him, and before which no one spoke but when he commanded utterance: nor does he seem disposed to lay it aside when he sits in the cabin, stands in the gangway, or patrols the deck of a ship where he is subject to the control of its commander."

The long boats evoked from the emperor so many inquiries as to suggest the idea that he thought them "part of the naval apparatus peculiarly provided to prevent his escape from the island to which he was destined." His discontent manifested itself in continual inquiries as to the rate of the progress of the vessel. And these inquiries were daily made, as if the emperor were anxious to have his exile on land begin.

Sacred Rights of Property.

A curious fact has been brought to public notice in England by the conduct of Rev John Vallancy, perpetual curate of Rosliston, who, in the Burton County court, prosecuted the daughter of one of his parishioners for trespassing in "his" churchyard, and damaging "his" hay, by visiting her sister's grave and placing flowers thereon. For this outrage on the sacred rights of property he claimed damages to the amount of 1s 6d. He contended, says the New York Evening Post, that the churchyard was his private property, and that no one had a right to go into it without his permission. He cut the hay and stacked it in his yard, and had by a formal notice interdicted the defendant from damaging the crop by trimming the grass over her sister's grave, which had been done for three years. When the young lady persisted in visiting the grave he followed her, took hold of her, and, with a contemptuous remark upon the flowers which she had placed there, knocked them off the grave with his stick. The reverend suitor lost his case because he was only a perpetual curate. Had he been a rector he could have recovered. A London newspaper in commenting upon the case says: "By two sentimental fictions the churchyard is God's acre, and the church the national or the people's church. But in dry law God's acre is the incumbent's freehold, and the only right of the people in the 'national' churchyards is the right to be buried there. 'The rude forefathers of the hamlets' the 'village Hampdens,' and all the rest, when once laid to sleep, merely serve the purpose of enriching the parson's hay crop, and their posterity may only visit their graves subject to the permission and convenience of the lord of the soil."

Nobody expects to become really beautiful from the use of complexion beautifiers. All women require a tonic and nervine at some period of their lives. Whether suffering from nervousness, dizziness, faintness, displacement, catarrhal inflammation of the lining membranes, bearing-down sensations, or general debility, the "Prescription" reaches the origin of the trouble and corrects it. Guaranteed to benefit, or the money is returned.

TO MY GIRL.

If I should ask you to be mine,
What would you say?
Would you my proffered hand decline
And say me nay?

Or would you temporize, and say
Nor No nor Yes?
And have me, tortured by delays,
To try to guess?

Or would you tell me Yes to-day,
You little flirt,
And No to-morrow, just in play,
To see it hurt?

Or would you grant me happiness
For good and all,
And make me earnest answer Yes,
Without recall?

I wish you'd tell me, dear, the truth
Without a mask;
For if you promise Yes in sooth,
Perhaps I'd ask!

HAS NO SCIENTIFIC BASIS.

Vaccination Has, However, the Support of Incontestible Experience.

Ought we to continue to vaccinate if we cannot give a scientific why and wherefore for our work? asks the London Hospital. This question may be answered by asking another, or several others. Ought a baker to bake bread and his customers to eat it if he cannot give a scientific demonstration of the process of fermentation which takes place in the dough? Ought a farmer to sow corn who is not able to explain the chemico-physiological progress of the development of the radicle and the pulmule? The truth is—and we are almost ashamed to put such an elementary proposition into the pages of a scientific journal—that the facts and empiricism, arts and manufacturers, all take precedence of science in the order of human development. Whole generations of men—the majority, indeed, of mankind—have lived and worked and died without the consciousness that science was so much as possible. Science—the knowledge and comprehension of things in their essence and causes—is the latest of all human developments.

We must, then, do with vaccination as we do with opium. We ask of opium: What is its history? What has it done in medicine? And the answer is that of all substances which mankind has yet discovered it is the most indispensable for the beneficent work of the relief of human pain. Therefore, though we still lack a complete demonstration of the therapeutic modus operandi of opium, we continue to use it and shall probably go on doing so to the end of time. Similarly we ask of vaccination this question of questions: What has it done in the world? And the answer is that it has defeated in open conflict one of the dead liest enemies of mankind, and has put us on lines of investigation which may rob all pathogenic organisms of their terrors. If such should be the grand result, it is obvious that the mind of man, by how much it is delivered from ignoble bodily fears, by so much will it rise to greater and greater heights of boldness and intellectual achievement. This we can all see. But medical men, as custodians of the science as well as the art of healing, must constantly remember that vaccination and inoculation can never achieve these magnificent results until they are firmly established upon a basis of scientific reason, as well as upon a foundation of solid and unchallengeable fact.

Simple Explanation of Grip.

Medical writers make it clear why grip is so fatal. They tell of hemorraghic and pyæmic or septico-pyæmic results, with purulent and gangrenous inflamation of the lung tissues and frequent metastasis to other organs. One case of hemorraghes and hematomas in the muscular tissue, parenchymatous bleedings by diapedesis, pachymeningitis hemorrhagica interna, is mentioned. In many cases there is hyperæmia of the pia, also meningeal infiltration and suppurative meningitis and hemorrhage into the lateral ventricle, and very frequently lobar pneumonia.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Rheumatism is primarily caused by acidity of the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and thus cures the disease.

LOST THE POINT.

Even the Host of Stories Misses Fire When Awkwardly Told.

Last year while a certain distinguished English lady was traveling in this country she expressed astonishment at the vast fields of corn presented to her during a journey through Indiana and Illinois and she wondered what the Americans did with the enormous crop. To this a bright young American girl in the party answered: "We eat what we can and can what we can't." The witticism would have been lost upon her ladyship had it not been for the friendly offices of others in the party, who, by dint of labor, diagrams, chisels, etc., finally got her ladyship to see the point of the joke. Then her ladyship was so pleased she put it down in her note-book to spring it upon her friends at home. This is the way the witticism sounded when it was let loose at one of her ladyship's dinner parties: "In America, you know, they have so much maize that they eat what they can, and tin what they can't."

When the Knights Templars journeyed to San Francisco the most felicitous toast offered at their splendid banquet was in these words: "The ladies—God bless them! what would our Knights be without them?" An Englishman present was so delighted with the pleasantry—for the British adore punning—that when he got back to Australia he attempted to perpetrate the toast at a local banquet, and he wondered why there was no outburst of hiliarious applause when he arose solemnly and cried passionately: "The ladies—God bless them! what would our Knights Templars be without them?"

We have all heard of the German who (having been fooled by a joker who pointed to a church steeple and asked: "How is that for high?") immediately went home, called his wife out into the yard, and, pointing to a neighboring shot-tower, asked with ill-suppressed mirth: "How high vas dot?"—Chicago Record.

An Amusing Fight.

There were three of us in a wagon driving from Springdale, on the railroad, to Hunter's Hot Springs, says a writer in the Northwest Magazine. We had forded the sloughs that during the season of high water in the Yellowstone cut off the approaches to the bridge—the water filling the wagon box and taking the horses almost off their feet at times in the swirl of the current. One of the dogs from the hotel joined us on terra firma—a mild faced yellow cur with no fighting qualities. He was trotting along on the road a few rods ahead of the horses when there came loping across the open country a big coyote, making straight for him. Away went the dog and after him the wolf; then the wolf ran and the dog pursued, but as soon as the dog had overtaken his enemy he changed his mind about attacking him and turned back. Now the wolf gained conrage and took up the chase, running the yellow cur clear up to the porch of the hotel at the springs. The party in the team got a good deal of fun out of the novel turnabout hunt. Mendenhall, the landlord, whipped up the team and we bounded along at a tremendous pace, shouting "go it wolf" and "go it dog." The landlord yelled encouragement to Stub, the dog, but Stub had no mind for a tussle with the sharp-toothed, long-nosed brute, and was happy to gain the shelter of the hotel. The coyote trotted off across the hills. "What things a fellow will see when he hasn't his gun with him," remarked one of the men in the waggon.

A Brantford Compositor has Diabetes—He Drops 40 Pounds in Weight in a Short Time—How He Was Cured.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 15.—Thos Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier in this city, has seen some ups and downs in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr. Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six boxes worked a complete cure. Mr. Hazelhurst is to-day better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

THOSE GAY PARISIANS.

THE MOULIN ROUGE THEATRE AND THE SCENES WITHIN.

Sketch of a Famous Paris Resort—A Wild Scene of Revelry—How the Ability of the Dancers is Ganged—The High Kicker in Demand—Some of the Salaries Paid.

The Red Mill stands at the top of a narrow, hilly street, in a broad boulevard in the heart of one of the poor quarters of Paris, says a writer in To-Day. Above it tower the heights of Montmartre, and the wheel of fire of this mill only starts a-whirling at night, and then, with all its sails dotted with lurid spurts of color, it winds and grinds noiselessly.

From the theatre the building swells out into an immense ballroom as big as a skating rink; up in the gallery above, a band stand "The ball comes later," they tell us, so we stroll back to the theatre, reached by climbing the little flight of steps, and seat ourselves.

"What will monsieur have?"

"Nothing."

"But one is obliged to——"

"Two bocks, then."

The place fills up. You are surrounded by French tradesmen, shopkeepers and their sweethearts; the horsey specimen, with his spyglass still on his back—he takes care to tell you he has come from Auteuil and is down on his luck; quiet butchers and their wives in their Sunday clothes, eagerly straining their necks to see the dancers and the singers, who follow each other in quick succession on the mimic stage

Two Englishmen stroll by in deer-stalkers, their faces shine in strident contrast to the greasy, or the waxy, or the suffused ones about them. There are shop girls and factory jades, and the professional beauty a la Batingnolles, done up on a cheap scale. There are the painted and the weary of life, the betrayed and the naturally vicious, the downtrodden and the picked up. There are the reckless, too, more of them than of any other; they have dashed a suspicion of powder on their noses, they have drawn a rim of burnt match black under their dull eyes to bring out the belladonna brilliancy, a fair accompaniment to their forced smile; they have tightened themselves in at the waist to bring more into evidence the lines of the hips and bust, and then have started forth for conquest.

Up on the stage women in ball dresses, pretty, unfunny, with cracked voices, sing languishing ditties, accompanied by suggestive gestures or dashy songs out of tune. They wink promiscuously at their audiences, they snap their fingers audaciously at the members of the orchestra, they execute pirouettes, their skirts lifted boldly, their stockings displayed against a fluff of lacy tissue.

"Lolotte," from the little theatre around the corner, comes on and dances her pas seul. Her toes are brought together, then her heels, then in a lightning flash she stretches wide apart, and, with a kick which takes into its circumference a space as big as a mill wheel, we have mademoiselle seated before us breathless, laughing, her body upright, her limbs measuring several yards from toe to toe. From time to time a debutante puts in her bid for favor, and sometimes she is really young and fair. The management knows its world and offers youth and beauty, and sometimes talent. So, her long lashes drooping over her cheeks in simulated modesty, her cheek dimpling and flushing—for the young blood has not yet grown stale, and the curves have still to be lined into wrinkles—this new translation of maidenhood faces the footlights with a smile. Her thin, musical voice sings a song; she gambols awkwardly like a young animal at play. Finally, impatient at too slowly making her headway, she lets go and kicks herself into universal notoriety. In a few weeks the boulevards teem with her name, and Nini Patte-en-l'Air's little slippered feet play sad havoc with the hearts of her admirers.

But the bell rings, the little curtain goes down and a rush is made for the ballroom. As quick as a flash circles are formed, the room has filled up and there is barely elbow space. The military band commences a waltz, men and women, women alone and women together, start in dancing and the fun grows fast and furious. In a little loge above a party of well-dressed foreigners look down curiously on the scene. From the garden at the left stroll in every kind of Paris' fast and dissipated civilization. Here is a world where no introductions are necessary. Chatting, laughing, nudging, squeezing, kissing, kicking, dancing, they grow more and more reckless and fierce and more diabolically debauched. Gendarmes stroll about and smile indulgently, only laying their hands now and then good naturedly on the shoulders of those who grow too noisy or too conspicuously depraved, and all the while, in the middle of the room, goes on the mad dancing, the screams of encouragement, and the whirl of skirts—a whirl of debauched womanhood.

Of the dancers, Sauterelle, Macarona, La Goulue, Torpille, Pomponette, Folichoneite, Gigolette, Serpolette, Cigale, Clair-de-Lune, Arc-en-Ciel, Etoile Filante get salaries of from fifty to eighty francs a night. Most of them wear a pallor born of late hours and gaslight amusements. As they lift their skirts we gaze at a whirl of skirts and limbs black silk stockinged and feet immaculately slippered. There is a mass of inexhaustibly voluminous white batiste, rows and rows of exquisite lace insertion, miles of little rufflings, lace and embroidery bordered, and behind it—a woman.

But the dance begins. She steps backwards a little, her hands on her hips, her chin loftily tossed, the gleam of her eyes audacious, vile, insinuating. Mockingly she gazes for a moment or two at the circle of spectators; then, with a quick movement, she lifts her dress skirt, tucks it rideways into her belt, and stands revealed a mass of lingerie. The crowd surges nearer, the band crashes louder; suddenly, with an ease as apparently unstudied and unthought of as a swallow's flight, her toe touches her forehead again and yet again; there are roars of applause, and the crowd presses closer. She grows breathless, dances faster and faster, kicks higher and higher, sits, stands, whirls, stoops, hops, reaches her head backward until it touches the floor. Through the whirl of laces we see her face; the eyes are open, the lips, too, are parted, and every now and then she lets forth a shout, unlike a voice, more like the indescribable, hoarse shriek of a seal. The flush of her face grows pallid under her rouge. The insinuating smile grows fixed, the eyes glassy; still the body, as though galvanized, kicks, and reels, and turns, and whirls till a new dancer springs into the arena, and the former retires to catch her breath.

WELL-GROOMED GIRLS.

And What a Well Known Woman Writer Has to Say of Them.

We read frequently of late of the well-groomed girl, and though the sentence has a horsey flavor, possibly the girl of the period may not object to it, carrying with it as it does the suggestion of an extreme neatness.

We all love to see a neat girl; she is refreshing to the eyes; but while we enjoy her exquisite make up of polished finger nails, satiny hair and spotless apparel, let us inquire if her immaculate toilet is honestly come by.

We all know that a complete toilet takes time; indeed the directions for the modern art of "grooming," which we read in nearly every paper we take up, would require hours to accomplish, and we wonder when we see the young woman of moderate means emerge from her dressing room, if her mother is as well groomed as she. We hear little about the well-groomed mother, and yet why should she not be susceptible to the delights of a perfect toilet as well as her daughter?

Too often, we fear, in modest households, mother pares the potatoes that "angel's" hands may not be stained. Mother handles the fruit and cleans the kettles for the same good reason; in short, mother does all the dirty and disagreeable work where there is no servant to relieve her.

"Angel" has an eruption on her face if her blood is overheated, so mother irons the delicate muslins in which her dainty girl appears in public, and gets up in the small hours of the morning to hurry out the weekly wash that the girls may not be deprived of their beauty nap, and, sad to say, sometimes their good nature nap as well.

Mother, long ago, trundled her babies about; prepared many a meal with a fretful child on one arm, nursed them through all their baby diseases, and thought of the day when she should have grown-up daughters to share her burden of care.

But as the girls grew the sewing increased, the seams grew longer, the demands of fashion became more and more exacting, and mother's services were always in demand. The girls go to school and must keep in sight of their mates, at least, in point of dress, and mother, unless she is able to hire a seamstress, never sees the hour when her work is done.

After school-days are over the girls go out more or less, and accepting hospitality must also extend it, and so mother insensibly merges her own comfort and happiness into a round of drudgery.

She doesn't need manicuring scissors; her shapeless nails are worn down to the quick; her whitening hair, which, with grooming, would lie in soft shining coils like her daughter's, is too often twisted up into a tight, ugly pug to save time for the inexorable duties of the house.

If mother washes the dinner dishes while the daughter brushes and polishes her pretty person we do not like the latter, and we turn with pleasure to the plainer, less immaculately neat girl who has sacrificed her personal adornment to the more urgent duty of helping mother.

Infinitely sweeter and more alluring than her merely well-groomed sister is she who unselfishly cares for the comfort of others, and brings into her home life the sweet element of self-sacrifice and thoughtfulness.—Mrs. F. M. Howard, in Jennesa Miller Monthly.

Quack Advertisements

Are a nuisance and we think it behooves publishers to examine into the merits of many articles puffed up in their columns. We do not deny that many meritorious remedies are properly to be classed under this heading. Take the hundreds and thousands relieved from severe suffering by the use of Polson's Nerviline; would it not be unreasonable to expect them to condemn that far-famed remedy? Now we know for a fact that Polson's Nerviline is without exception the most powerful, pleasant and certain remedy in the world for pain. It cannot fail, for it goes right to the bottom of pain, penetrates to the nerves, soothes them into quietness, and affords prompt and permanent relief.

The Graduates of the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses Receive Their Diplomas in the Presence of the Hundreds Who Attend the Ceremonies—Miss Wood, Miss King and Miss Hoyt, Receive Medals and Diplomas.

The second annual graduating exercises of the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses took place last evening in the Oddfellows' Hall in the presence of a large concourse of the friends and well wishers of that institution.

The chair was taken by Mr. Richard Hall, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Hospital Trust, and on either side of him were seated the members of the medical staff, viz., Dr. Bell, Dr. Boucher, Dr. King, Dr. Halliday and Dr. Fife. Shortly after these gentlemen had taken their seats on the raised dias, the nurses of the staff filed in attired in their neat light blue uniforms, and took up their position in the front seats. It was indeed, to observe this long line of serious-visaged, thoughtful-eyed young girls, who are about to devote their lives to the alleviation of the sufferings of humanity.

The chairman, in his opening remarks, drew attention to the fact that just a year ago he had been called upon to perform a similar office to that which he was performing at present. On that occasion he had the pleasure of presiding at the first graduating exercises which had ever been held in connection with the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses. There had been a marked change in the period of time which had elapsed between then and the present occasion. Last year one hundred and fifty-nine patients had been treated, while during the present year sufferers had lain in the hospital wards. The very large increase in the number of patients treated, he considered as most convincing proof that the more that was known of the hospital, the more it was appreciated and patronized by those in sickness and pain. He was gratified and pleased at the success attained by the hospital in filling a need and attributed a great deal of this success to the excellence of the medical staff. The members of it had devoted much of their time to the training of the nurses and had delivered in turn one lecture a week.

THREE HUNDRED AND FOUR

Remarking that the programme called for addresses from a number of the medical men present, he called upon

DR. BOUCHER.

The doctor agreed with the chairman in saying that the success of the hospital was most gratifying indeed, particularly regarding the increased number of patients, which applied for admittance during the past year. Of the number who were treated, ninety-four were surgical cases. Thirty-four of these had been operated upon and of these, only two deaths had occurred, which was really a highly creditable record. No other hospital could boast of one which surpassed it.

At the risk of being thought egotistical the doctor expressed himself as of the belief that if the many people of this vicinity who went to Toronto to be operated upon, would undergo treatment at the hospital they of the expense, and the result would be as satisfactory. The record of past years showed that the local practitioners were quite capable and were prepared to perform all surgical work which might come under their eye, as successfully as the cases could be operated upon elsewhere.

The graduating class of last year consisted of four nurses, viz: Miss Boyle, who was doing very satisfactory work in Buffalo; Miss Friend, who now held the position of assistant head nurse of the Toronto General Hospital: Miss Williamson, who was doing excellent work in town, and Miss Dixon, whom, he was sorry to say, was suffering from so severe an indisposition as to incapacite her from following her chosen vocation.

A great deal of the success with which these graduates have met, continued he, is due to the

EFFICIENT LADY SUPERINTENDENT,

Mrs. O'Donovan, and her head nurse and assistant, Miss Bolster, who both devoted themselves and their time, without reserve, to the nurses. Much credit therefore, he thought, was due to both.

The Doctor concluded his remarks with the hope that the citizens would continue to take as active an interest in the work of the hospital in the future as they had done in the past, as was apparent by the number of names inscribed in the visitors register. He foresaw that the institution was about to become a most popular one.

DR. FIFE, IN OPENING

his address, begged to offer his most sincere congratulations to the young ladies, who were present for laureation. They had just passed an examination in a manner which was highly creditable to their capabilities and training. They had entered upon a most noble profession. Their record in the work so far had been a good one indeed and he had no doubt that their future career would be just as satisfactory. The doctor was of the opinion that, as all were at present assembled in the Oddfellows' Hall, that the first degree could be appropriately conferred on the three young graduates. They had journeyed from Jericho to Jerusalem and had fallen among thieves by the way. The thieves in their case were scarlet fever, typhoid, pneumonia, and such like. These were common names, but they were not easy foes

TO MEET AND CONQUER.

The nurses had done their work well. They nursed the injured and the sick, and fed them. Some of the patients, it was true, suffered and died, but the suffering even of these had been greatly alleviated by the tender hand of the nurses.

The profession of nursing had for a long time, not been a popular one, until lustre was shed on the work by the noble actions of the illustrious Florence Nightingale. She had left a bright, cheerful home to go forth to the awful Crimea. With the genius of the nurse and the spirit of the most bold of adventurers she had gone forth and undertaken the work and since then her name has as a proof to the women of the world what can be done in this line of work. Many had followed her noble example and humanity had derived great benefit therefrom.

Dr. Fife had no hesitation in saying that the young lady graduates present were far better nurses than ever Florence Nightingale was, but this fact did not detract from that heroine's name, as medical science had advanced with giant strides in the last few decades.

While Dr. Fife did not by any means underrate the services of many good women who undertook the work of nursing without having graduated from a training school. Yet, he pointed out, that these women were in almost every case well on in years and had only after probably an experience of 30 or 40 years attendance at sick beds, whereas, in a modern training school a most capable young nurse could graduate in two years, and thus escape tuition in the hard school of the bitter experience of years.

By the evidences of skill which he had seen displayed by the graduates, the doctor thought they approached very near to the ideal nurse after only two years training, and in conclusion he wished them every success in their future career, and assured them he would ever watch for their names with the pleasurable anticipation of hearing of honours bestowed.

in the course of his remarks, took occasion to express his full appreciation of the kindness of the Lady Superintendent and Board of Trustees in giving him an invitation to be present.

In speaking of training schools in general, he expressed the view that it was evident in every instance, that they were always carried on by perfectly capable nurses, who were in a position in every case to impart to the students the knowledge, which they were desirous of gaining.

In nursing, the doctor explained, there were —private nursing and district nursing. In private nursing the trained nurse was a most important factor, and was generally styled "the physician's lieutenant." In fact, the hands of the nurse were nothing more or less than the physician's hands lengthened out.

TWO GREAT FIELDS

In district nursing there were more duties for the nurse to perform. The people had to be taught how to ventilate their apartments and to use economy.

It was all very well, he stated, to talk of old women nurses, and to praise them, but he himself could not conceive that it was possible for a nurse to perform her duties unless she was properly trained.

A nurse had to possess certain attributes. Of these.

OBEDIENCE AND PUNCTUALITY

were the most important. In Japan the nurses could not be taught to exercise punctuality. They were pretty little things to have around a bedside and very neat, but were almost useless on account of not possessing the qualification of punctuality.

So far as obedience concerned a nurse, he could say that it was most necessary and practitioners had never been able to obtain it until they got the trained nurses.

In her training, the nurse during the first year was supposed to do ward work only. She could take the pulse and the respirations and make remarks upon the apparent progress of the patient, besides receiving chemical advice from the doctors. In the second year she was allowed to go out and do occasional nursing in order to put the experience gained and become more skilled.

During the term of her tenure the nurse received but a nominal salary.

The training schools here in this country had only been inaugurated for about 21 years, and the whole modern system could only boast an existence of about 60 years. Florence Nightingale, of course, was considered the pioneer in the work. It was during the Crimean war in 1854 that she obtained her reputation, and the heart of the whole English nation had been touched thereby, and wealth and riches were poured upon her. With the money thus acquired she founded in London, which now bears the name of its founder. Miss Marsden was another nurse whose name was well known. She it was who went to Siberia and devoted her life to the lepers.

It was not until 1873 that there were any training schools worth mentioning on this continent, but in the last 20 years no less than 148 had been founded, and there were now 3,250 nurses in attendance at these schools. The Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore heads the list for having the best equipped training school in connection with it. Miss Isabella Hampden was the lady superintendent.

In Virginia a school for the training of coloured nurses had been founded for the benefit of that race. Then the Mills Institute had recently been founded in New York for the training of male nurses and the demand for graduates was far greater than

COULD BE SUPPLIED.

As yet there are no training schools in China, although a Toronto lady was there at present endeavouring to have one founded. Japan could boast of having had a training school for six years. It was conducted under the superintendency of Miss Fraser, of Toronto, and in the last five years had graduated five pupils. Of these, three had married, one died and one received a government situation.

The doctor earnestly hoped that none of the present graduates, from the Nicholls Hospital, would follow the example of the first three Japanese graduates and marry.

"Our own school," continued he," compares most favourably with any that I have seen." He had travelled about a good deal of late years, but always on arriving home again he had concluded that the Nicholls Hospital was that he had seen.

He had no doubt whatever that the young ladies who received their diplomas this evening would acquit themselves admirably in their future career.

Dr. Bell was called upon by the chairman to present to Miss King the prize which she had won in the recent bandaging competition which consisted of a handsome little hypodermic syringe.

In his preliminary remarks, the doctor affirmed that it should be a source of gratification to every citizen to know that the hospital was being so much appreciated. He was sure that the large number of patients who had submitted themselves for treatment was exceedingly gratifying to the hospital authorities. He had visited the hospitals in Brockville, Brantford and Chatham, and was pleased to be able to announce that the Nicholls Hospital compared favourably with them all. He held that the who had so liberally endowed this institution, was worthy, indeed, of being revered.

The medical staff felt greatly gratified by the fact that the Board of trustees had treated them with such consistent courtesy. Whenever anything was required in the line of modern equipment, it had only to be asked for and the request was always met with a generous spirit. Although the medical staff was pleased to that it was appreciated, as evidenced by the remarks of the chairman, yet it could not claim that all the success of the hospital was due to its efforts, as under the efficient management of Mrs. O'Donovan, the lady superintendent, it was necessarily

BOUND TO SUCCEED.

The internal management of the hospital was certainly all that could be desired. The cleanliness of the wards and the general air of brightness which pervaded the building, inspired the patients with a confidence in the management of her who was at the head of the institution.

The subject of the hospital should not be dismissed without a word of praise for the male employees. The condition of the grounds surrounding the hospital was certainly a pleasure to, not only the patients, but to every one living in the vicinity, and it was only right that these men receive for their painstaking care.

Regarding the graduates he could say that he was confident the results of the medical staff's efforts in their behalf had been thoroughly satisfactory, and he know the class going out to-night would fulfil the most sanguine expectations.

The profession of nursing was far from a pleasant one and it was easy to obtain work much more congenial to the taste. The nurses took up a work which might almost be considered drudgery. It did not all consist of sitting by the bedside of the suffering and smoothing his pillow, but much had to be undertaken completely foreign to this. These graduates had all given up of home to enter upon a profession where, besides almost unceasing work, they would be subjected to sights which might unnerve the strongest of men. They had cheerfully taken up this work which demanded such a sacrifice and the citizens could not bestow too high marks of appreciation upon these girls. They were deserving of it all and must have been thoroughly in love with the work to have thus stepped forth to bear the burden. He called upon all citizens to do everything in their power to enable these nurses, most of them strangers in a strange land, to pass at least at times. While not attempting to signify how this might be done, still a few hints might not be out of place. They might be invited to spend an evening at the home or taken to proper places of amusement or drives, or furnished with the means of relaxation in a hundred different ways.

Dr. Bell then drew a vivid picture of the dangers to which these girls subjected themselves in going boldly and without fear into the infectious wards and breathing the tainted air of the sick room, as they bent tenderly over the invalid and soothed his throbbing brow. He paid a high tribute to Miss Ross, the young nurse, who died at her post in the hospital, through having taken diphtheria while nursing a patient infected with that disease. She, he said, had played as much any soldier that of a hero on the field of battle.

In presenting the special prize to Miss King for the bandaging, the doctor took occasion to remark that the competition had been a most keen one, and he could safely say that the bandaging of the entire class was such as to reflect great credit upon their teacher, Miss Bolster and to be eminently satisfactory to the examiners.

After asking God's blessing upon the three young graduates the doctor resumed his seat.

It was

to present to the graduates the diplomas and medals, and he prefaced the presentation with a short but earnest address to the young ladies. He admitted that while it was quite true that they had been under the medical tuition of the medical staff to a degree, yet to a much greater degree had they received instruction from the Lady Superintendent and her assistant, and to them accordingly should be given the greater portion of praise.

When he explained to the audience how the medical staff had for the past year been brought into daily contact with these young girls, he thought that all could perceive how much the doctors were interested in their success, and how anxious they were that the graduates upon their Alma Mater, which he was quite confident the present class would do.

He offered his congratulations to them now as trained nurses. They had been examined and judged worthy to undertake the duties of their high calling. He queried as to whether these young ladies had adopted this profession on account of the high remuneration which they expected or on account of it being a fashion or a fad. He trusted and knew that such was not the case, but that it was from a higher and nobler inspiration — that of being of use to their suffering fellow creatures — which had induced them to take this step. Not for a moment would he hesitate in to these young ladies. The woman who would go through the training necessary and endure the great mental strain of watching over critical cases, must, urged he, be actuated by more noble motives than the mere love of gain. He pleaded with the young ladies to cherish and foster this inspiration in their dark homes; it would be a stay to them.

For the past two years all their actions had been leading up to the opening of the real vista of their lives and now they were about to step forth into the world and take upon their young shoulders the responsibility of assuming charge of their own cases. He earnestly and impressively charged them in their future life-work to be true to themselves, true to their patients and true to the physician. They would have to demand respect in the world and would have to exercise a proper regard for their health. He urged them to be clean, neat, bright and cheerful, systematic

AND ETERNALLY VIGILANT.

"You owe your patient everything" said he "which tends to his comfort and should endeavour to gain his confidence by your kind attention to his every want. Your mission to all is to help the sufferin, and soothe the pillow of the dying. Follow the doctor's instructions to the letter and carry out the treatment prescribed with an enthusiasm equal to his own."

"Above all things" concluded he, "never perform an action of any kind, which will have the slightest tendency to lessen the confidence, which the patient has in his physician. It would be cruel and might be attended with disastrous results."

One of the most affecting part of the evening's programme was occasioned by each candidate solemnly repeating the following affirmation after Dr. Halliday:—

NURSE'S AFFIRMATION.

"I do hereby solemnly affirm that I shall endeavour, in my life and conduct, and by a faithful discharge of my duties as nurse, to honour the diploma to be this day conferred on me; that I accept the medal awarded to me, acknowledging that I shall hold it subject to the will and pleasure of the hospital authorities; that I shall cherish a feeling of loyalty to the Training School for Nurses of the Nicholls Hospital, and do whatsoever within me lies to promote its well-being and prosperity."

The diplomas were then handed to the three graduates, Miss Alice Wood, Miss King and Miss Carrie Hoyt by the doctor after which the silver medals of exceedingly neat design and bearing the motto were handed by Dr. Halliday to Mrs. O'Donovan who pinned them upon the dressess of each graduate. In saying good bye the doctor took occasion to assure all three of his heartfelt good wishes and to give them the assurance that the medical staff would be happy to advance their interests if the opportunity of doing so should ever occur.

The valedictory was then read by Miss Alice Wood, the graduate who received the highest number of marks at the recent examinations, as follows:

To the Chairman and Trustees of the Nicholls' Hospital, Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—We have come to the end of our two years' sojourn in the institution, of which you are the guardians; we have completed the course of training which your wise forethought has established; we have received from you the certificate of graduation in the school; it is now for us to go forth into the world and make use of the practical teaching we have received.

Need we say that these two years spent in the Hospital have been pleasant ones? While full of hopefulness we look forward to the life work which is before us, it is with deep regret that we sever our connection with the life which has proved such a pleasant one.

We should be, indeed, ungrateful did we leave our Alma Mater and these connected with her, with any other feelings than those of regret, intermingled, however, with much thankfulness for what she has given us.

On this occasion, when we make our valedictory as graduates of the Training School for Nurses, we can do no less than publicly express our appreciation of the kindness and help which we have received from all with whom we have had to do.

You, Sir, and those associated with you in the government of the Hospital, will take it, from what we have already said, that we are not unmindful of what we owe to you.

But there are others—those who have been with us in the practical every day work of the Hospital, who have been our instructors in the lecture room and at the bedsides of the sick and suffering, who have had almost every thing to do with the happiness and success of our life these two years; to these, we must likewise express our grateful obligation. First, then, we must thank the doctors. How much we have learnt from their ministrations to the sick, how many hints we have received at sick bedsides, and how valuable has been the instruction at those lectures, so freely and ungrudgingly given by men already busy and pressed for a time. Nor do we forget the cheery words and pleasant intercourse which have often brightened a long day's work and encouraged us in the performance of our duties.

Of Mrs. O'Donovan, the Lady Superintendent, we desire to speak in terms of grateful affection. As head of the hospital and responsible for its management, we have necessarily had much to do with her, and she has always proved a true and sympathetic friend.

Her classes we have thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed. Her advice has been at our disposal at all times. In any difficulty we could always have recourse to her, and her great sympathy and unfailing concern for our welfare have been valued by us more than we can say.

Another true friend has been Miss Bolster. As head nurse it has fallen to her to preside over the bandaging class, and to her we must acknowledge our indebtedness for very much practical information in that important branch of our work. In her capacity as nurse in charge and chief assistant, to the doctors, we have necessarily been associated with her in many ways, and we owe her our warmest thanks for all that we have received at her hands.

The resident officials of an institution cannot but have the making or marring of the happiness of their subordinates very much in their power. We desire to say of Mrs. O'Donovan and Miss Bolster that not only as instructors, but also as companions and friends, they have been more than good and more than kind, and our pleasant recollections of the Hospital, as also those of our other friends on the staff of nurses, will always be associated with them.

We cannot bring this address to a close without making mention of those who have gone to a higher work. Our associate and friend, Miss North, found the work of the hospital too much for her delicate health. Nay, death had set its seal upon her before she came to us, and six weeks after leaving here she passed to her rest in her own home at Picton, the victim of consumption. Miss Ross died in the Hospital. In her too we mourn the loss of one we loved, but she gave her life in a noble cause. Having taken the disease from one she was nursing, she became rapidly ill with diphtheria and succumbed to heart failure. Surely a noble end, and one for which we should not be overmuch sad.

In saying to you all,—trustees, doctors, superintendent and nurses,—good-bye; and thanking all of you again most warmly, we would express the hope that the Nicholls Hospital may be able to carry on its work more and more efficiently, and that we, who have received its training, may faithfully follow what can choose, and that we may never forget that the profession of nursing and care of the sick, is essentially the child of Christianity, the fruit of the example of Him "who went about doing good."

THE SECOND PART of the programme of the evening's entertainment was opened by Miss Rose Clark, with a brilliant piano solo entitled "Alice, Where Art Thou," with variations, which earned plaudits of the audience.

Mr. Frank King, of Toronto, delighted the audience with his spirited rendition of "The Arab Bride," a vocal solo which suited his deep bass voice to perfection. As an encore he gave "The Clang of the Forge."

Sweet little Lola Ostrom, although suffering from the effects of a severe cold, gave two of the recitations, which come with such grace from her tiny mouth. As usual the audience clamoured for an encore which was given, "Poor Little Joe" and "Why do Girls Wed" were the titles of her two renditions, which were given with her accustomed ease, her charming gestures being the subject of special admiration.

A rare treat was accorded those fortunate enough to be present, when Miss Pauline Scheak, of Toronto, in a voice of exceptional sweetness, sang Watson's "Only the Sound of a Voice." Her pure alto notes were never heard to better advantage than last evening. Although in response to the hearty applause, which followed her rendition of the song, she gave that "cute" little song, entitled "I don't want to play in your yard," yet the audience did not seem at all willing to allow her to resume her seat even then. Her first number showed clearly what a wonderful compass her voice possesses without losing any of its richness.

Mr. King followed with "The Gallant Salamander," which was well received, after which Miss Scheak again favoured the audience, her selection being "Zanita."

The ceremonies of the evening were brought to a close after the chairman had cordially thanked the ladies and gentlemen who had assisted in the programme, and also the Oddfellows for their kindness in lending the hall, by the singing of the National Anthem.

Of the the three graduates Miss Wood will remain to practice her profession in town, Miss King will cross the border and Miss Hoyt is at present undecided just where she will locate, although she intends taking a post graduate course in some American Hospital before pursuing her vocation.

The Queen and Fire.

Queen Victoria has a great horror of fire, and has arranged quite a complete fire brigade among her servants, so that it is at hand whenever she is in residence. They had a very successful "false alarm" the other day at Osborne, and everyone was at his post, according to order, as if on board ship. Prince Henry, among his other useful domestic roles, is chief of the little brigade. The Queen has taken the greatest interest in the whole concern, and frequently amuses herself by watching the drill. The firemen are chiefly stalwart young stablemen, grooms and footmen.

Who'd Be a King?

I hear, says a writer in the Lady's Pictorial, that a great deal of anxiety is felt in the Russian Imperial family just now on account of more than one alleged Nihilist conspiracy against the life of the Czar. Curiously enough, autocracy or democracy seems to make little difference to Anarchists and their kin, for M. Casimir-Perier, like the Czar, is in daily peril of his life, and is surrounded by the army of detectives and secret police which now has to take the place of that "divinity" which was once supposed to "hedge a king."

Royalty Wheeling.

The little King of Spain is destined to belong to the world wide legion of cyclists, for he is being taught to be stride one of the machines that are apparently as much abhorred in England by pedestrians as were footpads in the good old days. The young king is being instructed by a competent rider, and his steed is provided by an English firm of manufacturers.

Made Entirely of Caracul.

What do you think of a skirt and coat entirely made of caracul, the very fine, soft, light-weighted sort of astrakhan or Persian lamb? These are very fashionable in Paris just now. We were shown one at Blank's the other day. The effect is, as you may imagine, very rich and handsome, and for fur the weight is very little.—London Truth.

London in September.

A broiling sun—a cutting blast,
With lots of dust, then mud.
A sky serene and bright and fair,
Then hot, oppressive, sultry air,
With thunder's heavy thud.
Next, drenching showers and stones and hail,
And next some other freak,
For autumn, summer winter, spring,
Each holds its own and has its fling
Within one little week.

A BEAU, NOT A BOMB

Alarm at Mr. Blake's Meeting Was Caused by a Drunken Enthusiast.

THE INCIDENT A TRIFLING ONE

Newspaper Accounts of the Affair Stir Up the New York Irishmen — Hon. Mr. Blake, Accompanied by Dr. Emmet Leaves for Atlanta, Ga.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—When Irish-Americans read the story of the reception at the Lenox Lyceum to Hon. Edward Blake, M.P., and envoy in America of the McCarthyite party in Ireland, they were a bit stirred up and for good cause. According to the reports a mysterious person with an infernal machine tried to dynamite the elderly M.P. for Longford. In order to make the matter more interesting the mysterious dynamiter was described as being a strange looking old man with a gingham umbrella, with a mustache and stooped shoulders of a Russian anarchist. Stern, relentless, underrating truth compels the statement that there was no Russian anarchist, for Mr. Blake had never done anything to arouse the enmity of Russian anarchists or their admirers either. Furthermore there was no dynamite bomb.

The Captain of the East 53rd police station puts the matter tersely: "There was a bum, I believe, at the Lennox Lyceum last night but no bomb." The captain further stated that the importance of the incident had been ridiculously magnified. It is not mentioned on the police blotter and no special officers have been detailed to hunt the mysterious would-be assassin.

The facts as related by the police and by the members of the Irish American Federation are somewhat in this fashion: An elderly man, carrying an umbrella, but not otherwise noticeable, bought a box seat. Some of those about the doors of Lennox Lyceum further noticed that he carried a pretty good cargo of liquified enthusiasm. They and the police say that he carried a small cheap sky rocket with him but this fact did not develope until the meeting was in full blaze. The meeting was somewhat of a hot one.

According to the police it was just after the Irish member of parliament got well into his argument that the ultra-enthusiastic party in the box set off his rocket. He had placed it in the gingham umbrella, after which he left the box. Presently the gingham umbrella emitted a sound like that of a weak fire-cracker. Mr. Joseph Dillon, who was in the box, promptly stamped on the umbrella and the infernal machine was squelched and put out. Mr. Blake paid no attention to the incident and went on with his speech.

It was reported that several hundred men, bent on mischief, got into the meeting by means of the bad tickets, but at the office of the Irish-American Federation this report is denied and it is asserted that less than a dozen bogus tickets escaped scrutiny.

Envoy Blake and his friend, Dr. Emmet, with whom he has been stopping here, left this city for Atlanta, Ga., where Mr. Blake is to speak in a few days. Returning, he will speak in Baltimore, Philadelphia and probably other cities.

Neither of the gentlemen would discuss last night's incident, holding it to be a matter of no importance or consequence.

SIR JOHN THOMPSON'S TRIP.

Something to Do With Conference Resolutions—The Steamship Scheme.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The Morning Post says this morning of Sir John Thompson's proposed visit to England: "The Canadian premier's visit undoubtedly has some connection with the resolutions of the Ottawa intercolonial conference. Owing to the apathy of the Australian colonies, it is unlikely that the Government will enter into any contract with Canada anent the cable and steamship lines, until a former offer from Australia arrives. Minor questions, such as copyright, can, however, be debated with a prospect of obtaining Great Britain's views. Sir John Thompson may be sure of a hearty reception and general encouragement of views promoting closer relations between Canada and the mother country."

Admiral Hopkins has written an open letter to promoter Haddart who came to England in the interest of the fast steamship proposals. In it he says: "It seems a pity that the enterprise and genius which completed the magnificent service over the major part of the route between the United Kingdom and the west via the Canadian Pacific railroad should not now be backed by some further enterprise, able and willing to furnish means for bridging the remaining portion and making the whole possible in far shorter time than at present. The dangers of navigation may be dismissed as existing but surmountable. I feel confident that most commanders of the Allan and Dominion steamers would unhesitatingly and with alacrity exchange their present vessels for others running twenty knots. Detention by fog is no greater for a fast ship than a slow one. It does not effect the present question."

Captain Howard is Safe.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—Captain Howard's daughter is at present visiting friends here. She has received the following telegram from her brother:

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 19, '94—"Word from Halifax, nothing has happened." Signed, W. A. Howard.

This would go to show that Gatling Gun Howard is safe and has reached Halifax: It is supposed that he had hugged the shore instead of taking to the open sea as was proposed.

FAVOR THE FEE SYSTEM

Prominent Citizens of the Capital Give Their Opinions.

DR. BOURINOT'S STATEMENT

On the Several Questions on which the Committee is Seeking Light He Submits Studied Conclusions—Others Favor the Present System.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—The Ontario Fees Commission met in the court house here yesterday.

Dr. J. C. Bourinot, clerk of the House of Commons, was the principal witness examined. On the permission of the commission he read a very carefully written statement setting forth his opinions on the questions upon which the commission was seeking information. His conclusions were: "That the present system of appointment to provincial offices seemed, on the whole, the best calculated to give the country an efficient and permanent public service; that to change the system of responsibility resting upon the execution of every appointment for irresponsible methods of popular elections would be subversive of the English principles of government and a weakening of the whole public service; that municipal councils should be kept within the strict lines of their local power; that the uniform system of paying all salaries by the government at a fixed rate, graded according to the importance and responsibilities of the office would conduce to the public advantage by placing all officials on a basis of equality; that the efficiency of a public service must be enhanced by conditions of permanence of tenure and a fixety of salary."

Mayor Cox said that the present system of appointment of municipal officers should remain unchanged. The appointment of license commissioners should be under the control of the government.

John M. Garland said he would regret to see sheriffs and other officials elected by popular vote because a poorer class of officers would naturally be the result. He thought that in some cases the salaries of officers was not sufficient and in the other places they were very large, if not too much. He believed that the sheriff should receive the fees as he does now but only up to a certain amount, after which the balance of fees should be paid over to the government. In smaller counties, where the fees were small and did not make a sufficient salary, he believed the government should pay a salary in addition from the overplus from the more remunerative offices. He was opposed to popular elections in the appointment of officials. J. P. Featherstone, clerk of the crown, gave similar evidence. City Clerk Henderson was also examined and favored the present system.

Sheriff Sweetland favored the present system of appointing public officials. He thought that the payment of officers by fees was preferable to salaries, for the officers would pay greater attention to the public interests if they were paid by the fees they collected than would be the case if they were paid a salary.

SUICIDE OF A CIVIL SERVANT.

No Reason Is Known for the Terrible Act of Charles Judd.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—Charles Judd, a temporary clerk in the Department of Agriculture, committed suicide yesterday. He shot himself while in bed at 6 o'clock, with a small revolver, the bullet lodging in his head near the right temple. He was about 24 years of age and came here from London, Ont., in the summer of 1890. No cause is assigned for the unfortunate man's rash act. He is reported to have been steady and in fairly comfortable circumstances. He was unmarried and boarded at 102 Victoria street.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict of death by his own hand.

The following will was found in his vest pocket: "Last will and testament: I, Charles Judd, of the city of Ottawa, in the county of Carleton, in the province of Ontario, Canada, civil servant, do declare this to be my last will. To my brother, Joseph C. Judd, I give and bequeath that parcel of land on Wellington street, of which I hold 1-8 share, together with $800 cash. To my sister, Mary Judd, I give and bequeath a share in the homestead together with the mortgage held by me against Joe's property on Rideau street south. To my brother, Frederick William Judd, I give and bequeath my Manitoba farm and what may be left after the bequeaths have been paid. I appoint my brother, J. C. Judd, and Russell E. Smith as my executors. Dated at Ottawa this 15th day of October, 18[illegible]."

Some other papers were found, but these gave no information as to why he took his own life. The pistol, a 32 calibre, has been in possession of Judd for some time and a box with two cartridges for it was also in the room.

A reply was received from the friends in London saying to have the body embalmed and a brother would come down on the first train.

CHILD SAVING WORKERS

First Conference of Those Interested in Saving Neglected Children.

DELEGATES FROM ALL ONTARIO

Hon. J. M. Gibson Opens the Conference With an Address—Importation of English Children Discussed—Many Speakers Commend the Charitable Work.

TORONTO, Oct. 19.—For a first conference of provincial proprotions that of those engaged in child-saving work in Ontario, which was convened yesterday in Confederation hall, was a splendid success. In numbers and social standing, as well as for the representative character, the attendance was a remarkable one.

Judge McDonald, of Brockville, was chairman. In his opening remarks he paid a high tribute to Superintendent Kelso for the admirable arrangements of the conference.

Hon. J. M. Gibson, Provincial Secretary of Ontario, made the opening speech, dealing with the Act, of which he is the author, passed two years ago, giving official recognition and special powers to children's aid societies. The chief aim of this legislation, which is quite a new departure, is to remove dependent and neglected children from unhealthy and immoral environments and to place them for adoption in suitable families.

This, Mr. Gibson said, would take time, to have its provisions thoroughly understood and the machinery which it contemplates fully in working order. Those who have become familiar with the Act and its provisions will understand that it is of the utmost importance that the visiting committee in each of the electoral divisions in the province should be a reality instead of merely names on paper. The need and aim of the Act is that visiting committees shall be seeking out homes that are in need of children, and that the different societies in the centre shall be seeking out the children who need homes, and that they shall work reciprocally, one being necessary to the other. He thought there was not a constituency in the province that has not homes that are ready to receive the children of the crowded centres. The provision for the care of children in this province is pretty ample, and all that is being done in any country for that helpless class is being done in this country, but the present Act is intended to go farther in regard to compulsory care of children, who need to be looked after by the state.

Senator G. W. Allan commended this fostering system as far better than allowing children to become criminals for punishment. Nothing was better for the child than the sweet influences of home life. Judge Ardagh, of Barrie; Mr. J. K. Macdonald, president of the Toronto Children's Aid Society, and Mr. E. W. Kingston, deputy police magistrate of Toronto, also spoke at the opening session.

In the afternoon addresses were made by Warden Massie, of the Central prison, on "Neglect of Youth and Its Bearing on Crime"; Chief Detective Stark, of the Toronto police department; Rev. Thomas Geohegan, of Hamilton, on "Industrial School Work," and by Superintendent McCrosson upon "The Work of the Ontario Reformatory for Boys."

A discussion of "The Importation of English Children," an address by Rev. Mr. Wallace, of the Belleville home, became animated through a speech by Mr. D. J. O'Donoghue, representing the Trades and Labor Council, presenting strong arguments against the practice of the Dominion immigration policy of aiding such. Mr. Alfred Jury also spoke in opposition of the state assistance for landing the waifs and strays of European cities on our shores. The outcome of the talk was the general agreement that all such children should be rigidly examined as to health, and a register of them, as well as of those with whom they are placed, be kept by the officers of the children's aid societies.

In the evening an open meeting drew a large audience, when addresses of the deepest interest were made by Chaplain Card, of the Boys' Reformatory, Penetang; Rev. J. E. Starr, agent of the Toronto Children's Aid Society; Hon. Solicitor Edwards, of the Peterboro Society; Toronto Public School Inspector, J. L. Hughes; O. A. Howland, M. P.P.; F. W. Matthews, London, and John Armstrong, president of Owen Sound Children's Aid Society.

The conference will resume to-day, the programme spreading over two days. Some of those attending are Hon. Charles Drury, Inspector Archibald, Supt. A. E. Owen, of Dr Barnardo's Home; Rev. Dr. Parker, Dr. Rosbrugh, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Bollert, Guelph; G. W. Marshall, secretary S. P. W. and children, Montreal; Wm. Thompson, Orillia; S. M. Thomson, Brantford; E. B. Edwards, Peterboro; S. R. Break and Thos. R. Parker, London; Mr. and Mrs. James Burgess, Orphans' Home, Brockville; Dr. Oldright, Mrs. A. O. Rutherford, W. C. T. U., Toronto; Police Magistrate Flint, Belleville; R. H. Bartlett, Trenton; Miss Code, Peterboro; Mrs. W. Stevenson, Guelph; Mrs. Henry Freeland Burnside, Brockville; A. W. Richardson, Brantford; Miss Macdonald, Gananoque; Mrs. Wm. Foster, E. L. Robertson, Guelph; Frank Hills, Hamilton; J. Sanders, London; F. Howard Annes, Whitby; Mrs. Wm. Forbes, London; Wm. Wrigley, Toronto; Deputy Minister of Education Millar, Toronto.

THE OPPOSITION LEADERSHIP.

Gossip of a pretty creditable consistency places Dr. Ryerson, of the calf-with-a-cough fame, among the ranks of aspirants, for the leadership of the Ontario Opposition. Dr. Ryerson has several qualifications. To begin with the beginning he has unquestioned pedigree and, should he, if elected leader, succeed in wiping out the Government, his family tree will furnish abundant material for cabinet making, though some of his enemies are cruel enough that "wood mixed with the gray matter" is not a combination compatible with success as a leader. Then the doctor's intense solicitude for the coughing calf should recommend him to the good graces of a large party in the House whose interest in farming is the grounds for their presence in the Legislature. But whether love of the calf can be pleaded as an offset to the offence of being a professional man, which would not, of itself, commend him to the Patrons, whose support his party, Heaven knows on what grounds, is angling for, is a point that is not quite clear. Another report is to the effect that at a meeting of the "machine" in the Empire office, within the next few days, the claims of Mr. Marter, member of the Muskoka-ward division of Toronto, will be practically dealt with. Mr. Marter has a great head for details and junior school mathematical exercises, but it is not generally conceded that he has enough of general grasp to include the somewhat chaotic elements of his following; and it is to be feared that if Mr. Marter is offered and accepts, the leadership of the Opposition, he will speedily realize the exceeding appropriateness of his name.

WHAT ONTARIO FARMS PRODUCE.

The total value of farm lands, buildings, stock and implements in the province of Ontario—according to the report of the Bureau of Industries—is nearly $965,000,000,

This is divided as follows:—Land, $630,000,000; buildings, $182,000,000; stock, $104,250,000; implements, $48,500,000.

The amount of crops grown in 1893, was: Fall wheat, 17,500,000 bushels; spring, 4,186,000; barley, 9,806,000; oats, 58,584,000; rye, 904,000; peas, 14,168,000; corn, 15,000,000; buckwheat, 2,380,000; beans, 664,000; potatoes, 13,000,000; mangel wurtzels, 8,500,000; carrots, 3,000,000; turnips, 57,000,000; hay, 5,000,000 tons.

The amount of stock sold was:—Poultry, 2,017,000; hogs, 975,000; sheep, 616,000; cattle, 461,000; horses, 48,000.

The total value of the crop produced was about $140,000,000, the value of stock sold was $33,000,000, and of dairy products, $10,000,000. This gives, roughly, a total of $183,000,000 as the value of the output of the farms of Ontario in 1893.

THE Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph has just begun its collegiate year under most favourable conditions. The temporary appointments of a year ago have been made permanent, and a poultry department has been added. The attendance of students is large, the college being completely filled with a promising lot of young men from Ontario farms. Several applications from abroad have been refused owing to lack of accommodation. In every sense it appears to be the farmers' college, and to be receiving due recognition by those for whom it is especially intended.

Kept His Promise.

Richard Vaux, the venerable ex congressman from Pennsylvania, has never been to a theatre in his life to see a theatrical performance, says a Philadelphia Times. An interesting incident is given of his boyhood days over three score years ago. His father, a highly respected and prominent Friend, resided on Arch street, and believed it was best for his children to be trained within the rules of the good old Quaker habits. At that period Ned Forrest was the brilliant young American tragedian and had captivated all the boys of Philadelphia in his character of the Roman Gladiator and big Indian Metamora. Young Vaux naturally desired to see the great actor play, but shrank from going without his father's consent so one day he ventured to ask his father for fifty cents to get a ticket. The old gentleman kindly replied in Quaker accent: "Richard, I don't begrudge the money, but thee knows I don't approve of playhouses, and wish thee to promise me not to go to a theatre without my permission." The promise was given and his father died suddenly soon after without giving the permission. Richard Vaux has conscientiously refrained from going the theatre ever since.

America's First Saving Bank.

The first savings bank in America was the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, organized in 1816. It is still in existence. Later, in 1816, a savings bank was founded in Boston and in 1819 one was started in New York. A savings bank is a bank in which savings are received—small amounts, which the bank will not pay out except on presentation of the bank book. A national bank is one which, besides its ordinary powers, rights and duties as a bank, has the right to issue bank notes. National banks were authorized by various acts of congress in 1863, 1864 and 1883. The plan of the government was to get the banks to buy government bonds, and to do so it gave them the right to issue notes to the amount of 90 per cent of those they had bought. A savings bank is not a bank of deposit; apart from its character as an issuer of notes, a national bank is a bank of deposit.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

If you wish to secure a certain and speedy result, when using Ayer's Sarsaparilla, be careful in observing the rules of health, or the benefit may be retarded. A fair and persistent trial of this medicine never fails, when the directions are followed.

A German's Impressions.

A German critic has been giving his views of England and English life in the Cologne Gazette. He talks of "Savoye's Restaurant," and of that place, as, indeed, of all places where man eats and drinks, he has a peculiar and extensive knowledge. There was some sherry at the Reform Club which appealed to him very strongly, and what impressed him very deeply were the "perambulating tables," as he calls them, on which joints were carved for him. He enjoyed lounging in the Park, which he compares with the Bois de Boulogne, saying that what strikes him most in England is, "What a deal of money these people have!" while in France the first reflection is "What a deal of money these people spend!" He approved of the healthy look of the athletically developed English ladies, but he thought they had large feet!

French in Germany.

Tourists in the Black Forest this autumn have been astonished at finding such numbers of Frenchmen traveling upon German soil. It used to be said, before the war, that the French tourist knew only three places in Germany—Baden-Baden, Homburg and Wiesbaden. It is said that the first of these places has suddenly regained its ancient attractiveness for the Frenchman upon his summer tour, although the former delights of the gambling hell have been abolished. The real cause of this new rush of the French across the Vosges into the German health resorts is probably due to the generous action of the Kaiser in the matter of the French officers.

Here's Comfort, Girls.

There was a time when after a girl had passed twenty she was called passe, so that it really became a matter of moment with her if it were necessary to state her age, and she was thought to exhibit some hardihood if she stated it without pressing reason. But so far has the world progressed while spinning down the grooves of change that now a girl at thirty is not so old in estimation as once she was at twenty; and such is the advance from that period when animal charm was the greater, that it is now acknowledged that at thirty-five a woman is in her prime for all the uses and enjoyments of life to herself and to others.

Even although at forty her hair may show a thread or two of silver, they argue nothing against her charm and effect, and are not more unbecoming than was the powder with which she sprinkled her hair and made herself bewitching in masquerades of years ago; and they have very little to do with the decrease of beauty, anyway, for a fair skin and a rosy color are often brightened and made more atttractive by what is considered prematurely gray hair than otherwise. And if there are lines about the eyes they are not noticed when the eyes kindle with intelligence and the lips curve in gentle smiles.—Harper's Bazar.

HE TELLS IT HIMSELF.

A West Oxford Farmer Narrowly Escapes Premature Burial—The Causes of His Threatened Fate and Lucky Escape.

INGERSOLL, Oct. 8.—W. H. Bailey of West Oxford township, claims to have only narrowly escaped premature burial a short time ago. He had had kidney disease for four years back and so badly at times that he was completely laid up. Many doctors treated him, but their treatment, in Mr. Bailey's opinion, made him worse rather than better. His escape from a premature grave was affected by the use of the infallible Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes of these cured completely. Mr. Bailey claims to be able now to do a bigger day's work than his twenty-four-year-old son.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

THE LATEST OF TICKERS

TURNS OUT PAGES OF WELL PRINTED NEWS DESPATCHES.

Something About the Wonderful New Telegraph Instrument Called the Essick Ticker—How It Will Revolutionize Press Methods.

The Essick telegraph machine is coming into actual service. These instruments, called "tickers" for the sake of convinience, have been placed in various places where men are wont to congregate, and from each of them there will roll until nearly midnight an endless page of typewritten "copy" containing news of the day and night from all over the world.

A man may stroll into his favorite resort, whether club, hotel or cafe, and by glancing over the neat manuscript unfolded before him by the new "ticker" find out what has happened, what is happening and what is likely to happen during the day. He may learn that Li Hung Chang has lost another battle and more peacock feathers; that wheat has gone up or down; that the Chicagoes have won another game (which is not probable); that certain stocks are high or low—and so on to the end. Everything in the way of news will be clicked off by the instruments as soon as it is received through sources that are the best and most reliable. From a central point the news is sent out to the "tickers" and is duly recorded by them in as perfect typographical shape as one could wish.

The paper ribbon that comes from the Essick machine is not the narrow and tender tape turned out by the old stock "tickers" that print one continuous line; it is thick white paper, nearly half a foot in width, and the matter printed on it is in either paragraph or tabular form, according to the nature of the news. A section clipped from an Essick machine roll could not be distinguished from a sheet of the same size that had been run through a regular typewriter. The manner of its operation only will be outlined here.

At headquarters a young woman sits at a keyboard exactly like that to be found in the ordinary typewriter. This is electrically connected with the "tickers," each of which has a metal wheel bearing the letters of the alphabet, numerals, etc. When the young woman at the transmitter thumps the letter A, or any other letter, the wheel, which is inked automatically, promptly prints that letter on the white roll. And so it continues, the lines being printed as they are to be read, from left to right, as in a newspaper. The shifting of the paper is done automatically, and one person, the one plays that on the keyboard at headquarters, operates all the "tickers" simultaneously. They may number a thousand and some of them may be twenty miles or more away, but all record the events of the day at one and the same moment. The machine is about for feet high and occupies floor space about a foot square.

No extended account of any event, unless of the greatest importance, will be sent out by the company. The information will be in the shape of bulletins containing the pith of the news. On momentous occasions, such as a general election, fuller reports will be furnished the "tickers" and they will be operated all night, or until most people have gone to bed.

Special attention will be devoted to stock and bond transactions on the Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, London and Liverpool exchanges; to grain trading in the primary and seaboard markets of America and Europe, and to current financial and commercial gossip.

The new "ticker" may be seen in operation next Tuesday at the Union League Club and at all the leading hotels of the city. They are being put into many places and are bound to attract a great deal of attention not only on account of their novelty, but also because of their practicability. Chicago is the first city in the country to have such an elaborate system of "tickers." New York has some 350 in use, but they furnish little news of interest outside of the commercial and financial world. The local machines are to furnish information for the benefit, or edification, of everybody. The charge made for the use of one of the Essick "tickers" is a very moderate one.—Chicago Herald.

Pneumatic Mail Delivery.

The pneumatic mail delivery system of London has 42 station, with a total length of 34 miles of tubes. Six engines of an aggregate of 216 horse-power constitute the power plant. In London the tubes are 2½ and 3 inch lead pipes, laid in cast-iron pipes for protection. The carriers used in 2½ inch tubes were but 1½ inches diameter, the remaining space being taken up by packing. Carriers are despatched singly. First, vacuum alone was used; later, vacuum and compressed air. The tubes used in the continental cities in Europe were wrought iron, the Paris tubes being 2½ inches diameter. There the carriers are despatched in trains of six to ten, propelled by a piston.

Feather Flowers.

Use the feathers of water birds. These "curl," and are specially adapted to the purpose. Secure a package of flower stamens and pistils such as are used in the manufacture of worsted or wax flowers. Each feather represents a flower petal: hence in making a blossom, choose three, four, five or six feathers of the same size. Fasten these by means of wire to a piece of wire which will serve as a stem. Place a pistil and several stamens in the centre of each flower. Hide the wire by winding green worsted about it.

Don't commit suicide on account of your "incurable" blood disease. The sensible thing for you to do is to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. If that fails, why, then—keep on trying, and it will not fail. The trouble is, people get discouraged too soon. "Try, try, try again."

A BAD ATTACK.

Abou Ben Had'em—may his tribe increase,
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,

He rolled him over and his form he eased,
He fixed his pillow—then, alas! he sneezed.

He cooled his forehead with the pillowslip,
He said, "By jingo, I have got the grip."

He called—his household angel quickly came
With lamp in hand—a good and portly dame.

She gave him barks and toothsome bouesettes,
Which not relieved his fearful miseries.

She gave him stuff that made poor Abou sweat.
Then rubbed him down, but still he suffered yet.

She gave him pills and squills, both thin and thick.
And still her patient was most awful sick.

And must poor Abou die—oh, fearful thought
She got some whiskey and she made it hot.

She filled up Abou to his noble throat.
And made him fuller than a barnyard goat.

He rose and dressed himself—he left his bed,
And then he painted half the city red.

Next day beneath the magisterial crest,
Abou Ben Had'em's name led all the rest.

HERE'S A LESSON.

Love Often Goes Out as Money and Social Cares Come In.

"Did nobody ever tell you that in some far pre-historic time I was in love with my husband?" said Mrs. Romaine carelessly. "Well, I was. I used to go to afternoon services in Lent and pray for that love to last, because the sensation was so much to my taste. I used to have ecstatic feelings when his foot was on the stair, and I sat sewing little baby clothes. We lived in a plainish way, then; $3 spent in two theatre tickets was a tremendous outlay; and we walked out to dinners—I tucking up the train of my best gown under a long cloak, and laughing if the wind snatched it away from me at the corners and whipped it around my feet. Then he grew richer, and we broadened the borders of our phylactery, and then—how—when—dear knows if I can remember, we grew farther and farther away from each other. Now, when he is at home, I am aware of it, because he is there behind a newspaper, but that is all! When our lips meet, it is like two pieces of dry pith coming together. I have a perfect unsurpassed power of annoying him by my presence. I know nothing of his affairs, nor he of mine. Our interests are his, not mine. Our house is mine, not his. All my tastes are 'fads;' but so long as I don't disgrace him, he does not interfere. I have money in abundance. Money—money—who cares for money when a man's heart and soul and brain have gone into it? How long is it since he has thought I could want anything from him but a check But ah, if I were you, and Gordon were my suitor—if, knowing what was to come, I had it all to live over again—I think I would take the bitter present for one taste of the old sweet that never can come back!"—From "A Bachelor Maid" in the Century for October.

A Remarkable Event.

An event which has been the talk of the town for some weeks is the cure of Mr. Edward White, whose sufferings from Salt Rheum (Eczema) were well known. Mr. White's statement is as follows:

For 12 years previous to the last few months I have been a sufferer of the worst kind from Salt Rheum. I tried twelve different doctors, besides many patent medicines but received no benefit, but gradually became worse. Last January I was advised to try B. B. B. by the postmaster here. I soon perceived a decided change for the better, and it only took six bottles to make a complete cure.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the BEST makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

Concert Postponed.

The Marie Louise Bailley concert will not be held in the Opera House, this evening, on account of the non-arrival of Miss Bailley's piano. Miss Bailley, it seems, is under contract with the Weber Piano Manufacturing Co. to use only the pianos of their make. Manager Bradburn states that the concert will probably be held in the latter part of November.

Some Liquor Cases.

At the police court this morning a couple of hotel keepers were before the magistrate charged with selling liquor during prohibited hours. In the one case the defendant pleaded guilty and was assessed forty dollars and costs amounting to $51.60 altogether. The other case was enlarged until next Thursday on account of the absence of Town Solicitor E. B. Edwards, who is attending the Child Saving Conference in Toronto.

They Stole His Rabbits.

Last evening some young lads endeavoured to "hook in" at the drill shed by scaling the fences at the rear. The back doors, however, were all securely locked, and they were frustrated in their intentions. Sergt.-Major Peters got his eye on them, and scared the little rascals away. In revenge they carried off several pair of rabbits belonging to the Sergeant's children. This is not the first time the boys have been chased away by the Sergeant, as it seems they are in the habit of lurking around the rear of the drill shed and smoking. As matches have frequently been found on the premises, it is feared that unless this practice is broken up the armoury will go up in smoke one of these days.

Public School Penmanship.

This morning the EXAMINER had the pleasure of examining specimens of penmanship of all the forms of the South Ward School from the Part I first book to the Sr. III, as well as specimens of the writing of pupils of the Jr. IV and entrance classes of the Central School. The specimens are of vertical writing and show a free, bold, flowing legible hand, the work of the infants, not far removed from the milk diet stage of life, being admirably worthy of unstinted praise, indicating how rapidly the vertical system can be acquired. Mr. Inspector Garvin intends sending these specimens for exhibition at the Teachers' Institute meetings in Lambton County. He has already sent similar samples to Stratford, and since he showed the samples taken by him to the Provincial Convention in Toronto, leading educationalists from all parts of the province, asking for specimens of vertical writing from our schools. The people of Peterborough should be able, it thus appears, to take comfort from the fact that the portion of their taxes spent on vertical writing is well spent.

They are: Democratic party, Republican party, Prohibition party, People's party, Independent Republican party, the People's Silver party, Populist party, Independent party, Independent Democratic party and Independent People's party. Ample room for a choice, one would think.

—An old rifle was picked up in the bottom of the raceway, from which the water has been drained, this morning. A passerby observed what he thought was a rifle butt sticking up out of the mud and rolling up his trousers and removing the boots and socks, waded in to investigate, and pulled forth the old piece. After the rust had been scraped off it, the date 1837 was found upon it. As may be supposed it is not a hammerless breech loader by any means. The query is how it found a resting place in the bottom of the raceway.

THE WHEEL

The Canadian 25-mile and hour records were boosted up by T. B. McCarthy, the Athenæum crack of Dunlop Trophy fame, when he yesterday covered 23 miles and 1,672 yards within the hour, and negotiated the 25 miles in 1.02.44. The Canadian records fell from 6 miles up. McCarthy was paced for 17 miles of the distance, 9 on the start and 8 at the finish, by Hensel and Robertson on a tandem.

In the intermediate miles Carman and Gibbon manipulated the tandem, and F. W. Young, Jas. Crow and Robt. Jaffray filled the gaps on single machines. The record breaker stood the ordeal well, finishing with a fine burst of speed, and had the day been warmer he would, doubtless, have gone the century. Geo. Orr and J. E. Doane acted as timekeepers.

A party of hunters which goes north from Peterborough every year and which is composed almost entirely of professional men from Eastern Ontario towns passed through this morning en route for the Gull lake region. Breakfast was partaken of at the Snowden. The party is composed of John Coates, Prescott; H. Wallace, Prescott; H. and E. Pratt, Ottawa; Dr. Reddick, Winchester; A. J. Ross, Iroquois; Dr. Jones, Dr. Hanna, W. H. Battum, O. Bascom and Z. Bannier of Kemptville.

No Quorum.

The committee of the council appointed to confer with the views of North Monaghan having failed to accomplish anything owing to the township not wishing to act without the advice of the council, a special meeting of the town council was called last night to consider, it is to be assumed, the circumstances of the crisis on the outfall sewer matter. But there was no quorum and, of course, no meeting. It is understood that in the meantime the township will decide upon some course of action, and this will probably be submitted and dealt with at a special meeting of the town council on Saturday night.

THE COLLECTOR'S GLOOMY DEN.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—Payment of one's taxes is always an unpleasant duty, from the popular point of view, but in Peterborough they are paid under conditions that make the process positively repugnant. The office of the collector of taxes is a disgrace to the town—that is the room. At the best a narrow passage, it is dingy, dusty and repulsive. The walls and ceilings are smoke-stained and grimy. The furnishings, consisting chiefly of a rickety screen of dingy wood, has a general gray and foul aspect of decay and desolation. The furniture is worn and frowsy. The heating is inadequate; the coil is placed in a little trench called by courtesy an entrance, opposite the door; a wooden screen walls hermitically, this coil from the collector herself at her shabby desk, and there is no way for the heat to go to her except by convection—crawling along the cob-webby ceiling and sliding down the dingy walls of the rear space, and reaching the floor loaded with microbes and robbed of half its strength, while the other half is substantially counteracted by the blasts of cold, laden with street dust that come in with every opening of the door, which on a busy day comes very frequently. To permit a little of the heat to reach her person the collector has had two or three of the boards that comprise the mangy wainscoating knocked out opposite the heater; but as this creates a fight between the cold draught from the oft opening door and the heat from the coil, which generally ends in a draw, the benefit is doubtful. But perhaps this is a blessing in disguise. Possibly our town fathers, from the brilliantly intimate knowledge of sewers they have recently displayed, consider that sewage-engendered microbes are least dangerous when benumbed by cold, and that the collector had better perish by freezing than to be made a pray well warmed and lively microbes. Seriously the sanitary condition of the collector's office is abominable. To the rear, the horse stables and the police cells contribute their quota of foul air. Below, rotting and rotten sewage gases filter through the floor and poison the air. This place is simply a disgrace to any half civilized town. It is cramped, dingy, dirty, foul with poisonous gasses, the furniture is shabby, the office conveniencies are incomplete, and the only pleasant thing about it is the smiling face of the collector as she hands you a receipt for your heavy bill of taxes, which you are "dead sure" are not piled up by improvements on the collector's office, with which even no livery stable office in town would suffer by comparison. Who will look into the matter and make the much needed improvement?

Yours respectfully,
DISGUSTED TAXPAYER.

GENERAL BOOTH IS BANQUETTED.

ANOTHER INSTALMENT OF HONOURS TO THE VETERAN GENERAL.

Thousands Crowd to Hear the 19th Century Crusader—Immense Gathering in the George Street Church—Christianity Practically Defined—The Drill Shed Packed With People—The General's Light on Darkest England—Departed at Midnight.

A large audience, composed principally of ladies, assembled in the George street Methodist church yesterday afternoon to hear General Booth speak upon the subject of "How to Become a Christian." By the great number of Salvation Army lassies who were present, it is evident the barracks in the adjacent towns and villages, where the Army have established posts, but which will not be visited by the General and his party, must for the occasion.

The large number of babies which were present in the church and the numerous squeaks and squalls which proceeded from their wee bodies, caused the General to remark that if the little ones created a noise while he was speaking, that he would give them the floor, as he could not follow his subject unless perfect quiet was maintained. Notwithstanding this rather plain hint, all the babies remained in church, but, finally, such an uproar was created that the General had to insist on their removal before he would continue his discourse. During the service no less than eight children had to be removed and even then others remained and by their plaintive wails.

The proceedings in the church were opened by the singing of a hymn. Afterwards Colonel Lawlor offered a brief prayer, which was followed by the rendering of a hymn by those present while still on their knees. The general himself then led in prayer, after which Colonel Lawlor sang a solo in the chorus of which all joined.

Some verses of scripture were then read by the General after which he launched out into the subject of his sermon, "How to become a Christian."

At first the war-worn soldier seemed weak, physically, but he warmed to his work, gathered strength as he went, and interested his audience for an hour.

In order to ascertain what Christianity was, it was by any means, he held, to go into the stores and offices, factories and workshops in order to ascertain how men who called themselves Christians conducted themselves. This was not the way such knowledge was to be obtained. All had to go to the fountain head—to the Master—to the Lord Jesus Christ himself and by the study of his life and of his death, gather the information of which they were in search. If one wanted to know something of Mohommedism they would go to Mahomet, or if of Wesleyism to Wesley. It was so simple a child would think of it. In order to be a Christian, said he, one must be in possession of the spirit of Christ. Except a man be converted, he born anew,

NOT THE CORRECT THING

HE CANNOT ENTER

into the kingdom of Christ. It was not the exercise of ceremonies, the partaking of the sacrament, the reading of the Scriptures or the giving of alms, which was required, but righteousness. What a man is in the spirit, said he, he is in life. If he is a hero in spirit a hero he will be in life even if he is no bigger than Tom Thumb, and if a coward in spirit, he will be a coward in life, though the size of Goliath. If a devil in spirit, a devil will he be in life, and if a Christian in spirit, so will he be in life. You cannot, he claimed, keep the holy law of God with an unholy heart.

REAL PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY was what was needed and unless a man led such a life, he could not expect to be living a life which was satisfactory to him. Thousands did not become Christians, because in joining a church they were afraid so doing would interfere with their pleasures. Such people did not really desire to become Christians. Every man had a dominant purpose and he made everything give way before it. If, therefore, his dominant purpose was to become a Christian, would he let such small matters stand in his light. Jesus Christ had a dominant purpose. It was to save the souls of men. In order to be true to their purpose, he had —everything, even to the society of the Almighty and life itself. Go out therefore, exhorted he, and do the work like Christ, Leave your paradise, if you are in one. Leave your joys and pleasures to go out and do His work. Everything, continued he, is against a Christ-like life. Your bodies are against it, the world is against it and the devil is against it, but no one would ever attain the kingdom of God and enter the golden gates without a fight and a brave fight. If you want to be a victorious saint, said he in conclusion, you must make the full surrender of all you have and of all you are to yourself. Then, and then only, will the Saviour open up His arms to you.

GIVEN UP EVERYTHING

The service was then concluded with the benediction pronounced by the General.

Nearly all the clergy in the town were in attendance at this afternoon meeting.

THE BANQUET.

The General was escorted back to the barracks by the soldiers and his staff.

Great preparations had been made by the officers and soldiers of the local corps for supplying the wants of the inner man, and a splendid spread was laid. Their idea was evidently a happy one, for between four and five hundred sat down to supper and all spent a most enjoyable time. The proceeds will be applied to the work in the Dominion.

Long, long before eight o'clock, the citizens were hurrying from every quarter of the town towards the drill shed in order to obtain favourable seats from which to hear the General explain his scheme for the relief of darkest England. The capacious drill shed, with its tier after tier of benches was crowded with those interested in hearing of this great work which General Booth is about to endeavour to execute. The building walls and ceilings were brilliantly decorated by Messrs. Turner & Son., with flags and bunting. The bright hues amid the lights had a splendid effect.

At eight o'clock the chair was taken by Mayor Kendry, and after the usual enthusiastic devotional exercises the great visitor addressed himself to his subject, which was,

DARKEST ENGLAND.

The General in opening said that in talking on this question it would be difficult to disassociate his own name and personality from it, and it was not the most congenial thing to be compelled to make references to himself, but he would do the best he could under the circumstances, for the cause must not be allowed to suffer through any feeling of his. "What shall I say? Where shall I begin? Where leave off?" asked the speaker. He wanted to make his ideas so plain that they could be comprehended by everyone. He did not care to lay claim to originality in his scheme outlined in "Darkest England," and it was charged that it was but a hash up. He did not care so long as it worked. When Solomon said there was nothing new under the sun he had never seen

THE SALVATION ARMY.

His scheme might be compared to an Irish stew, but he was willing to stick to the stew till his critics produced a turkey or chicken instead. "Darkest England" still holds the fort, and the speaker declared that he was giving an object lesson to the world. In great cities great evils exist, and these right in the cities of the loudest tongued professions of Christianity. Not alone in England, but in Australia, Africa and America he had found them. The speaker said he would divide those to be reclaimed into several classes.

First were the destitute and starving. The description of the homes into which the poor of the great cities are often huddled

WAS A VIVID ONE.

One room to be born in, to be raised in, to work in, to live in, to be sick in and to die in, without scarcely a ray of sunlight or a breath of fresh air. Under such circumstances, morality is difficult, and religion almost impossible.

Second, the vicious and drunkards. What will be done with them? In a manner they are cruel, selfish creatures, injuring others and sacrificing their own destiny here and hereafter. Still they are to be pitied, and thousands lie helpless, unable to shake off the shackles. Should not something be done?

Third, the harlots. Society fails in its duty to those poor creatures, who are offered upon the altar of man's selfishness. He drew a vivid picture of the vices of Piccadilly, and the ruination of thousands of girls from 12 to 14 years of age. Something must be done, for society and friends will have NOTHING TO DO WITH THEM.

Fourth, the criminals. If a cab-horse falls down, we lift him up, take him to the barn and give him oats, till he is strong enough to resume work. That is what is asked for the criminals. He showed a pair of boots, worn by himself, made by an ex-convict, who had been rescued by the Army and was now in charge of their boot making establishment. When criminals get out of prison, there are three things which they can do—commit suicide, starve or work. They are seldom public spirited enough to do the first. We help others in trouble—why not help them? Society to help them. No one will engage an ex-convict, and they cannot be blamed. How is it to be done?

Fifth, the unemployed. It is said that there are 1,000,000 tramps in the United States. How jolly they are! With no taxes, no car fares, no political struggles—they live tourists, and go to a tourist's grave. In Australia they live on the fat of the land, and are fed whenever they demand it. Something must be done to reclaim this class.

How will the wilderness be turned into a garden? "My scheme," said the General, "is not one of amelioration, but actual deliverance. $50,000,000 is now spent each year under the Poor Relief Law in England and $50,000,000 is spent in private charity, but at the end of the year nearly prevails as before. Why? Because it is dealt out on wrong principles. According to the plan proposed by him he thought that $50,000,000 per year for ten years would largely destroy the evils to which he had referred and leave sufficient property to compensate for the wreckage caused by the transformation.

Grapple with them by combined effort, skill and money. If your friends were hanging to the rigging of a stranded vessel crying for help you would not bring an American organ and a well dressed choir to the shore and sing "Rescue the Perishing" to them. No, you would plunge into the water, and if the men refused, the women would push them in,

GOD BLESS THEM.

People are afraid it will cost them time or money to lift up the fallen, and then they expect at the last day Christ will say, "Well done good and faithful servant," but there will be great disappointments.

The poor are generally classified into the "deserving" and "undeserving," which is all wrong. People grow philosophical over it and work on the survival of the fittest, wanting only to save the unfit. There should be one classification. Help those who are anxious for help and are willing to put forth an effort in their own behalf.

BE NOT HARSH.

in judging of the sins of these people; the class sometimes called under serving differ in their sinning from the deserving, or from perhaps ourselves, only in that they have indulged in what might be called the more vulgar sins, while the others have been guilty of what they might term more refined vices. He did not believe in heredity in vice. He then related how as a little boy he crept upstairs in his night shirt and stole apples for his sisters. His father spent the first half of his life getting a fortune, and the last half spending it. As to his grandfathers and great grandfathers, he did not know. Some sins make poor, while equally black sins make others rich. Do not go too deeply into people's ancestry.

He then went on to show what he gave the unfortunates for a penny. They have 5,000 in the shelters in London. Each gets a warm room, (no bed), hot and cold water, a piece of bread, and an hour's Salvation Army service for a penny. If one comes in covered with vermin, as the General described, 3,000 strong, he is sent out but once. Some say this is making poverty easy, but why not make it as easy as wealth? If a well dressed man enters a great hotel with a lady on his arm, he is given the best, if he got his money by beating some unfortunate creditor, or even if the woman is his wife. We beat the hotels, we take the people in without question, and we also have family prayer with them.

AND NO ONE ENQUIRES

Show them that they must work out their own salvation. They can't be saved without work.

Reform them. This is the greatest of all. Experience shows that 75 per cent. of all are willing to work, and the other 25 should be compelled to work. It is a crying shame that those who do not want to work should be allowed to idle their time away and be supported by the people. Make them work. Work and many well dressed people have become addicted to the habit. No man ought to eat unless he works. It costs £3 4s 6d to save each fallen girl, and out of 2,500 per year that pass through the Army's hands 70 per cent. are now earning an honest living and leading virtuous lives. Keep the reclaimed ones at work. The three years' experience of the Army had been highly successful. The General said he had gathered about him in 42 different countries, 1,190 officers, 1,990 corps. Slum post, 176; food stations, 21; shelters, 33; farm colonies, 6; total nightly accommodation for the homeless, 4,850; and of soldiers. The strength of the Army does not lie in the uniforms, but in the ardor and zeal for the salvation of souls all about them. There are at present 1,090 engaged alone in the social work, and more can be had. He first placed them at their home, then out to service, and later on to houses across the sea in Canada, Africa and Australia. He said he was keeping his eyes open as to the best thing to do in this connection. At first he asked for £100,000, but got £112,000. He is now some £56,000 short, but he would't lose sleep over it, and hoped to meet some millionaire who might help the army out of the difficulty. He once who gave $100,000 to the fund, and he was prepared to repeat the ceremony under similar conditions, and if it were a lady he might kiss both cheeks. He asked not for a million, but he wanted something to assist the work in Canada, which his son and daughter-in-law were struggling hard to carry on. In Canada there are now eight rescue homes for women, four poor men's shelters, four cheap food depots, one prison gate home, one poor women's night shelter, eight children's shelters and nurseries, two wood yards for giving employment to the poor, one industrial farm and three mission ships, one of which is a steam yacht on the lakes.

IS LARGELY A HABIT,

TENS OF THOUSANDS

Drawing to a close he thanked the audience for their kind attention, and said as there was to be a collection he would be glad if they would help his poor people as they were able.

His address, which lasted nearly two hours, was clever and effective and studded with gems of humour, and applause was frequent and spontaneous.

The chairman said he was sure he voiced the sentiments of the audience in tendering the General a hearty vote of thanks for his very excellent address. The General acknowledged the honour done him in a few well-chosen words.

When the General and his party left last night they were escorted to the station by all the members of the Army who were in town for the day and by a great number of those who had listened to his interesting discourse during the evening. As the train pulled out which bore him away the welkin fairly rang with the volleys and cheers which followed the illustrious old man, who, it is pretty certain, will never again, visit Peterborough.

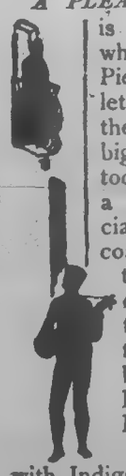
A PLEASANT SURPRISE



is in store for you when you buy Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. If you ever took the ordinary liver pill, big and bulky, nasty too, you'd appreciate a good thing, especially when it is sugar-coated, tiny as a mustard seed but very effective. Other things being equal, the smallest is the best in liver pills—hence, "Pleasant Pellets."

If you are troubled with Indigestion, Constipation, Biliousness, Bilious Headaches, and a hundred and one ills which depend upon an inactive liver,—use Dr. Pierce's Pellets. With these pills you get not only temporary relief but a positive cure; they're guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or your money is returned.

For fat people who suffer from indigestion, for hearty eaters and high livers—those whose livers are sluggish, this pill is what is most needed.

Take a Pellet after dinner.

ENDURING EXTREME COLD.

How a Man and His Wife Slept in a Sixty-Two Below Zero Atmosphere.

The second week in January we received word that Mrs. Abrey was in Battleford waiting to join us in camp. She had come from Toronto, and had traveled across the open country in the mail sleigh from Qu'Appelle to Battleford via Duck Lake and Carleton.

Mr. Abrey immediately left with two horses and carrioles (i.e. toboggans with raised sides of rawhide) and one half-breed. He carried no tent.

The distance to Battleford from our camp was over 100 miles, through an open country, with here and there clumps of small poplar and birch.

I went on with the line, and the third day after Mr. Abrey left us reached the shore of Frog Lake, a few years later the scene of a horrible massacre. The next morning the cook came bustling in with the breakfast, his short sleeves as usual rolled up above his elbows.

"The bottom's dropped out of the thermometer," he said with a laugh.

I hurried outside, and, sure enough, the spirit had deserted the tube, and lay inclosed in a bulb—that is, it was lower than 62 degrees Fahrenheit.

It was startling, but there war no getting round the fact.

The news spread through the camp, and the men came crowding round to see the unusual phenomenon. One man ventured the opinion thnt we had got to the North Pole by mistake, but they looked upon it more as a joke than any thing else, and were perfectly satisfied because it meant a holiday.

Mr. Abrey had made the rule that when the thermometer went below thirty degrees, Fahrenheit, we would not go on the line. We afterward came to the conclusion that there was nothing to prevent our working at such temperatues, but the rule once established it was impossible to alter it without creating discontent among the men.

I went out that day two miles from home on snowshoes, just to see how it would go, and, although it was cold at starting, I was warm enough before I got back.

The next night the thermometer went down to 58 degrees, Fahrenheit, and the third night to 61 degrees, Fahrenheit.

Now, according to all precedent, we should have spent those three nights cowering with quaking hearts over the stoves, and using up the cook's fat to make the fires burn. As a matter of fact we went to bed as usual and slept without any fire at all.

Not only that, but we suffered no discomfort. The only unpleasant thing about it was turning out of one's blankets in the morning to light the fire, and that, I admit, was cold, but still nothing that a strong man could not stand with equanimity.

But what will be thought when I state that during those three days of extreme cold Mr. and Mrs. Abrey were on their way from Battleford to Fort Pitt, and slept out without any tent, and without keeping up a fire through the night?

If a Canadian surveyor's wife could do this, a Canadian surveyor can get to the North Pole.—Stuart Jenkins, in Popular Science Monthly for September.

Light and Germs.

In respect of the effect of light on germ growth, observations have from time to time been chronicled showing that both diffuse daylight, and still more distinctly sunlight, possess an all important effect in destroying microbes. One of the latest researches in this direction shows that a particular germ, which is associated with the pus (or matter) of wounds, if exposed for three or four hours to sunlight, loses the power of producing its characteristic color, while if the exposure be extended the germ itself is killed. The result is in accord with what we know of the effect of light on other germs.

Thousands of cases of rheumatism have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This is abundant reason for belief that it will cure you.

STILL EXTANT.

Are Some Old Virginian Customs of a Hundred Years Ago.

The genuine untouched Virginian of to-day has often been declared to be the most complete survival of Eighteenth Century England now in existence. There are certain Eighteenth Century customs and phrases and manners in common use there that have not been heard of in a hundred years in England. One of the quaintest is a custom of the road which died out in England when the post road and the traveling chariot went out of vogue,

In those days it was considered almost an affront for one traveling in a carriage to drive past another going the same way. The traveling class was made up generally of the rich and leisurely, and as they bowled along in their coaches to have another coach dash by and give back its dust and perhaps incite the coachman to a rage was considered highly indecorous. To "take one's dust" was a common expression of contempt. The custom was not without its uses in its day. But will it be believed that at the close of the Nineteenth Century this etiquette of the road is rigidly maintained, and that among well-bred people each equipage has to take the gait of the slowest?

True it is, some iconoclasts and outsiders drive past their fellow-travelers without compunction, but they, therefore, prove their claims to be called iconoclasts and outsiders. When it is a very pressing case, an apology is called out such as, "Pray, excuse me, but my horse is restless," or "I am in haste to catch the boat," or something of the kind. But to drive ruthlessly ahead without a word of apology is considered the acme of ill-breeding.

The roads in this part of the world are not interesting, except for their natural beauty, as the people of wealth, following their English ancestors in practice, sought a proud seclusion for their houses. Only the poorest people built their homes on the main road, and one may travel from one end of this fair country to the other and not find a single handsome residence on the public highway. There was another and very practical reason for abjuring this public highway. Every man's house was at the service of every man, woman and child in the county.

An Arab hospitality obtained and was enjoyed to the full. The people who had undesirable homes were always willing to bestow their company upon their more fortunate neighbors, so that it wouldn't do to be too convenient to the main arteries of travel. Especially was this so when a visit from a family meant the entertaining of two coach horses, a coachman and a maid, for the negroes went visiting with the white people and enjoyed it just as much. Hospitality was one of their great virtues and is still, for those people excel in social virtues, and this particular virtue costs little.

It only meant the killing of a half dozen or more chickens for dinner, when there were hundreds, perhaps, scratching about in the poultry yard; and the gardens were overgrown with vegetables, for which there was neither sale nor consumption. There were icehouses full of ice and meadows full of cows, and ice cream was manufactured in a big tin bucket, turned about in a keg of ice and salt. It took two women and a boy to make ice cream, but it took that many to do everything.

The icehouses are among the most picturesque features in the landscape here. A great mound of earth, thirty or forty feet high, was thrown up around a place that was bricked up and looked like a gigantic well. This was finished at the top by a circular roof. The sides of the mound were graded and turfed, and made nice places for boys and girls to roll down when the short, slippery grass was wet.—Philadelphia Press.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 15.—Thos Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier in this city, has been some ups and downs in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr. Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six boxes worked a complete cure. Mr. Hazelhurst is to-day better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"When I was a Boy,"

Writes Postmaster J. C. WOODSON, Forest Hill, W. Va., "I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character, that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary medicines, and advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. "I have been using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for 30 years, with the most satisfactory results, and can cheerfully recommend it as being especially adapted to all pulmonary complaints. I have, for many years, made pulmonary and other medicines a special study, and I have come to the conclusion that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral occupies a position pre-eminent over other medicines of the class."—Chas. LEAN GIRLS' TROUBLES.

AND SOME OF THE WAYS IN WHICH THEY MAY BE OVERCOME.

The Pound of Flesh That Will Make Her Beautiful—How to Obtain It—Features, Expression, Hair, Complexion, all Changed.

The lack of a pound or two of flesh is often literally all that stands between a woman and her kingdom.

Embonpoint is, however, rarely deliberately courted by our women. For some mysterious reason, however scrawny she may be, the last thing one will succeed in doing is to persuade her that she needs more flesh!

So deep-rooted with us, so widespread, is this fear of becoming stout that it might almost be classed as a national anti-fat instinct.

Yet a little fat is a great beautifier. I recall more than one face that blossomed into unexpected beauty, as its owner took on flesh.

I went to school with a girl whose large acquiline nose was the bete noir of her childhood; but at about two and twenty she began to grow decidedly plump, and the objectionable member forthwith lost its beak-like aggressiveness; the background afforded it by an ampler padding of flesh at the temples, by well-rounded cheeks and a slight doubling of the chin brought it into correct focus, making it a handsome feature.

The woman who seeks to become at once thin and clearer of complexion is attempting what is nigh an impossibility. The thinner one becomes, the duller, the more opaque grows the skin. Colorlessness is not fairness. It has been claimed by good authorities that for "every added pound of flesh the skin becomes a perceptible fraction lighter."

Corpulency is not desirable, but it is better to become a trifle over-plump, if thereby one preserves bloom and freshness.

The women of Europe in the middle and upper classes frequently retain their attractions of person well onto old womanhood—but they generally grow plumper as they grow older. The beauty of la belle Americaine—and very beautiful she is for a brief season—is sadly ephemeral. At a little past middle life, while we retain the alert movements and the proportions of young womanhood, we wear faded, pinched furrowed, brownish-pale faces that would be put to shame by the countenance of a German grandam of 80.

Yankee women earlier than the women of and other country on the face of the globe are forced to combat with hairs and baldness. Other things being equal, the oleaginous secretions that accompany fat will keep at bay these disfigurements.

A very beautiful girl, whose plumpness gave her untold mortification, finally set about reducing her size. She accomplished the attenuation of her full and sweeping proportions in an incredibly short space of time, but at what a sacrifice! Her glorious head of chestnut hair fell out, leaving but a few locks, her eyes lost their brilliancy and strength, and to a great extent their lashes; her once firmly arched rosy lips became not only pale and flabby, but the prey to a very obstinate sort of eczema; and instead of becoming more "graceful" this foolish girl, who had been by no means unwieldly, barely escaped losing the use of her legs altogether.

She was threatened with a very trying disease of the knee-pan, by which it detaches itself and slips down the leg! an affection commoner than is generally believed, and traceable often to innutrition and a collapse of the general system.

Devotion to gastronomy, laughter and plenty of sleep is said to be the prime promoter of plumpness. At any rate, the woman who proposes to train her flesh may well take her cue from the system of feeding and "passive exercise" now in vogue in the private "Nervines" frequented by the fashionable and wealthy. The patient in these nervines is compelled to gorge, as it were, to make up for years of faulty alimentation.

"Digestives" that secure speedy and complete assimilation are taken with each meal and successfully intercept bilious disorders and uncomfortable sensations of repletion.

Usually, the menu is a restrictive one at first, consisting of little besides milk, which more than any other one food contains all that is essential to the making of blood, bone and fat, and eggs, which administer directly to the nerve and brain force. An egg and a glass of milk, alternately, every two hours, is the initial quantity often prescribed. Later on, a gallon of milk and a dozen eggs, in addition to such highly nutritive dainties as toasted bananas, pate de fois gras sandwiches, hot chocolate, whipped cream flummeries and a pound of tenderloin steak are disposed of daily with positive nonchalance by the woman who four or six months earlier had scarcely been able to make away with a glass of wine and a chicken's wing.

An excellent "digestive" is found in a powdered preparation called "diastoids." I have known several emaciated girls who sought plumper contours to take a spoonful of this powder in the "bumper gigantic" of milk they drank each day.

Coffee, tea, lemonaide, condiments and toasts are partaken of sparingly; and the frequency with which meals come is a great item as directly after eating there is a tendency to inactivity which is in itself conductive to fat.

Massage takes the place of gymnastic and all violent sports for the spare girl who still must if she would have firm flesh and healthy pliant muscles give her body more all-round exercise than comes from walking, going up and down stairs lifting and reaching, sewing, writing, dressing and the like.

The kneading, the pounding, the squeezing and the pressures and incessant flexings that make up an hour of massage insures pliancy and tone for each muscle and ligature and thus also quicken somewhat respiration, circulation and excretion.

The seeker after plumpness furthermore should take her daily airing in a carriage, and not on foot. If a carriage is out of question, an excellent substitute, for the country girl, at any rate, is found even in winter in plenty of fur robes and a well-cushioned arm-chair placed in a sequestered corner of the broad piazza. Here she may sit, filling up her lungs with oxygen, with perfect safety for an hour at a stretch. This stationary "constitutional" is quite as beneficial as the drive in a close carriage.

I have heard that one of our society leaders, whose least word, act or caprice of toilet sets a precedent, has had a low board platform built and placed in the little yard at the back of her town house. On every sunny morning during the past winter the platform has been spread with skins; this beauty and social lawgiver, enveloped in a pelisse of fur and half hidden in the capacious embrace of a sleepy hollow arm-chair, with footstool and Norwegian footmuff for her aristocratic little feet, has sunned and oxygeniated herself without doffing peignoir!

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form. Excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Gives Instant Relief.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause from Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

THE HANGMAN OF PARIS.

A Much-Hated Individual, Who Is Master of His Business.

Deibler, the Parisian hangman, or "Monsieur de Paris," as he is often called, is naturally unpopular among his countrymen, although on one occasion he was received courteously and welcomed by the citizens of the place where he was about to show his expert ability as an executioner. This was at Rouen, where he went to guillotine a man named Gamelin, who had brutally murdered a little girl. The feeling against the scoundrel was so strong that Deibler was respectfully saluted by the populace as he went from his hotel to the place of execution. "Monsieur de Paris" is a thorough master of his grewsome calling, and says he never felt at all nervous on the scaffold except when taking part in the execution of Ravachol, the anarchist. After this noted criminal had been bound he was put into the hearse to be conveyed to the place of execution, some distance in the town. Though perfectly livid, he began howling a vile song and kept it up till the guillotine was reached. He endeavored to address the enormous crowds assembled, but the assistant executioners forced him on the bascule. The howls and imprecations of the anarchist continued with such fury that Deibler for a few moments became unnerved, but he speedily recovered himself. He released the knife, and as it whizzed down the groove the crowd heard the anarchist shout: "Vive la repu——" The official standing by the guillotine affirmed that as the head dropped into the basket the lips distinctly emitted the concluding syllable "blique." The assertion gave rise to a good deal of controversy among the French savants, but it was generally conceded that the guillotine severs the head with such terrific suddenness that it was possible the sound which the fellow was uttering was emitted after the knife had actually performed its deadly work.

M. Deibler has a fortune of about $80,000, and receives for his work as executioner $300 per month. He lives quietly and is generally believed to be saving over one-half his salary.—Chicago Tribune.

Quack Advertisements

Are a nuisance and we think it behooves publishers to examine into the merits of many articles puffed up in their columns. We do not deny that many meritorious remedies are properly to be classed under this heading. Take the hundreds and thousands relieved from severe suffering by the use of Polson's Nerviline; would it not be unreasonable to expect them to condemn that far-famed remedy? Now we know for a fact that Polson's Nerviline is without exception the most powerful, pleasant and certain remedy in the world for pain. It cannot fail, for it goes right to the bottom of pain, penetrates to the nerves, soothes them into quietness, and affords prompt and permanent relief.

ON TRIAL FOR HIS LIFE.

John Warnock, of Tilbury, Charged With Killing John Radcliffe.

CHATHAM, Oct. 19.—The trial of John Warnock for the murder of John Radcliffe, of Tilbury, on September 10 is going on here. Walter O'Hara was the first witness, and testified as to the correctness of the plan of the vicinity of the crime produced.

Joseph Reid was next called. Reid, it will be remembered, was one of the men in company of the deceased on the night of the crime. To the crown prosecutor he told again the story of the night: He was in company with Thomas Wass, William Haight and Radcliffe on the night in question. About 11 or later they were coming down the main street and noticed Warnock following them. Radcliffe turned back and witnessed crossed the street. He next saw Warnock on top of Radcliffe, striking at him. Witness saw something shining in Warnock's hand. Radcliffe got up, staggered a few paces and then fell in a pool of blood. He shortly after died, and the body was taken to the fire hall. Witness then went with the constables to the Commercial hotel, where Warnock was arrested. After Warnock's arrest witness went back to the hotel with Constable Shaw, where in Warnock's pocket was found a knife like the one produced, and it had blood on it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Osler, witness said: "Neither I nor my companions did anything to irritate Warnock. There was something said to Warnock by one of our party. There was nothing to provoke Warnock, yet we all ran away when we saw him coming. Later in the evening, after the murder, I threw a clod of mud at him. I had four drinks of beer. Haight and Radcliffe were under the influence of liquor. Wass and I were sober. I first saw Warnock on the sidewalk. I did not see him on the street and come on to the sidewalk after. After this evidence the court adjourned.

MGR. SATOLLI'S RED HAT.

His Grace Knows Nothing of the Reported Promotion.

QUEBEC, Oct. 19.—Whatever concerns Monseignor Satolli's visit to this important see of the Roman Catholic church is kept quiet. His calling here is, it is said, but an informal visit of no particular importance. But Monseignor Begin, coadjutor to Cardinal Taschereau, is a strong factor in the movement. Monseignor Satolli held a levee at the Cardinal's Palace which was very largely attended to. The representative men of Quebec and indeed of the province presented themselves at the levee.

As it has been circulated in the press that Mgr. Satolli would shortly receive the Laretta titles and insignia of a cardinal of the Holy Roman Catholic Church, a correspondent sought an interview with his grace, but owing to manifold occupations and engagements the eminent churchman could not be interviewed, but his Grace's secretary, Mgr. Pappi, was authorized to answer to the following effect: "The ablegate is not aware of the promotion alluded to. Newspaper men generally pick up these news sooner than any one else. His Grace, Mgr. Satolli, has no intelligence so far of his elevation in the Roman Catholic hierarchy."

BREACH OF COPYRIGHT.

Mr. Lancefield, of Hamilton, Sues an English and a Toronto Firm.

HAMILTON, Oct. 19.—R. T. Lancefield, librarian, instructed his solicitors to issue writs against Frederick Ware & Co., publishers, of London, Eng., and the Anglo-Canadian Music Publishing Co., of Toronto, for an infringement of the Canadian Copyright Act. The alleged infringement is the selling in Canada of a book entitled "John Bull and Co," which was printed in England. The Canadian copyright says that Canadian copying must be printed in this country.

A demand is also made for royalty on a song entitled "The Man that Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo."

A Cattle Exporter in Difficulties.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—Mr. James Eakins, of Port Hope and Montreal, who has for the last few years been the heaviest exporter of cattle in Canada to Britain, is reported to be financially embarrassed. A few years ago Mr. Eakins was worth about half a million dollars, and even when he started to ship at the beginning of the present season his bank account was a fairly big one. During September and part of this month the British markets have been disastrously weak, and in consequence every exporter lost heavily. His friends, including the banks interested, expect that Mr. Eakins will pull through all right, and by next year will be as active an exporter as ever.

Death of a G.T.R. Caterer.

LONDON, Ont. Oct. 19. — William J. Fowler, proprietor of the G.T.R. refreshment rooms in London and Chatham, was found dead in his room at the station here yesterday. Mr. Fowler had been residing in Detroit, but made weekly business visits to this city. Apoplexy is supposed to have been the cause of death. For 23 years Mr. Fowler had been catering to the travelling public and was well known all over the Grand Trunk system.

Burglars at Inkerman.

INKERMAN, Ont., Oct. 19.—Burglars entered the store of W. R. Sweet, Inkerman, and carried off quite a lot of boots, shirts and clothing. The safe was drilled and powder put in, but the fuse did not work. The postoffice was ransacked, but nothing was taken. There were several registered letters and about thirty dollars in stamps, which were overlooked. No clue.

The Suspended Cadets.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 19.—The cadets who were "rusticated" for having been the most guilty in the hazing troubles at the Royal Military College are Cadets Holden, Weatherbee and Wilby, of St. John, N.B. A despatch received here from the Minister of Militia expresses his wish that Cadet Plummer return to the college.

To Construct Canal and Harbor.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 19.—William Penn Hussey, of Boston, is at Broad Cove, N. S., arranging for the construction of canal and harbor at McIsaac's Lake, to give access by water to Broad Cove coal mine. It is proposed to cut through the sand to the lake and channel. About 16 feet deep will be dredged. Passage from the Gulf will be over 1,300 feet in length and the sides built of crib work. The harbor will be the lake.

Shocking Accident in Prescott.

PRESCOTT, Oct. 19.—While Maggie Leperte, daughter of L. Leperte, of this place, was sweeping a room, she moved a loaded gun standing in the corner and in doing so the trigger caught in her dress and discharged the gun. The shot blew the top of the head off her little brother about five years old, killing him instantly.

CENTREVILLE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

A very successful tea was held in the Presbyterian church here on Tuesday night. The church was literally crowded with the people of the vicinity. The refreshments disposed of, the pastor of the church, Rev. J. Cattanach, took the chair. Excellent addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Johnson, Millbrook, Rev. A. MacWilliams, Peterborough, Rev. T. S. McKee, Fraserville, and Rev. Mr. Pilkey, of Bailieboro. At intervals splendid music was furnished by the choir of St. Andrew's church, Peterborough. The "male quartette" selected from the choir, consisting of Mr. G. W. Mulligan (the talented leader of the choir) H. Jones, H. King and A. Turner, contributed a splendid selection. The "mixed quartette," Miss Fowler, Mrs. Jones and Mr. Mulligan and Mr. H. Jones gave great pleasure in their charming number. What many considered the musical treat of the evening was the solo sung by Mr. Mulligan, "The Holy City." Mr. Mulligan has a splendid voice and sang the grand old song in stirring style.

A most pleasing feature of the occasion was the proof afforded of the friendly spirit existing between the the members of the congregation by the presentation of an address to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Waddel, old and respected residents of Cavan, who will soon, it is said, remove to Peterborough.

THE ADDRESS

which was read by Rev. Mr. Cattanach, was as follows:—

To Mr. and Mrs. Waddell:

DEAR FRIENDS,—The congregation of the Centreville Presbyterian church learn with regret of your intended removal from our midst. We feel that we cannot let you go from among us without some expression of our feelings toward you.

For such a length of time have you been identified with the interests of this congregation, that we shall miss your presence all the more on that account. Not only will we, as a congregation, suffer a loss by your removal, but the community at large as well.

In the work of the church as here [illegible] you both ever ready and willing to do your part faithfully. As teachers in the Sabbath school you have rendered valuable service. To Mrs. Waddell, as President of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, is due especial praise for the very commendable zeal she has ever manifested in the welfare of the society. We feel that her wisdom and sympathetic interest have contributed not a little to the success and usefulness of the society.

We would be derelict in our duty did we not make some tangible acknowledgement of the many good qualities of heart and mind possessed by both of you. In the name and on behalf of the congregation, allow me to present you, Mrs. Waddell, with this chair, as a token of our good will and esteem. May you long be spared to enjoy its restfulness. That the blessings of Almighty God may rest upon you and yours, is our fervent prayer.

Signed on behalf of Centreville Presbyterian church,

JAMES CATTANACH,
Moderator of Session.

The address was suitably acknowledged by Mr. Waddell, and the beautiful chair for Mrs. Waddell was presented by Mr. Byers. The tea was entirely successful in every way. The proceeds amounted to about $80.

OBITUARY.

The Late Mrs. Patrick Young, Sr., of Young's Point.

On Wednesday morning, Oct. 17th, Bridget Sullivan Young, wife of Mr. Patrick Young, sr. passed away at the ripe old age of 81 years. The deceased lady who was a native of Cork County, Ireland, came with the family of Mr. Sullivan, whose youngest daughter she is, to Ennismore, nearly seventy years ago and resided there till her marriage to Mr. P. Young, about 55 years ago, when they removed to Young's Point, where they have since lived. Their union was blessed with seven children—four boys and three girls, of whom four are now living—Mrs. Wm. McFarlane, Young's Point; Mrs. D. Costello, widow of the late Daniel Costello, Peterborough; Mr. C. Young, proprietor of the saw and other mills at Young's Point, and Mr. P. P. Young, lock and slide master of the same place. Mrs. Young was known far and wide for her kindness, warm heartedness and generous hospitality. In the early days of the village when there was little or no hotel accommodation, her house was an open one for the wayfarer, and any neighbour in trouble or adversity was sure of a helping hand from Mrs. Young. Hundreds who have experienced her kindness will hold her name in blessed remembrance. The funeral took place this morning at 10 o'clock, when the remains were laid in the Young's Point Cemetery. Requiescat in pace.

Another Voice From Smith.

SMITH, July 7, 1893.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, and after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

THEY DIED TOGETHER.

Accidentally the Cause of His Betrothed's Death Elliot Titus Suicided.

SEACLIFF, L.I., Oct. 19.—Miss Mary Duff and her betrothed husband, Eliot L. Titus, of Brooklyn, went out for a walk on Tuesday evening. Their dead bodies have been found in a bath-house belonging to the young lady's father.

Edward P. Floyd-Jones, Miss Duff's brother-in-law, reports that the result of the autopsy shows Miss Duff died from the effects of chloroform administered by Titus, but it is thought, without murderous intent. It is now remembered that Titus had a small bottle of chloroform with him the day previous and offered Miss Duff a small quantity to allay a severe headache. It is believed he again prescribed the same in a larger quantity while they were out for a walk and the drug causing her death, Titus shot himself.

The blood on Miss Duff's face and clothing proved to have come from Titus' wounds. No bullet wound was found in Miss Duff's temple as stated yesterday.

Titus was a son of the late Col. Henry Titus, founder of Titusville, Fla. His mother, who is well known in Southern social circles, is still living at Titusville. At her death young Eliot Titus would have been heir to a fortune.

Viscount Drumlarg Accidentally Killed.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Baron Kelhead, better known as Viscount Drumlarg, accidentally discharged his gun and shot himself dead yesterday while hunting at Quantock Lodge, Bridgewater, the estate of E. J. Stanley, M.P. He was the eldest son and heir apparent of the Marquis of Queensberry, and was Lieutenant of the Second Battalion of the Coldstream Guards. He was born in 1867.

A School Inspector Sentenced.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 16.—William C. Edwards, the school inspector convicted of receiving a bribe, was brought into court and sentenced to five years imprisonment in the state prison. His lawyers will endeavor to obtain a new trial.

The Toilers Were Disappointed.

HAMILTON, Oct. 16.—The contractors for the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway were to have set a large force at work yesterday morning, but owing to the non-arrival of tools and the delay in obtaining the right of way only a few men and teams were employed. Nearly 1,000 idle laborers were on the ground and were very much disappointed.

These Were Hard Names.

HAMILTON, Oct. 19.—Martin Malone, barrister, has issued a writ against ex-Alderman Daniel McBride, claiming damages for alleged slander, consisting of allegations to the effect that the plaintiff is a thug, a rogue and a robber. The amount of damages claimed is not stated.

TO TERMINATE THE WAR.

The Powers Are Negotiating to That End—A Rumored Battle.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The Daily News publishes this semi-official statement: "A day or two after the last cabinet council China informed Great Britain that she was prepared to negotiate for peace on certain terms. Great Britain made overtures to the powers on a new basis of negotiation. Japan did not reply definitely, but has not rejected the proposal.

"The majority of the powers are in accord with England, and there is a likelihood that the others will assent. The intervention is purely diplomatic and is offered to both combatants in the friendliest spirit."

A despatch to the Globe from Port Arthur, under date of October 16, says it is reported in native circles that a great battle was fought north of the Yalu river on October 15, but no details are given.

The Robinson Pair Indicted.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 19.—Indictments charging Clarence and Sarah Robinson with murder in the first degree were reported to the superior court this morning. Most of the evidence in the hands of the district attorney was presented to the grand jury yesterday and some minor witnesses were heard. The indictments charge the defendants with murder in the first degree under that provision of the penal code which holds that homicide committed in the act of committing a felony is murder in the first degree. By their own confessions they planned to rob Gibbs and deliberately killed him when he resisted.

Narrow Escape From Death.

BUFFALO, Oct. 19.—Assemblyman Chas. I. Schoepflin had a narrow escape from death here. He was driving with a man in his employ over the Lackawanna tracks at Clinton street when the vehicle in which he was riding was struck by an engine. Mr. Schoepflin and his man were thrown to the side of the track. Mr. Schoepflin was considerably bruised and otherwise injured, but the other man was not hurt. The buggy and harness were ruined, but the horse was not injured. It seemed a miraculous escape.

Dynamite on the Rails.

MCKEESPORT, Pa., Oct. 19.—Dynamite was placed on the track of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Long Rainbridge and a serious wreck narrowly averted. The stock of dynamite was tied to the rails. Bissell accommodation encountered it. The explosion damaged the track and tore off one of the front wheels of the engine. The passengers were badly frightened, but no one was seriously hurt. No motive can be assigned for the deed.

Miss Monroe Wins Her Suit.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—In the United States Circuit Court the jury in the case of Miss Harriet Monroe, of Chicago, against the Press Publishing Company (the New York World) returned a verdict of $5,000 damages against the World. Miss Monroe sued the Press Publishing Company for $50,000 damages for publishing her World's Fair ode without her permission.

The Crew of Four Were Lost.

GREENPORT, L.I., Oct. 19.—D. C. Sage, owner of the Long Island Brick Co., Greenport, and owner of the schooner S. S. Scranton, which was lost in the gale of October 10 near New London, has returned home from the scene of the wreck. He states that the entire crew of four were lost. The report sent out on the 16th that the crew had been saved was unfounded.

The Czar's Death Is Near.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—The Kosinische Zeitung's correspondent in St. Petersburg has sent this despatch: "The Czar appears to be nearing the end. All the members of the imperial family are journeying to Livadia, where, it is reported, Princess Alix of Hesse will be received formally into the church and married quietly to the Czarewitch before Nov. 20."

AT THE CZAR'S BEDSIDE

Relatives of Russia's Sick Ruler Gather Around Him.

ANXIETY IN OFFICIAL CIRCLES

Speculation of the Czarewitch's Future Policy — Important Affairs at a Standstill—Prayers for the Czar Offered Hourly in the Cathedrals

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The correspondent of the Times at St. Petersburg telegraphs: "The Czar has now taken to his bed and his imperial relatives are now gathering around him. With an organic disease such as his the continued decline of strength is one of the most alarming symptoms.

Later symptoms strengthen the belief that the Czar has cancer. It is feared that he is now too ill for the solemnization of the marriage. Accounts of the grief of the Imperial family are heartrending. The anxiety in official circles is very great. All important affairs are almost at a standstill. When the Czar arrived at Livadia he had not slept for ten nights.

A service conducted by the metropolitan palladius in the St. Isaacs Cathedral yesterday was attended by a vast crowd of people in full uniform and private dress. Among the dignitaries present were the Minister of War, Minister of the Interior, Minister of Finance and the Minister of Justice who had just returned to the capital. There were also present the German Charge d'Affaires, Count Read.

Despatches from all parts of the continent show that the whole European press is brimming with articles on the Czar. The vast majority of writers praise him for his love of peace.

Speculation as to the Czarewitch's future policy is rife. No two estimates of his character agree. Many of them are exceedingly unfavorable. The censorship of the St. Petersburg press is reported as being unusually strict.

The Allegemeine Zeitung in Vienna suggests that the Czar is already dead and the fact is concealed as it was in the case of Emperor Nicholas I.

The Russian embassy in Rome received a despatch saying that a miracle alone could save the Czar's life. Prayers are offered hourly in the Russian cathedrals and daily in the Russian churches and chapels of Russian embassies in European capitols.

Review of American Trade.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Bradstreet's says: With few exceptions the leading features of the business situation this week have been those of continual moderate improvement, although the total volume of business, so far as indicated by the bank clearings throughout the country, will require considerable expansion to compare favorably with corresponding totals two years ago. The volume of clearings for six business days ending with Oct. 10 is 2.8 per cent more than the preceding week, and 2.5 per cent. larger than in the third week of October last year, but nearly 31 per cent. smaller than in the corresponding week in 1892. This relatively favorable bank clearings report is off-set in part by a decline in prices of staples, coffee alone scoring a slight advance. There have been 235 business failures in the United States within a week as compared with 233 last week.

A Crank in a New York Bank.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—A crank entered the Clinton Place Bank on Astor Place yesterday. He was a fairly dressed man and put down a check on the window of Paying Teller Hind. The check was signed "Almighty God." The teller then told the man to wait until he could open the safe and get the money. When Hind's head was turned the man shot at him. The man was seized by employes of the bank after he had fired four shots at Hind. The crank's identity could not be ascertained. He refused to say who he was. He was locked up.

Raided a Bucket-Shop.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The bucket-shop of D. H. Valentine at 38 New street was raided by the police yesterday. Eight prisoners, $6,200 in cash and a number of fake quotations were secured. The prisoners were held for trial. This is the place that has become a subject of investigation by the Lexow committee.

Two Boys Hanged.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 20.—Otto Wanigkeit and Charles Ermisch were executed here. Not a word was spoken by either. The crime for which the two boys were hanged was the shooting of Bartender Lindhoff on the night of May 2nd last. The boys were 17 and 19 years old respectively.

Fort Madison's First Hanging.

FORT MADISON, Ia., Oct. 20.—The first execution in the history of the penitentiary here occurred yesterday, the victim being James O. Dooley, the youthful murderer of his aunt and cousin near Prescott, May 1, 1893. Dooley went to the gallows bravely.

THE GIBSON ACT COMMENDED

Its Proper Enforcement Would Cover All Phases of the Work—Evil of Lying-in Hospitals—The Officers of the New Provincial Society.

TORONTO, Oct. 20.—There was an increased attendance yesterday at the conference on Child-Saving Work. Judge McDonald, of Brockville, again presided.

Among the new comers were Hon. Adam and Mrs. Brown, Mrs. McLaren, Chief McKinnon, of Hamilton; Miss Gaviller, secretary of the Girl's Home, Hamilton; N. Higginbotham, president Humane Society, Guelph; Mrs. B. F. Campbell, Brooklin; Nathaniel Sheepwash, Missing; Mrs. Hepinstall, Toronto.

Rev. J. E. Starr, agent of the Children's Aid Society of Toronto, led the discussion on "The Children's Protection Act of 1893," also known as the Gibson Act. The enforcement of this act thoroughly would cover all phases of the work, he thought.

That part of "Visiting Committees" now established throughout the province, was described by J. J. Kelso. He found them of great service.

Messrs. Thomas R. Parker, treasurer of the Children's Aid Society of London, and S. M. Thompson, secretary of Children's Aid Society of Brantford, described the work of their local societies. Hon. Adam Brown, J. J. Kelso, T. R. Parker, London, and Rev. J. R. Black, Kingston, also spoke.

J. J. Kelso said the whole spirit and meaning of the Act was to place the cases entirely in the hands of the agents of the society. He recommended that where magistrates are not in accord with the spirit of the Act in allowing private trials, cases be taken before the County Judge.

The afternoon session was a ladies' one. They were there in large numbers. Rev. J. R. Black, of Kingston, reported from the committee on resolutions in favor of a provincial organization to secure unity of action and to assist in the spreading of the work of child-saving. Judge Macdonald, of Brockville, who had so acceptably filled the chair during the conference, was proposed as president, Superintendent Kelso, Toronto, as secretary-treasurer, and an executive committee of John Armstrong, Owen Sound; P. H. Bartlett, London; James Watson, Hamilton; E. B. Edwards, Peterboro; Dr. Oldright, Toronto; G. M. McDonell, Q. C., Kingston, and S. M. Thompson, Brantford.

Another resolution was to recommend that magistrates be given power to use discretion in ordering corporal punishment for juvenile offenders, even without the consent of parents, as at present necessary, and that the Dominion Government should pass legislation to that end. There were votes of thanks to the chairman and to Superintendent Kelso for their admirable conduct of arrangements during the conference and to Mr. J. K. Macdonald for the use of the beautiful Confederation Assembly Hall. These resolutions were all adopted.

Mrs. Leigh, secretary of the Protestant Orphans' Home, Toronto, outlined the work done there. Miss K. S. Scott, matron of the Boys' Home, similarly dealt with that institution. Miss M. H. Simpson, of Hamilton, spoke of the work done by the Girls' Home in that city. Superintendent Kelso strongly advocated the adopting-out plan of the children's aid societies as one that would eventually dispense with the need of industrial schools. Mr. J. Sanders, of London, spoke of the working of the home in that city.

Inspector Archibald spoke about baby farms, introducing his very vigorous and spicy remarks by dealing with the question of desertion of children and urging that the courts should act more stringently in making the fathers contribute to the support of their children. So many baby farms in Toronto are due, he said, to the lying-in hospitals that are in the city, betrayed girls from rural towns and villages thus endeavoring to hide their shame. The Act of 1893 had made it difficult to continue the evil practices that were till then notorious in baby farms. Now the plan of paying a lump sum to baby-farmers for the adoption of children was in use and recently disgusting disclosures of the baby killing practices resorted to under the adoption plan had startled the public. Legislation making such adoption a criminal offence was imperatively needed. He advocated a system of careful registration of mothers of infants placed in homes as leading to the detection of the fathers.

Lewd posters were talked about entertainingly by County Crown Attorney Curry, and Mrs. Macdonell, seconded by Mrs. Helliwell, moved that the conference recommend that legislation be secured enforcing an inspection of all posters by proper authorities before being put up on the bill boards and walls.

The conference, which must necessarily lead to an awakened interest throughout the country in the work of child-saving, came to an end with a vote of thanks to the chairman and the singing of the National Anthem and the Doxology.

BY SALARY OR FEES?

Eastern Opinions on the Prevailing System in the Province.

GIVES GENERAL SATISFACTION

Election to the Various Offices Unanimously Discouraged—Some Hints Thrown Out With Regard to Other Appointments—The License System.

OTTAWA, Oct. 20.—At the second session of the Ontario Fees Commission Mr. Joseph Kavanagh, vice-president of the Board of Trade, was first called at the morning session. He was in favor of all officers being under the control of the government, at stated salaries. Regarding fees it was his opinion that a fixed sum would be in accordance with the constitution of the country, salaries to be fixed at a fair sum, considering the position, duties and responsibilities, as well as social standing of the officers, sheriffs especially. Regarding the appointment of license commissioners he thought the county councils should appoint one and government two, and that these should have no political influence or take any part in politics. He would not favor the election of them by the people. He would not favor the election by the people of any of the officers. In the matter of deputy sheriffs he would like to see them appointed by the sheriffs themselves at a stated salary.

Mr. Charles Magee, president of the Bank of Ottawa, went over the list of questions seriatim. He would add that police magistrates should be precluded from practising law and paid a sufficient salary commensurate with the position and put the increase on the city. He considered that the city should have some say in the appointment of the commission. With regard to the inspectors, they should be appointed by the city. The present system was not desirable, as it was subject to influences. He favored the present system regarding Division Court clerks and bailiffs. In the matter of payment the officers should be paid by salary and appoint their own deputies, with salaries regulated by the officer.

Owing to a remark of Mr. Magee, the Chancellor explained that where a vacancy occurs the local county judge becomes the Master-in-Chancery. That law was already in force and several appointments of that kind had already been made in the province.

Warden Conn, of Carleton County, said: "Registrars of Deeds should at least be recommended to the County Council, who would submit at least half a dozen names irrespective of politics or religion to the Government. He held that the Government should have the appointment. Sheriffs should be also appointed by the Government with a recommendation from the County Council. The county should at least have the appointment of one license commissioner. The system of election by the people would ruin the independence of the offices. All the money received as fees should be handed over to the Government, and the officers paid a fixed salary."

Mr. Charles Mohr, reeve of Fitzroy, considered that the registrar should be appointed by the County Council at a salary of $1,500, or that names should be submitted from the Council to the Governments, but only residents of the county. He had always held the position that a salary for sheriffs would prove more satisfactory. Regarding Division Court clerk they should be appointed by the judge and the bailiffs by the clerks. The clerk would thus have more control over his bailiff. In the question of payment he would allow the system of fees to go on. He could not give much opinion on the license system, but there was a prevailing opinion that each municipality should have control of the system. Still, in the interests of temperance and morality he thought the present system was sufficient.

DRANK CARBOLIC ACID.

A Brantford Carpenter Ends His Life in a Mysterious Manner.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 20.—Robert Turner, aged 45, a carpenter, committed suicide yesterday by drinking carbolic acid. His son on going down stairs to the dining-room saw a pass book on the table, which was not there the previous night. In the pass book was written the following:

"BRANTFORD, Oct. 19, 1894, 3 o'clock in the morning.—This is my last voyage on earth. I have been tired of life for the last five weeks. God forgive my poor wife and all the curses of hell be put upon Miss D—— and J—— and Mrs. ——. God protect my little girl Nina. God bless my son Tom. (Signed) R. A. TURNER."

The boy went immediately to his father's room and found him in bed, life having passed away, though the body was still warm. A doctor was summoned, but it was too late. A bottle which had contained carbolic acid was found on the table. Deceased has been drinking some of late, but nothing appeared wrong when he retired at night and no cause can be found for the rash act. His wife is in the hospital suffering from inflammation.

A Bye-Election in Quebec.

MONTREAL, Oct. 20.—An election took place yesterday in Compton County for the Local Legislature to fill the vacancy caused by the appointment of the Hon. John McIntosh to the shrievalty of Sherbrooke. The constituency has been Conservative without a break since Confederation and the returns show that Mr. McClary, the Conservative candidate, is returned by over 700, with a few polls to hear from, over Mr. St. Laurent, Liberal. The election partook of some interest because of the retirement of Hon. J. S. Hall, the only English minister in the cabinet. Though Compton now has a small French majority on the voter's list, national lines seem to have been forgotten.

A CHANCE FOR RETRENCHMENT AND LOWER TAXATION.

EVERYBODY feels that we are in the grip of hard times and every wise and prudent man adopts a degree of retrenchment and economy in proportion to the demands of his circumstances. If money is tight expenditure must be light. But our Dominion Government seems to be above such childlike considerations of prudent and economical handling of the public funds, or of lessening the burdens of the people. The high taxation policy is so beneficial to the government in the relation of monetary milch cow,—providing through its chief beneficiaries abundant supplies of "sugar," not the literal variety which is taxed, not for the benefit of the public revenue, but for the benefit of the refiners who are supposed to be good for a quid pro quo, when the time for the conflict demands the sinews of war. Instead of being reduced, the bill of taxes becomes greater every year, and the expenditures larger out of all proportion to the value received on the public works which have been constructed at almost double cost. It is, perhaps, no exaggeration to point out that most of the public works built under government control cost from one quarter to one half more than legitimate expenditure would require. Only partial investigation has shown that there could, without impairing the integrity of the public service, be an immense reduction of public expenditure that would warrant a corresponding reduction in the burden of taxation. To show how great has been the waste of public funds, a competent authority thus invites consideration of the results of the investigation of a single session of Parliament, in which the Opposition gave themselves largely to the work of investigation:

Beginning with the famous works constructed by Larkin, Connolly & Co., the cost to the country was $3,139,224. The actual cost to the contractors was $2,184,350. This, after deducting a fair profit from the actual profit of nearly a million for the contractors, shows a clear loss of over $700,000 for the Government. Mr. Senecal's commission on purchases for the Printing Bureau amounted to $50,000, which must ultimately have come out of the people through the Government. A fair estimate by the Government commission of the cost of the Curran bridge was $160,000, while the actual cost was $430,000, a net loss of $270,000. The well known Sheik's Island dam cost the country unnecessarily $125,000. Little Rapids lock was estimated to cost $41,000. The actual cost was $200,000, and there are unpaid claims amounting to $90,000, a net loss of $256,000. The estimated cost of the Tay Canal (Haggart's ditch) was $132,000. It has cost $476,123, a loss of $343,468. As this work serves no public purpose the entire cost could be divided between waste and dishonesty. Campaign contributions were recouped by subsidies to the St. John Railway to the extent of $25,000. The St. Charles branch of the Intercolonial Railway, fourteen miles long, was estimated to cost between $130,000 and $140,000, and the actual cost to the country was $1,750,000. Making allowance for contingencies, this shows a loss comfortably over $1,000,000. The drawback of duties on steel used in the renewal of the bridges of "original construction" of the Canadian Pacific Railway was equal to a loss of revenue of at least $200,000. These items, together with $450,000, for two revisions under a useless franchise act, make the startling total of $3,419,468. It may be urged that these represent peculations and abuses extending over several years. But it must be remembered that only a portion, often a very small portion, of the indefensible acts of an administration are ever detected. Unfortunately the list is by no means exhausted. The maintenance of Senate wastes over $140,000 of the public money every year. Neither political party is exclusively to blame for the establishment of this institution. The impossibility of devising a useful second chamber had not been conclusively demonstrated at Confederation. It has since been made so clear that any party assumes a serious responsibility in seeking to prolong its existence.

In addition to the downright waste that can and must be stopped, there are also economies that could be made that would add at least another million to the three and a half millions of waste recorded as the approximate total that could be saved by honesty, retrenchment, such as reducing the expense of maintaining our Governor General, by $50,000; reducing superannuation by at least $100,000; Dominion police expenditure $10,000; our standing army, $235,000; our mounted police force, $335,000; salaries of ministers and expenses of too many departments, $50,000; Dominion Franchise Act, $100,000; immigration, $90,000; reduction of Senate, $75,000, or extirpation of the Senate, $150,000. In fact a large saving could be effected by honest Government which we shall never get from our present administration, for their following is largely composed of a class that more or less directly benefits from improper or wasteful expenditures. As the leopard cannot change its spots, so the present Government cannot change its policy. If the people wish to be ruled prudently and honestly they must change the Government.

If you wish to secure a certain and speedy result, when using Ayer's Sarsaparilla, be careful in observing the rules of health, or the benefit may be retarded. A fair and persistent trial of this medicine never fails, when the directions are followed.

A Remarkable Event.

An event which has been the talk of the town for some weeks is the cure of Mr. Edward White, whose sufferings from Salt Rheum (Eczema) were well known. Mr. White's statement is as follows:

For 12 years previous to the last few months I have been a sufferer of the worst kind from Salt Rheum. I tried twelve different doctors, besides many patent medicines but received no benefit, but gradually became worse. Last January I was advised to try B. B. B. by the postmaster here. I soon perceived a decided change for the better, and it only took six bottles to make a complete cure.

Mr. J. B. Bowser, Merchant; Mr. Jas. W. Boyer, Manufacturer, and Mr. Thos. W. Letson, J. P., can certify to the truth of the above statement.

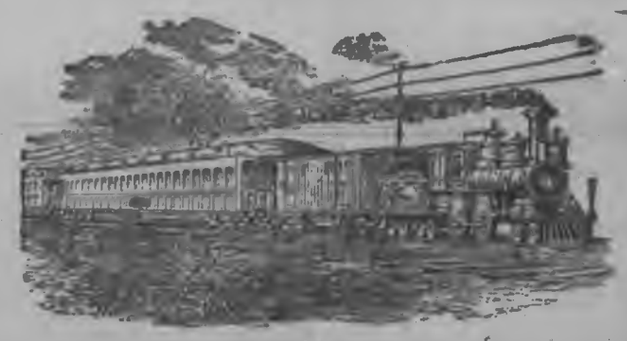
Dangers Ahead of the Iron Steed.

Locomotive Engineers and Their Tremendous Responsibilities.

A Clear Head, Steady Nerves and Keen Eyes are Indespensible.



Of the thousands of men, women and children who daily travel over our great net-work of Canadian railways, few, very few, realize the many dangers and perils that are at all times ahead of the swift and powerful steam horse.

Swing bridges, tunnel bridges, spans of mouldering and rotten timbers, wash-outs, misplaced switches, broken rails, wrong signals and errors in train dispatching; all, in turn, contribute to scenes of ruin, agony and death. Communities and nations are frequently appalled when some awful catastrophe has occurred — some train tumbling into a chasm, canyon or river, and hundreds of souls launched into eternity.

Locomotive engineers shoulder tremendous responsibilities as their impetuous iron steeds bound through cities, towns, forests, mountain passes, and over rapid streams and torrents. While they hourly carry their own lives in their hands, they are really the custodians of other people's lives.

Notwithstanding the fact that parliament has enacted laws for the protection of railway travellers, and that progressive and honest railway corporations have in use the most modern appliances that can conduce to the safety of trains; yet, with all these measures of protection, the engineer is the all-important agent. He must have courage, good judgment, a clear head and brain, steady nerves, and quick eye, in order to insure safety to all who are compelled to use our fast express and mail trains.

Fortunately for us the large majority of our locomotive engineers possess all the necessary qualifications for their important work. They shun strong drink and evil habits, and, as a rule, they keep themselves in good health. When any troubles arise, when symptoms of sickness and disease are felt, the wise and prudent engineer has his friend and protector, Paine's Celery Compound, near him in his cab. As he uses the lever of his engine to regulate its movements, so he uses Paine's Celery Compound to banish the seeds of disease, and to regulate all the movements of the intricate machinery of the nervous system and brain, from which originate the majority of human troubles.

By adopting this wise course, the body is strengthened, digestion is kept perfect, nerves are steady and reliable; eyes keen and judgment is always right.

An old railway official recently remarked: "Locomotive engineers who are teetotalers, and who use Paine's Celery Compound when physical derangements occur, are the men most appreciated by railway companies, as they contribute more to the safety of trains and human lives than any other class of employees." The truth of this statement is apparent to all who are fully posted in railway matters, and who thoroughly understand the heavy responsibilities of engineers.

The above important facts should deeply interest all whose work and duties call for clearness of head and brain, steady nerves and general good health. Success, in these days of rush and general competition can never be achieved in any department of work by sickly, nervous and dull-brained men. Paine's Celery Compound does the same good work for professional men, merchants and mechanics, that it does for the brave man who controls the powerful steam steed, and who daily has the safety of hundreds in his hands.

A BRUTAL CRIME.

Jessie Keith, Aged 14, Outraged and Murdered Near Listowel.

LISTOWEL, Ont., Oct. 20.—A girl named Jessie Keith, aged 14 years, daughter of Mr. Wm. Keith, a farmer about one and a half miles from this town, was foully outraged and murdered yesterday. The unfortunate girl was met on the railway track, by a tramp it is supposed, as she was returning from town where she had been to the post-office, when the heinous crime was committed,

The railroad sectionmen, returning down the track after dinner, saw some newspapers and spilled rice on the track. Upon further investigating they discovered evidences of foul play. They went to Mr. Keith's, about half a mile distant, and upon returning and following the tracks across a plowed field and about eighty yards into a swamp, discovered the body of the girl covered over with moss and rotten wood, the clothing having been removed and taken away. The body bore evidence of the foulest of crimes.

The perpetrator of this brutal crime no doubt came up the railroad track, met his victim and disposed of the body as stated, leaving the swamp, crossed over a portion of Mr. Rolls' farm, directly abutting Mr. Keith's on the town line east of Listowel and across to the third concession of Wallace, where he was seen about 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

A search party is scouring the county in all directions and it is hoped they will succeed in discovering and bringing to justice this fiend in human shape.

County Crown Attorney Idington, Sheriff Hossie and the coroner from Stratford arrived at the scene of the murder on the 8.15 p.m. train, stopping at the swamp where, after reviewing the body and surroundings, had it removed to her late home. A jury was sworn in and an inquest held. The body presented a frightful appearance, her throat having been cut and her body terribly cut and torn.

McCarthy and O'Brien at Walkerton.

WALKERTON, Oct. 20.—A meeting was held here yesterday by Mr. Dalton McCarthy and Col. O'Brien in advocacy of their present political position. It was arranged to escort the visitors from the station by a large turnout but only a small number took part in the demonstration, the procession when it reached Main street consisting only of the thirteen single buggies and a dog cart. The presentation of the address was reserved from the announced place on the market square on account of the smallness of the crowd but was afterwards read in the drill shed by Mr. John McCallum, of Brant. Mr. Shaw, who presided as chairman, made a brief address and introduced Col. O'Brien. This gentleman spoke for a long time and was followed by Mr. McCarthy at considerable length. Mr. McCarthy referred to the Manitoba school question, the French race question, the dual language question and the trade question. There were about four hundred people present in the audience, most of the time all of whom listened patiently but manifested scarcely either applause or dissent. Nearly two-thirds of those present were town people.

Queen Elizabeth's Wardrobe.

The wardrobe of Queen Elizabeth must have been about the most varied and extensive ever recorded in royal annals, to judge from a list of her wearing apparel recently gathered from the state papers. When the maiden queen was 68, and might therefore have been supposed to have outlived some of her youthful vanity, she possessed ninety-nine complete official costumes, 102 French gowns, 100 robes with trains and sixty-seven without, 126 antique dresses, 136 bodices, 125 tunics, not to mention such trifles as ninety-six mantles, eighty-five dressing gowns and twenty-seven fans. With all these dresses, however, it is curious to note that Queen Bess only owned nine pairs of shoes. When she died in 1603, 3000 articles of apparel were found in her wardrobe duly catalogued.—Newcastle Chronicle.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, anhave no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

CHRISTIAN ALLIANCE MISSIONARY WORK.

Notes from the Annual Report of the International Missionary Alliance.

The Peterborough Branch of the Christian Alliance was organized over five years ago, being composed of believers of different denominations fellowshipping in the truth of Christ, the Saviour, Sanctifier, Healer and Coming Lord, and putting forth earnest efforts to send missionaries with the glad tidings of the Gospel to every land. It meets every Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Opera House building, and is in a prosperous condition. Mr. J. C. Turnbull is the president.

From this branch one brother has gone to Brazil, South America, while another is studying the Congo language in New York, preparing for work in Africa next spring. One sister is under orders for China in a few days, all having been accepted by the Board of the International Missionary Alliance, New York. Another sister has gone to the training institute, New York, to prepare for the foreign field.

In conning over the annual report of the Alliance, some interesting facts are found.

Among the special blessings of the year, enumerated in the report is the low death rate among the missionaries of the Alliance. The missionary party in India, numbering over forty, has still been spared, and there have been but three deaths in China, out of seventy missionaries. There has been only one in the Soudan, that land of graves, and on the equally dangerous Congo there have been but four called away by death during the year, making a total of eight altogether during the year.

There have been some remarkable cases calling during the year, the entire orphanage in India having been carried through small pox by simple dependence upon God, and through the loving and faithful ministry of Miss Goss.

Many of the missionaries have been very remarkably healed, and the same has also been true of many of the missionaries in China and other fields.

THE RETRENCHMENT.

While it has been a year of great pecuniary pressure throughout the world, the Alliance missionary work has not suffered, but on the contrary, the receipts wherewith the work is carried on were increased during the year by $100,000.

Another cause for special thanksgiving has been the perfect harmony between the foreign departments of the work and the Home Board.

Among the

SPECIAL ADVANCE MOVEMENTS

of the year may be mentioned the occupation of the field in Southern China by a reinforcement of nearly a dozen labourers, the increased amount of work done in India, the building of a mission home in Wuhu, China; the enlargement of the work on the Congo, and the commencement of a new chapel home at Bona, the capital of the Congo Free State; the successful exploration of the interior by the Alliance's Soudan Missionaries; the sending of Mr. and Mrs. Oruikshank to Jerusalem; the establishment of the new South American Mission, and the opening of the work in Brazil, under the able leadership of Mr. Homell; the opening of a class in the Alliance Training Institute for the study of the Congo language and the preparation of American missionaries in this country for immediate work as soon as they reach the field; a very successful year in the Missionary Training Institute; the contribution of a large sum for the purpose of establishing a Training Institute in India; the extraordinary Missionary Conventions that have been held during the year, attended with such outpourings of the Holy Spirit and such manifestations of liberality and zeal; the appointment of a large number of new missionaries during the year for foreign service, and the sending out of the majority of them already. The number now under appointment includes about twenty-five for China, twenty for India, and between sixty and seventy altogether for the various fields.

THE HOME WORK.

The home expenses of the Board, during the year, have been very light, not exceeding one per cent. of the whole revenue.

The Board has always met regularly once a week, and the various committees have performed the duties of their office in the most faithful and self-sacrificing manner, without remuneration.

Missionary meetings have been held in various parts of the country, and many of the missionaries under appointment have gone through the country, visited congregations, and held missionary meetings, with the most valuable results in every instance. Special mention is made in this connection, of the valuable services of Dr. Glover, Miss Glover, Miss Doner, Mr. Jaffray, and many others.

The summary is closed with reference in the very highest terms to the capacity, energy, wisdom, and intense loyalty to God and the work, of "our dear and honoured leaders in the various fields: Rev. M. H. Reid, of the Congo; Rev. M. B. Fuller, of India; Rev. D. W. Lelacheur, of China; Rev. Theodore W. Gullok, of Japan; Rev. J. B. Howell, of Brazil; Mr. J. Cruikshank, of Jerusalem, and others; for all of whom we greatly thank God, and take courage, as we go forth into another year."

DIAMOND DYES ARE THE BRIGHTEST, STRONGEST AND BEST.

AIR: SPRING! SPRING! GENTLE SPRING!

Dyes! Dyes! Diamond Dyes!
At all seasons of the year,
Every wife and mother wise
Greet thee with the kindest cheer.
Autumn with its varied shades—
Russets dark, and brown and gold,
Reds and greens of summer glades—
All these colourings ye unfold.
Yet, while nature's colours fly,
Ye still bloom 'neath changing sky.

Dyes! Dyes! Diamond Dyes!
Choicest colours in the land,
Onward! Forward! as time flies
There will live no other brand.
None so brilliant, pure and fast,
Pleasing daughters, mothers, wives;
'Tis well known that in the past
Ye have added to our lives.
Comfort, wealth and great increase,
Constant streams of joy and peace.

CHEESE MARKETS.

Brockville, Oct. 18—There still remains about 80,000 boxes of cheese unsold in this section, of which about half is white and half coloured. At to-day's meeting 500 boxes coloured were sold at 10c. Board adjourned for two weeks.

Listowel, Oct. 18.—At the cheese fair here, today, 37 factories boarded 10,264 boxes August and balance of season cheese. There were four lots sold—60 boxes at 9¾c, 730 at 10c and 330 at 10 1-16c. Seven buyers present. At next fair, on November 1, the annual banquet of the board will be held.

Don't commit suicide on account of your "incurable" blood disease. The sensible thing for you to do is to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. If that fails, why, then—keep on trying, and it will not fail. The trouble is, people get discouraged too soon. "Try, try, try again."

Trade in the Dominion.

MONTREAL, Oct. 20.—Collections here are fairly good with prices stronger, but the volume of business is not equal to one year ago. At Toronto general trade has been less active, and collections have improved somewhat. General trade has been moderate at Nova Scotia. New Brunswick advices are that recent heavy rains have favored the interests of lumbermen. Bank clearings at Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax amount to $19,850,000, a slight decrease from the total in the preceding week but a gain of about five per cent. from the corresponding total one year ago. There are 39 failures in the Dominion of Canada this week, compared with 37 last week, 34 in the week a year ago and 30 two years ago.

Baptist Convention at St. Thomas.

ST. THOMAS, Oct. 20.—The proceedings of the Baptist Convention opened with a devotional meeting and addresses on the personality of the Holy Spirit. Hon. John Dryden presented the report of the senate and board of governors of McMaster University and in moving its adoption congratulated the different departments on the strongly marked Christian character of the work done. The afternoon and evening meetings were taken up with the subject of home missions. The superintendent's report showed success all along the line; 1,600 baptisms in home mission churches, 105 missionaries and 52 students preaching the gospel in 333 churches and preaching stations. New chapels built, new fields opened and many others striking tokens of success were cause for much congratulation.

Mill Dam Burst at Cobden.

COBDEN, Ont., Oct. 20.—The dam belonging to Alex. McLaren's flour mill at this place burst, breaking down about seven feet of a stone wall. The powerhouse was completely smashed and swept away by the waters along with a bridge which spanned the stream. Fragments of the timbers are scattered within three-quarters of a mile of the spot. It is a complete washout. The loss is estimated at within $5,000 and $6,000. The dam has been in the course of construction all summer, and was for the purpose of running McLaren's flour mill by electricity. The dynamo plant is lost in the wreck. The work of construction was just completed the day before.

A West Oxford Farmer Narrowly Escapes Premature Burial—The Causes of His Threatened Fate and Lucky Escape.

INGERSOLL, Oct. 8.—W. H. Bailey of West Oxford township, claims to have only narrowly escaped premature burial a short time ago. He had had kidney disease for four years back and so badly at times that he was completely laid up. Many doctors treated him, but their treatment, in Mr. Bailey's opinion, made him worse rather than better. His escape from a premature grave was affected by the use of the infallible Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes of these cured completely. Mr. Bailey claims to be able now to do a bigger day's work than his twenty-four-year-old son.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the BEST makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

Jessie Alexander Entertainment.

Toronto Mail (Annual Recital):—The audience was enthusiastic and appreciative. So many were turned away in consequence of the assembly room not being elastic that the entertainment is to be repeated on Monday evening, when several new pieces will be introduced.

To be Thoroughly Tested.

The Militia Department is sending out ten of the Martini-Metford rifles to each of the shooting regiments of the Dominion, and those intended for the Rangers are expected here daily. Some twenty-three regiments will receive them. The intention is to have the new arm, which Major-General Herbert would like to see in the hands of every militia man in the country, thoroughly tested, and also to allow marksmen to become familiar with it.

Civic Elections.

Sewers may start and sewers may stop, but the ballot goes on forever, and as the dear season expires the citizen begins to regard the candidate as game in season and legitimate spoil. As the time slides into the close of the year rumours, more or less incoherent, become tangible and individualized. It is now definitely stated that Messrs. G. B. Sproule and H. C. Winch in addition, it is assumed, to the present members, will be candidates for the suffrages of the electors of No. 1 Ward. The only name, besides the sitting members in No. 2 Ward, is Mr. T. E. Bradburn. Nos. 3 and 4 Wards have not been heard from in the direction of new candidates.

Hunters From Norwood.

For several years past, Thos. Fraser, a veteran sportsman, says the Norwood Register, has conducted hunting parties to the forests of the north in search of deer. This year will be no exception. A party has been organised, consisting of the following sportsmen: Thos. Fraser, captain; Geo. Taylor, Fred Pearce, John Preston, Hiram Reynolds, Samuel Scott, deputy reeve of Asphodel; S. L. Forrest, manager of the Union Bank, Norwood; Hugh Spence and Chas. Gillespie. The party left last Thursday evening at midnight, their destination being High Bush, Cranberry lake, Faraday township, Hastings county, about ten miles north of Coe Hill. They will be the guests of Garret Vedder. They will take ten hounds.

The Annual Meeting of the Farmers' Institute.

The secretary of the Farmers' Institute has just received a communication from the Agricultural Department in reference to the annual winter Institute meetings. The following questions are asked: Do you desire assistance? Where will sessions be held? How long do you wish them to continue? What subjects do you wish the speakers to discuss? What departments of farming are the members of your Institute most interested in? In selecting speakers this year we are anxious to send suitable persons. A meeting of the Institute will be held to consider the communication.

Mahood—Stinson Nuptials.

An interesting event took place in the township of Smith, Wednesday evening, when Mr. Edward Mahood, second son of Edward Mahood, Esq., of Smith, was united in marriage to Miss Annie Stinson, eldest daughter of Mr. Samuel Stinson. The marriage took place at the residence of the bride's parents, in the presence of an assemblage of 70 or 80 guests. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Ewing, the bridesmaid being Miss Lizzie Edmison, cousin of Miss Stinson, while Mr. Alex. Mahood, brother of the groom, performed the offices of best man. A most substantial wedding breakfast was served at the conclusion of the ceremony and many handsome gifts were received by the young couple.

—Rev. J. C. Davidson delivers the morning sermon in St. Johns' church and the evening sermon in the South Ward Mission. Rev. C. B. Kenrick takes the morning service in the Mission and occupies the pulpit of St Johns' in the evening.

—Salmon are reported to be fairly swarming in Stony Lake, but although shoals of them can be seen disporting themselves on the surface, few, if any, are taken, as they will not bite at any ordinary bait, and nets are not to be used with which to snare them.

—Rev. J. J. Rae, of Charlotte street Methodist church, preached last evening in St. Andrew's at the preparatory services. Twenty-four new members were received into communion. The rapid growth of St. Andrew's still continues and must be very gratifying to the pastor.

—The wise man nowadays when he sees a wire dangling in the street passes by on the other side. A Montreal man came across such a wire the other night and his curiosity prompted him to take hold of it. The coroner said the cause of death was so plain there was no need for an inquest.

—There are three cases to come up before Judge Rose at the non jury sittings next week, viz: Armstrong vs. Burnham, Swinton vs. Swinton, and Henderson vs. Henderson. Chief Justice Meredith was expected to occupy the bench, but owing to some delay relative to his being sworn in, Justice Rose took the sitting.

—The editor of the Norwood Register has found a specimen of the much dreaded Russian thistle, and has sent a portion of the plant to Prof. Fletcher at Ottawa, in order to settle the matter beyond doubt. Farmers are urged to be on their guard and to carefully examine their farms in case other specimens may be growing in that locality.

—Anniversary services will be held in Mark street church on Monday evening. The speakers to be present are Rev. J. J. Rae, of Charlotte street church; Rev. Mr. Limbert, of Lakefield and Rev. Mr. MacWilliams, of St. Andrew's. The services will be preceded by a tea in Ashburnham Town Hall from five until seven o'clock.

—There are a number of raised bank notes in circulation. A reporter was shown a $5 bill of the Quebec Bank issue, which had been raised to $10, by tearing the corners off bogus $10 bills and stocking them neatly over the $5 mark. By holding a bill up to the light, the fraud is easily detected, and if shopkeepers are wary, they need not betaken in.

—The attention of those desirous of securing lessons on the violin, or lessons in vocal, piano or musical theory, is directed to the change in the advertisement of Mr. and Mrs. H. Klingenfeld in another column. Both are first-rate teachers, graduates of Leipzig Conservatory, and those who fail to secure their services are missing a golden opportunity.

—One of the cattle belonging to a Chesley drover's shipment had a peculiar experience not long ago. When approaching Acton the door of the G.T.R. car in which it was shipped fell off and a steer jumped out, and was unhurt. It got on to the farm of Peter McDonald, and was advertised as astray. The G.T.R. authorities saw the notice, and as they had paid the drover for his loss, claimed the animal.

—Edward Edwards, an employe on the new Cox block is not one of those who "never came back." He skipped to Bowmanville after being served with a summons to appear in the Kennedy liquor case. The chief located him and telegraphing had the man held. Edwards was brought back to Peterborough yesterday afternoon and this morning, the magistrate, in order to ensure his presence at the trial, confided him to the care of Gaoler Nesbitt until Thursday.

—Toronto Saturday Night says: A Peterborough correspondent, 'Spectator,' has kindly forwarded a critical account of a very successful concert recently held in that city, in which two Toronto artists, Mr. and Mrs. Klingenfeld, played an important part. My correspondent pronounces the concert as having been one of the very best ever given in Peterborough. The violin solos of Mr. Klingenfeld are described as having been the gems of the evening, the musical feeling thrown into the violinist's work having held the audience spellbound and completely captivated them. Mr. Klingenfeld's quiet, unassuming manner, his beautiful bowing, and above all the purity of his tones, so full of artistic feeling and depth, created a most favorable impression. Mrs. Klingenfeld deserves special mention, her accompaniments as well as her singing being of a very high order. Miss Yokome, a talented violin pupil of Mr. Klingenfeld, and whose style closely resembles that of her master, played the obligato to Bragas Angels' Serenade in beautiful style.

A BLAZE AT THE CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC WORKS.

A Highly Inflammable Material Catches Fire and is With Difficulty Kept in Check.

What might have been a most serious conflagration was nipped in the bud at the Canadian General Electric Works last night.

The blaze originated in the Compounding Department where half a dozen kettles of the fluid which is used in the works so extensively, are kept boiling day and night. The fluid compound is of a highly inflammable nature and when one of the kettles boiled over ignition was instantaneous. The nightwatchman on his ten o'clock round arrived in the department just in time to see the whole six kettles in the room burst into flame. The floor is of brick and therefore there was no danger in this department, but great difficulty was experienced in confining the flames to the room, as the liquid was almost successful several times in forcing its way into the brass foundry department.

The pots held about half a barrel of liquid each, and the loss of this was the total extent of the damage.

Cold in the head—Nasal Balm gives instant relief; speedily cures. Never fails.

THERE ARE BLOOD STAINS ON THE HAMMER.

Were the Banks of the Raceway Ever the Scene of Tragedy.

The rifle, which was found yesterday, in the bed of the Dickson raceway, was brought to the EXAMINER office, last night, for inspection. When found, the rifle was loaded and strange to say, the powder was perfectly dry, although the firearm has probably lain under the water for years. This singularity is attributed to the fact that a "starter" was fitted tightly over the end of the barrell, and the hammer being down, all moisture was thus excluded.

It was Messrs. George Davidson and Andrew Healip, who spied the rifle and the latter drew it forth from its bed of mud slime. Lying beside the rifle was found a blacksmith's cold steel hammer. Upon the rust being removed from the the latter, some blood stains became visible, and on account of the total inability of the finders to erase these stains, they conclude that they must have been caused by blood. So fully impressed were they with this idea, that they again repaired to the raceway, almost expecting to unearth a skeleton. The second search, however, was fruitless.

RIVER AND LAKE RIPLETS.

Feathers, Fur and Fin—Rod, Line and Gun.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mr. E. J. Hartley left yesterday for a duck hunt near Sugar Island, Rice Lake. "Edg." is a crack shot and no doubt will give a good account of himself on his return.

The fish hooks used to-day are precisely the same shape as those employed twenty centuries ago. The only difference is the material. They were made of bronze; now they are of steel.

Capt. Chas. Calcutt and a party composed of the following duck hunters, Messrs. Harry Nell, James Tobin and Joe Young who visited Rice Lake for an outing, returned home yesterday, having had exceptionally good luck. They captured no less than thirty-six brace in all, the heaviest duck weighing 6½ lbs. dressed. They, however, know the proper shooting grounds.

Mr. R. M. Roy, Col. J. Z. Roger and Mr. Wm. Scully who are down the river on the Rob Roy and have been shooting ducks in the vicinity of Rock Island, Rice Lake, have shifted their quarters to the Narrows below Hastings. So far they have secured forty brace of ducks.

The steamers Daisy and Beaver are in port to-day.

The Dickson Co. shipped from their Harwood mills Wednesday last, via C. P. & M. Ry. to Cobourg, one thousand cords of edgings.

Mr. Thos. Wallace, of Gore's Landing, was handling his breech loading shot gun when duck shooting at Rice Lake the other day, when one of the shells exploded, lacerating one of the fingers of his left hand, tearing the flesh from the first joint to the nail. "Tom," who is possessed of considerable nerve, paddled his own canoe and succeeded in dropping several ducks before leaving for home. Mr. William Hearld, boat builder, of the same place, accompanied him home, where his wounds were properly looked after. He is doing nicely.

The Costello party had great luck while on their fishing expedition at Stony Lake. Their total catch of the finny tribe for their outing totals six hundred and seventeen pounds, mostly lunge and salmon. They also have the credit in laying low one of the kings of the forest to-day. Mr. Bert Watley was the first to locate the little fellow, and on being joined by his friend, a lower Canadian, and knowing all about the habits of the deer, finally succeeded in laying him low. The party is expected home to-day.

While the Nell party were out gathering up some duck which they had shot in Rice Lake, the other day, a tremendous hen hawk suddenly swooped down, and to the astonishment of the duck hunters, carried off one of their wooden decoys. His Hawkship did not go far, however, as a well aimed shot from Mr. Joe Young, engineer of the Daisy, brought him to the ground. The hawk was found to measure 5 ft. 6 in. from tip to tip of its wings.

Items of Interest to Local Sportsmen.

FOOTBALL.

Quite a number of the townspeople, including a heavy contingent from the Edison Works, accompanied the town Rugby team to Port Hope this afternoon, on a special train, to witness the match with the first fifteen of Trinity. The town team is composed as follows:

Back—Cluxton.
Half backs—Lefevre, H. Moore, and Jones.
Quarter back—Leefe.
Scrimmage—Strickland, Colyer and McIntosh.
Forwards — Montgomery, Corry-Smith, Kerr, W. Moore, Poussette, Lambe and Bell.
Spare man L. King.
Referee—Mr. Frances, of Toronto.

The second Rugby fifteen of Trinity School, Port Hope, arrived in town by the early train, and after registering at the Oriental, were driven across to the P. A. A. A. grounds, where, after a short practice, the Collegiate and visiting teams lined up as follows:

COLLEGIATE.		TRINITY SCHOOL.
B Simpson	back	Watkins
S Adams	halves	Harvey
L King		McFee
H Lewis		Rogers
J Macdonald	quarter	Wilkins
Bradburn	forwards	Syer
Davidson		Baldwin
Bellcghem		Bishop
Davidson		Robertson, Capt
Picard		Hampson
Bell		Palmer
Poussette		Lloyd
Beer	scrimmage	Dugan
Drope, Capt.		Spencer
Hamilton		Thorne

The first point was scored by the Collegiate team when King forced Watkins to rouge. Shortly afterwards the home boys again scored when Roger Davidson secured a touch-down which Simpson converted into a goal, thus making the score, 7 to 0 in favour of the P. C. I.

The Trinity boys now woke up and by good playing secured a touch down but missed in endeavouring to kick the goal. Peterborough then forced the play and scored a maul counting two points and the first half was concluded shortly after but not before Lewis forced the visitors' back to rouge. The score thus stood 10-4 in favour of the Collegiate team.

Peterborough in the second half, although wind and sun were against them, played a strong game. Picard scored for the town team by securing a touch-down, which was quickly followed by another touch-down by Adams, who made a most brilliant run down the field. The score was now 18-4. Simpson kicked the goal making two more, 20-4. Bell made a splendid rush and scored another touch-down for the Collegiates—24—4. Trinity now took a hand in the business of scoring and secured three rouges to their credit in quick succession. The Peterboroughs came out strong once more and Picard again secured a touch-down after some fast play. Then Adams scored four more points for the Collegiates by a touch-down, which Simpson converted into a goal, raising the score to 34—7. The game concluded shortly afterwards without change of score.

The Collegiate boys played a fast and brilliant game throughout the match. Special mention should be made of MacDonald, Bell, King, Adams, Davidson and Picard.

Guy Rogers, of Peterborough, played on the visiting team, being a student at Trinity School.

The goal umpires were Messrs. W. Galley and W. Moore; touch line umpires, Rev. Mr. Hedley and F. E. Nesbitt.

The goal kicking of Simpson was greatly admired.

CURLING

The Campbellford Curling Club has organized for the season with the following officers: Patron, C. L. Owen; patroness, Mrs. C. L. Owen; president, E. W. Gaudrie; vice-president, R. A. Cumming; representative member, G. G. Eakin; chaplain, A. M. Shields; secretary-treasurer, Fred J. Smith.

THE TURF.

Mr. Geo. Horkins is to-day making arrangements for a match race between the runners owned by Jones Bros, of town, and Mr. Mulhern of Campbellford. The race will be for $100 a side, and the gate receipts, but the distance has not as yet been decided. The owners will toss as to whether the race takes place here or in Campbellford.

FLUNG FROM A TRAIN BUT NOT SERIOUSLY HURT.

A Kingstonian Misses his Footing and Falls from a C. P. R. Express Near Here.

Yesterday morning as the west-bound C.P.R. 4.48 a.m. express was swinging along at a rate of 50 miles an hour, Mr. E. L. Cook, of Kingston, while passing from a passenger coach to a smoker, missed his footing and fell from the train. Unknown to all of the passengers he was not missed until the train arrived in Toronto, when a telegram was received by the conductor from Cavanville, instructing him to look out for Mr. Cook's baggage.

It seems that Mr. Cook fell from the train about half a mile east of Cavanville, and although his ankle was dislocated and and he was badly shaken up, he managed to reach that station. The 7.20 train picked him up and took him on to Toronto.

Mr. A. G. Dickson happened to be going west on the latter train, and heard Mr. Cook tell his story.

Another Voice From Smith.

SMITH, July 7, 1892.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, and after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

RANGE AND RIFLE.

Annual Matches of the Peterborough Rifle Association—Fine Weather—First-Class Shooting—Private Curtis' High Scoring—Names of the Winners.

The annual matches of the Association took place at the ranges on Thursday, and were favoured with fine weather, and the scoring was very high. In the three first ranges, C. Curtis made three thirty-fours out of possible thirty-fives, which gave him first place in the Association match, and placed him well up in the aggregate. D. Cameron gave him a close run for first place, being only three points behind him in the final range in the aggregate.

C. Curtis wins the Bankers' Cup and the Lt.-Col. Bell Medal for this year, last year's winner being A. Blade.

John Campbell and D. Cameron tie at 61 points each for the Cox cup. The tie will have to be shot off. F. Bartlett was the winner of the cup last year, and came within one point the year previous, and one point this year, of winning it.

One of the most encouraging features of this year's matches was the number of new shots that took part in the shooting, there being more new than old shots, and their shooting was such that some of the older heads will have to look keenly after their laurels.

Among the competitors were J. A. Williamson, Jas. Keith, P. G. Pilkie, J. H. Oliver, D. Sinclair, from Lindsay, and W. Hilton from Harmora.

The greater part of the success of this year's matches were due to Lieut.-Col. Bell and the liberality of the following gentlemen who have kindly contributed to the prize list: Rev. V. Clementi, first vice-president of the Association, Dr. Halliday, Adam Hall, Wm. Manson, K. G. Loch, J. Hampden Burnham, Jas. Kendry, Hall, Gilchrist & Co., C. J. Snider, Geo. Matthews, Mr. Campbell, W. G. Ferguson, L. M. Hayes, R. R. Hall, Kingan & Allen, F. W. Taylor, C. McGill, V. Eastwood, J. Craig, W. Hamilton, R. Max Dennistoun, E. F. Mason, T. Dunn, C. LeBrun, E. B. Edwards, Geo. A. Schofield, Brown Bros., Geo. W. Graham, Capt. Hill, Col. H. Rogers, the Rathbun Co. and R. B. McKee.

It's a Sign of Danger, when pimples, blotches and eruptions appear on the skin, no matter how slight. It warns you that your blood isn't pure. Heed the warning while there is yet time; clear up your system and purify the blood by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It rouses every organ into natural action, purifies and enriches the blood and through it cleanses and invigorates the whole system. It attacks all scrofulous, skin and scalp diseases in the right way—by purifying the blood.

The diseases that it cures come from a torpid liver, or from impure blood. For everything of this nature, it is the only guaranteed remedy.

In Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Biliousness; all Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Affections, even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages—if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

THE MAKERS of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will pay you $500 if they can't give you a complete and permanent cure.

A POSTMASTER'S STORY.

A STRANGE ATTACK AND THE DIRE RESULTS THAT FOLLOWED.

Mr. Robert Sharp, of Starkville, Tells of His Suffering—Lost the use of Both Hands and Feet and was Forced to Give up Business—The Timely Action of a Friend Pointed the Way to Renewed Activity.

From the Bowmanville News:

Mr. Robert Sharpe is a well known resident of Starkville, Durham county, who has been living in Canada for about thirteen years. He is by trade a blacksmith, and on coming to this country, located in the township of Haldimand, in the county of Northumberland. After working there for a time, he purchased a residence and a shop at Starkville, where he worked at his trade and established a nice business. Being both courteous and obliging, he was well liked and was appointed postmaster for the place. He was in the best of health and with the exception of a slight asthma trouble, had no complaint of any kind. In the month of March, 1892, he attended an auction sale in the neighbourhood and came home in the evening apparently all right, but during the night was taken with a chill, accompanied with a violent pain which gradually grew worse and before morning he went into convulsions and became unconscious. A doctor was summoned who bled him freely, which seemed to relieve him for a time, and next day he seemed better, and the doctor told him he would be all right in a few days. This, however, was not verified, and although he could go around he was fast failing in health and at times would be in an agony of pain. One doctor said he had sciatica, and another told him that his trouble was rheumatism of the spine and that he would never be better. He tried many medicines but all failed to do him any good. At this time he was so weak that he could only hobble around with the assistance of two sticks, and had to give up work. The pain continued day and night and finally he lost the use of both hands and feet, and often longed for death to relieve him of his suffering. About this time Mrs. Sharpe wrote a letter for him to a friend for whom he had worked when he first came out to the country, and this friend sent him a couple of boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, urging him to give them a fair trial. Before the second box was done he felt somewhat better and purchased another supply. To hasten the story, Mr. Sharp continued the use of the Pink Pills until he had taken fourteen boxes, by which time he had completely recovered, and is now as well as ever he was, and has lost all the asthma trouble as well. He is now able to do a hard day's work, and is loud in his praises of Dr. Williams' wonderful Pink Pills. As the reporter was leaving, a Mr. Stark, an intelligent farmer who lives close by, called and verified all that Mr. Sharp had said, and referred the reporter to others in the neighborhood who knew the circumstances well. One who had never seen Mr. Sharpe before would not think, looking at him to-day, that he has come through the ordeal that he has, as he seems the very picture of health, and both he and Mrs. Sharpe attribute the whole cure to Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills strike at the root of the disease, driving it from the system and restoring the patient to health and strength. In cases of paralysis, spinal troubles, locomotor ataxia, sciatica, rheumatism, erysipelas, scrofulous troubles, etc., these are superior to all other treatment. They are also a specific for the troubles which make the lives of so many women a burden, and speedily restore the rich glow of health to sallow cheeks. Men broken down by overwork, worry or excess, will find in Pink Pills a certain cure.

Sold by all dealers or sent by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co, Brockville, Ont., or Scehnectady, N.Y. Beware of imitations and substitutes alleged to be "just as good."

Queer Marriage Ceremony.

A curious marriage ceremony is that observed by the Negritos. These people are said to be the remnants of a race of ancient pygmies, and still exist in the interior of the Phillipine Islands, where they live after their primitive fashion, and preserve their ancient customs and traditions unmolested and unnoticed. When two Nigritos are united, the whole tribe is assembled, and the affianced pair climb two trees growing near to each other; the elders then bend the branches until the heads of the couple meet. When the heads have thus come into contact, the marriage is legally accomplished, and great rejoicings take place, a fantastic dance completing the ceremony.

Norway Pine Syrup is the safest and best cure for coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, sore throat and all throat and lung troubles. Price 25c. and 50c.

Drowning at Wolfeville, N.S.

WOLFEVILLE, N.S., Oct. 19.—A drowning accident occurred here by which William Elderkin, a native of this place, lost his life. The unfortunate man went out alone in a sail boat, and when between Long Island and Kingsport the boat was seen to capsize. The accident was witnessed by several persons on the shore, but the distance was too great to render any assistance. The boat was picked up in a badly delapidated condition. Mr. Elderkin only arrived a few days ago from Boston and was visiting friends in this place.

Conductors' Trial Concluded.

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 19.—The preliminary enquete in the case of the Grand Trunk conductors, Defries and Tamblyn, of Toronto, and Stone and Mulligan, of Montreal, charged with knocking down fares, has been concluded, and Judge Dugas will now decide whether there is sufficient evidence to warrant the accused being sent to the Court of Queen's Bench. In the event of commitment a change of venue will be asked for in the case of the Toronto conductors.

THE RULING MARKETS.

TORONTO, Oct. 19, 1894.

On the local street market 200 bushels of wheat sold at 58 for white and 51 for red. Goose was nominally quoted at 50. Sold 2,500 bushels of barley brought from 44 to 49. Peas, 150 bushels, sold at 57 to 58. Oats, weaker, 300 bushels went at 32 to 32 1-2.

At Buffalo, receipts by lake, 95,000 bushels, Exports by canal, 39,114. Market quiet but firm. Canada quoted at 64 to 65c.

There was a decidedly better tone to the Chicago wheat market and the close was higher. Corn was rather dull but showed a tendency to follow wheat, the close being firm. Oats easy and about unchanged.

There were 11,000 head of sheep on sale at East Buffalo, including 4,500 Canadas. Market closed dull, 7,000 head held over. Best lambs—native, $4, Canadas, $4.05.

The London stock markets were flat on rumors that the Czar's condition is critical. There was no business and prices were just hammered down by jobbers.

In general the New York stock market was firm. This was in spite of the rapid decline in general electric stock, whose influence on the general market, however, had become very limited.

TORONTO, Oct. 20, 1894.

Exports of wheat, (flour included as wheat,) both coasts of the United States and Canada, amount this week to 3,193,000 bushels, against 3,317,000 last week.

On the local street market 300 bushels of wheat sold at 58 for white and 50 1-2 for goose. Some 3,500 bushels of barley brought from 43 to 49. Peas—200 bushels sold at 55 to 56. Oats—Weaker, 800 bushels went at 31 to 33.

A fair sized lot of Canada barley was sold at Buffalo at 63 1-2 to 64 and at present there are a few takers at this place, but the majority will not bid above 63c for the best. Western very quiet but held firmly at quotations.

Wheat firm in Chicago on heavy exports sales, the close being 1-8c higher. Corn was strong and gained 3-8c on the day's business. Oats were firm and 1-4 to 1-2 higher.

At East Buffalo live stock market there were all told 64 cars of sheep on sale. Closed very weak with large numbers unsold and for the Canadas disposed of only $4 to $4.10 was paid.

Another close figuring of profits on gold shipment resulted on Wall street in the withdrawal from the sub-treasury of half a million specie. This shipment is made presumably on the basis of Thursday's exchange quotations, for actual sterling rates were easier and the market limited. The stock market, so far as this operation had any influence, seemed to be reassured that the shipment was no heavier. Prices for stocks were firm throughout the list, the Granger stocks leading the movement.

A PRINTER'S ILLS.

A Brantford Compositor has Diabetes—He Drops 40 Pounds in Weight in a Short Time—How He Was Cured.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 15.—Thos Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier in this city, has seen some ups and dows in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr. Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six boxes worked a complete cure. Mr. Hazelhurst is to-day better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"When I was a Boy,"

Writes Postmaster J. C. WOODSON, Forest Hill, W. Va., "I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character, that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary medicines, and advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and one bottle cured me. For the last fifteen years, I have used this preparation with good effect whenever I take and I know of numbers of people who keep it in the house all the time, not considering it safe to be without it."

"I have been using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for 30 years, with the most satisfactory results, and can cheerfully recommend it as being especially adapted to all pulmonary complaints. I have, for many years, made pulmonary and other medicines a special study, and I have come to the conclusion that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral occupies a position pre-eminent over other medicines of the class."—Chas. AT A BICYCLE SCHOOL.

HOW THE GIRLS ARE TAUGHT TO RIDE A WHEEL PROPERLY.

A Young Man Who Patiently Instructs Them—How He Does It—The First Vault on the Safety and a Sudden Curve to Disaster.

"Do come with me this morning," exclaimed a slender young woman, as she excitedly greeted a friend on Wabash avenue yesterday morning. "I am going to take my first lesson in bicycle riding."

"What, you ride the bicycle?"

The emphasis on the you was indescribable.

"Yes, I," replied the slender one, with a dramatic wave of the arm, "even I."

"Please don't say anything," she added quickly. "I know I've said all manner of awful things about women who ride the wheel, but I am willing to forget them now and I wish you would too. Consistency may be a jewel," she went on, "but it is not progressive. The woman that clings to consistency never gets on, and I am bound to progress if I have to mount a bicycle to do so. Besides, it's quite the proper caper now. The very swellest girls are riding, and I am not going to be left out of all the road and nutting parties that will rage next month. They say it is hard to balance oneself at first, but if the other girls can keep on, I can. Do come. Here we are now."

The two young women stopped for a moment to inspect the shining wheels in the big show window before disappearing down the basement stairway beneath. It was rather dark in the room they entered, the electric lights seeming dim after the brilliant sunshine outside. "This is lovely, isn't it?" said the beaming enthusiast as she viewed the padded walls and the mattress wrapped posts down the centre of the room.

"Just see; you can bump into everything and never get hurt."

"But the floor," suggested her more conservative companion; "I should imagine that that would be the most likely to trouble me in case of a fall."

"The young lady will not fall, miss," interposed the dark-eyed instructor as he took a wide belt from the back of a chair. "I will see to it that there will be no falls if the young lady will put this around her waist and then follow my instructions closely."

The enthusiast donned the belt with the help of her friend, who tugged at the stiff leather strap to bring it snugly about the small waist.

"Now the first thing I want to say," began the instructor as he slipped one hand through the long loop stitched to the outside of the belt and held a bicycle with the other, "is never to let go the handle-bar."

"That will be easy enough, I am sure," remarked his pupil, "but perhaps I could hold it better if my gloves were off."

Then finger by finger the yellowish gloves are removed, the instructor meanwhile patiently clasping both belt strap and bicycle. The last little finger is uncovered and the gloves are finally tossed to the friend.

"Now I am ready," announces the young woman.

"Remember, please, never to let go the handle-bar," again admonishes the instructor. "Put your right foot on the pedal first, at the same time carrying your dress skirt over as far as you can. There, now you're all right."

The pupil vaults into the saddle and the wheels begin to revolve.

"Where is the place for my other foot?" she shrieks, pawing the air wildly with the unsettled member.

"It's there all right. Put your foot on the pedal as it comes up."

Whizz! bump! crash! Deathly silence for a second.

"Are you hurt, dear?" anxiously inquires the alarmed witness of the encounter between post and wheel.

"I think not," dubiously replies a faint voice from the confused heap on the floor.

The disentanglement of post, wheel, pupil and instructor begins. The last does not look particularly amiable as he helps the future bicycler to her feet and brushes the light dust from his coat.

"How stupid of me," apologized the pupil, but, growing technical, "where was that other pedal? Are you sure it is on?" examining the recumbent wheel.

"Yes, it is here all right," shortly replies the young man. "Now please do as I tell you. Hold on to the handle-bar no matter what happens."

"Why, of course I can do that if the pedal will only act properly. It always goes down at the wrong time and comes up when I am not looking for it."

"Don't mind the pedal, I say, just hang on to the handle-bar."

This admonition is given very emphatically. The bicycle is placed upright, the young man slips his hand through the strap at the slender waist and the young woman mounts again. This time there is too much skirt flying to the left, for which compensation is found in a three inch view of tan silk stocking on the opposite side.

"It is running away with me," cries the rider as the machine, under a mild push from the instructor, takes on increased speed.

"No it isn't, either; you are going all right."

A sudden curve to the right, the right hand deserts the bar and clutches blindly for supp... Over goes the machine and the young woman lands on her left foot. Then she tactfully busies herself adjusting her tilting hat and crumpled gown, while the dark-eyed instructor is pulling into position the red silk tie that floats limply over his left shoulder. He says strange words in a low voice which the charming pupil blandly ignores.

"How queerly that front wheel twists," is the first observation that breaks the painful quiet. "If it wasn't for that front wheel I know I could ride splendidly. Is that really necessary?"

The question is put with a most winning smile.

"Not at all, miss. It is only a question of knowing how to balance yourself. See, here is a single wheel, and I'll keep it going."

A tall wheel with short pedals is rolled away from the wall and the instructor leaps lightly across it. He whirls around a post several times in short circles, sawing the air with his arms in order to keep his balance.

"Oh, I never could ride one of those, it would be so horribly ungraceful. I think the two wheeled ones are prettier when one is on the right kind of terms with the front one. But didn't I do well for a first lesson?" this to her friend who begins to unfasten the leather belt. "I suppose I'll feel stiff and queer tomorrow; the girls all say they do the day after the first lesson. "Thank you so much," to the young man. "I hope I didn't tax you too much. But now I come to think about it, where were my feet? I don't remember much about them; you only talked about that absurd handle bar."

"The handle-bar is the main thing to understand, miss; your feet will take care of themselves."

The young man bows the chattering enthusiast and her observant friend up the stairway. Echoes of "green short skirts," "tan leather leggings," "close caps" and "tan leather vests" come back to his ears as he straightens out the practice wheel for the next fair rider.—Chicago Tribune.

Doctors say it is the Best.

GENTLEMEN,—Last July I took Congestion of the Lungs and was in bed for four weeks. I was very weak and could not speak above a whisper. Dr. Lawson, of Hamiota, attended me and sent a bottle of Milburn's Emulsion. It soon restored my voice and health.

ALF. SMITH, Wheatlands, Man.

The Dog Language.

When engaged in locating a railway in New Brunswick Mr. James Camden, a civil engineer, was compelled one night by a very severe snowstorm to take refuge in a small farmhouse. The farmer owned two dogs—one an old Newfoundland and the other a collie. In due time the farmer and his family went to bed, the Newfoundland stretched himself out by the chimney corner, and Mr. Camden and the man with him rolled themselves in their blankets on the floor in front of the fire.

The door of the house was closed by a wooden latch fastened by a bar placed across it. Mr. Camden and his man were just falling asleep when they heard the latch of the door raised. They did not get up immediately, and in a short time the latch was tried again.

They waited a few moments and then Mr. Camden rose, unfastened the door and looked out. Seeing nothing he returned to his blankets, but did not replace the bar across the door. Two or three minutes later the latch was tried a third time. This time the door opened and the collie walked in.

He pushed the door quite back, walked straight to the old Newfoundland and appeared to make some kind of a whispered communication to him. Mr. Camden lay still and watched. The old dog rose and followed the other out of the house. Both presently returned, driving before them a valuable ram belonging to the farmer that had become separated from the rest of the flock and was in danger of perishing in the storm. Now, how did the collie impart to the other dog a knowledge of the situation unless through some supersense unknown to us?—Forest and Stream.

Teach Them to Swim.

In view of the many and harrowing deaths by drowning that are always among the distressing incidents of the summer season, it would seem as though parents should consider it far more necessary to have their children taught to swim than to spend so much care and trouble on accomplishments that are of no earthly value to the latter who gets into water over his or her head.

This little preach is not meant in any way to run down the advantages to be derived from the highest mental training, but what good will diplomas and honorary degrees be if in a moment of impulsive recklessness, or owing to some unforeseen accident, the student learns, alas, that it is sink or swim, with nine chances out of ten in favor of the former, if there has never heretofore been given, along with the other thought to be necessary lessons, a single one in one of the most important branches of human education?

Quack Advertisements

Are a nuisance and we think it behooves publishers to examine into the merits of many articles puffed up in their columns. We do not deny that many meritorious remedies are properly to be classed under this heading. Take the hundreds and thousands relieved from severe suffering by the use of Polson's Nerviline; would it not be unreasonable to expect them to condemn that far-famed remedy? Now we know for a fact that Polson's Nerviline is without exception the most powerful, pleasant and certain remedy in the world for pain. It cannot fail, for it goes right to the bottom of pain, penetrates to the nerves, soothes them into quietness, and affords prompt and permanent relief.

A GLUT OF BUTTER.

The Market Filled With It—Being Filled With It.

There is a great glut of butter in the market and prices are falling as a consequence, says the Toronto News.

"I was offered ten car loads of Manitoba butter at 10 cents a pound and wouldn't buy it," said one dealer to the News.

It seems a large quantity of butter has been held back both in Ontario and Manitoba, and the consequence is it is now being sold at any price.

Mrs. Christy's Body Found.

BLOOMFIELD, Ont. Oct. 20.—The lifeless body of the young married woman, Mrs. Wm. A. Chrsity, of this place, who was missing from her home since Thursday morning, was found in the waters of West Lake, over six miles from her home. Deceased, it seems, had been rather despondent of late, but not much notice had been taken of it. She was only nineteen years old and possessed more than ordinary beauty and amiability. She had been married but seven weeks. No cause can be assigned for the rash act other than temporary insanity.

Serious Accident to a Raleigh Farmer.

CHATHAM, Oct. 20.—While a Raleigh farmer named Patrick McLaughlin was crossing the G. T. R. tracks on Queen street, his horses became frightened at a locomotive which was shunting cars and ran away. Before they could be controlled they collided with Gonne's grocery waggon, the force of the collision throwing McLaughlin head first against a telegraph pole with terrific force, causing concussion of the brain. He now lies at the point of death in St. Joseph's hospital.

Another Big Express Robbery.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 20.—The westbound Texas and Pacific through express train for California, was robbed near Gordon, 85 miles west of here. The robbers secured about $30,000 from the Pacific Express Co. and but for their inability to open the safe of the Texas and Pacific Coal Co. containing $20,000 in gold, would have made a better haul. Four men did the work.

MR. FOSTER IN LONDON.

Interviewed by a Correspondent—The Fast Atlantic Line.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Mr. James L. Huddart has addressed to the Times another letter, enclosing the communication he had received from Admiral Sir John Hopkins, of the North Atlantic squadron. The purport of the Admiral's letter confirms his previously-expressed idea of the safety of the St. Lawrence route for a fast Atlantic service.

The Times also publishes another communication, which is also supplied by Mr. Huddart. It is a copy of a letter addressed to the late Sir John A. Macdonald by Mr. Andrew Allan, and is dated May, 1891, offering to supply, without qualification, twenty-knot steamships for a subsidy of $5,000 per voyage. This offer, it may be stated, the Hon. Mr. Foster declined. Mr. Huddart says that the latter forms a humorous commentary on the recent attitude assumed by the Messrs. Allan.

Canada's Finances.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Finance Minister of Canada, who has arrived in London, has intimated that he is only here on "a quiet business visit," and will return to Canada as speedily as possible.

Mr Foster said in an interview last evening: "We are satisfied with the general outlook in Canada. We are coming through the depression more satisfactorily than most countries. This is evidenced by the trade returns. The tariff charges certainly were framed to encourage British trade. The fact that British exports to Canada declined is owing to the general tendency to economy and curtailed purchases, which is one of the most notable features of Canadian life just now. Moreover, Canada yearly increases her own manufactures. It is emphatically true that Canada desires to strengthen her commercial relations with the United Kingdom, the Australian and other colonies.

The Ottawa conference emanated from that wish and developed a strong pro-English sentiment. Doubtless the tendency is to look away from the States, although our attitude to them is perfectly friendly. The Behring Sea arbitration happily removed the most debatable question. The tariff changes in both countries must help the interchange of trade and virtually constitute a reciprocity treaty. Canada has responded as far as possible to every lowering of the United States duties.

Mr. Foster questioned Gov. Sir Terrance O'Brien's dictum that Newfoundland would prefer to be annexed to the States rather than to Canada. The latter's position might be summed up in her desire to round off the Canadian confederation by the inclusion of Newfoundland, if terms could be agreed to and the latter were willing. But there was no idea of pressure, far less of coercion.

Mr. Foster finds the attacks on Canadian finance in the Investors' Review so impregnated with animus and inaccuracies as to have no influence. He will take no notice of the Review. The Minister admits that the revenue of Canada, like that of all other countries, has declined just now, owing to the lessened value of her imports, restricted buyings, with the consequent desire in commercial circles to economize, and the lull due to the tariff changes, but he says that he regards the future with confidence. The general impression of Mr. Foster's "quiet business visit" is that he is here in the interests of a further loan. It is possible that one may be issued on the same lines as the last advance, that is, without a public subscription. Mr. Foster himself states that he has nothing to communicate on the subject. Others seem to think that Mr. Foster's mission is principally in connection with the fast Atlantic service. The rumor had it that Mr. James L. Huddart cabled the Government at Ottawa to send over a member of the Cabinet to help along his scheme, and that the letter in the Times is the first outcome of Mr. Foster's visit.

Intercolonial Trestle Burned.

MONCTON, N.B., Oct. 20.—A short trestle bridge on the Intercolonial, near Hall's Creek, Moncton, was discovered on fire yesterday. It was almost entirely destroyed. There have been heavy rains recently and it is thought the fire must have been set by a tramp for the purpose of wrecking the train. Several hard-looking characters were noticed about town. Had the fire not been discovered a serious accident might have resulted, as the train was nearly due.

Howard Must Go Back Again.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Acting under instructions already given now that Judge Lacombe has decided that he has no jurisdiction in the case of John James Howard imported under contract as under coachman for ex-Vice-President Morton, Immigrant Commissioner Senner at New York will immediately deport Howard and United States District Attorney McFarlane will enter civil suit against Mr. Morton for violation of the alien contract labor law.

Breckinridge, of Kentucky, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia have ordered the defendant's appeal stricken from the docket on the ground that it had not been entered within the statutory time.

A Bomb in Rimini, Italy.

ROME, Oct. 20.—A bomb with a lighted fuse was placed yesterday at the door of the Mayor of Rimini on the Adriatic. It did not explode as the light went out half an inch from the shell. An examination showed that the bomb was heavily charged with powder and bits of iron. Three men have been arrested.

RUSSIA'S SICK RULER

Many Wild Rumors Circulated at St. Petersburg.

SOME CLAIM THAT HE IS DEAD

But That the Fact Has Been Suppressed —The Czarina Suffering From Nervous Prostration—A Russian Nihilist Interviewed — Caustic Criticisms.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 22.—Despatches made public here last evening say that the Czar has rallied slightly.

No confidence is felt by the people in the official announcements. The meagreness of the news has left room for the craziest rumors, which multiply on every street corner and in every cafe. It is said that the Czarewitch has renounced the succession, that the Czar is dead and the fact is suppressed, and that the Grand Duke George died two days ago. Official bulletins do not dispel these rumors. The last story is that the Czarina's mind has broken down under her many afflictions.

Despite the intensity of the interest in the Czar's condition the theatres and restaurants are crowded as usual.

In the churches throughout Russia prayers were said for the Czar. A despatch from Moscow says that the city is grief-stricken. Nevertheless, the theatres are open. Between the acts last evening the orchestra in every theatre played: "God protect the Czar." The audience stood during the hymn and insisted upon several repetitions of it.

ALEXANDER III., CZAR OF RUSSIA.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Daily News has this from its Vienna correspondent:

A cipher telegram received here from Russia declares that it is impossible to send news except by letter across the frontier. A Vienna daily asserts that the Czar's illness is the consequence of arsenical poisoning.

A Paris correspondent of the Daily News discredits the report that the Czarewitch has renounced the succession. "It is none the less true," the correspondent adds, "that the Czar's brothers, who now have been summoned to Livadia, came to France so as to be out of the way during any possible crisis about the order in which the throne should be transmitted."

From St. Petersburg the News hears: "The latest advices from Livadia are that, despite the fact that he is out of bed, the Czar's case is hopeless. The doctors have discovered that he has a cancer. In the last ten days he has lost 32 pounds. The excitement here and in Moscow is indescribable."

VIENNA, Oct. 23.—Several of the leading Vienna dailies publish what are virtually obituary notices of the Czar. The Wiener Allgemine Zeitung says: "The Czar never knew a pitying tear until he shed it for himself. Nobody in Russia will weep for him."

The Pesther Lloyd, the most influential of Hungarian dailies, says: "The present Czar threw all traditious overboard. A sigh of relief will proceed from the Russian people when he is gone and his evil spirit, the procurator of the Holy Synod, will vanish into oblivion."

With regard to the policy of the Czarewitch, M. Stepniak, the Russian Nihilist, in an interview, said the heir apparent's character was an enigma, but it was improbable that the new regime would concede anything in the direction of liberalism. If a council of regency was formed, with the Grand Duke Vladimir, the Czar's eldest brother, who is strongly reactionist in his views, as one of the members, the administration of government would be far worse than under the Czar. M. Stepniak expressed the opinion that among the ruling powers at St. Petersburg there was none with sufficient intelligence to advise reform in the government of the empire.

WARSAW, Oct. 23.—Despatches from Yalte say that the Czarina is suffering from nervous collapse and paralysis of the legs. Her illness was caused by overwork in the Czar's sick room, loss of sleep and constant anxiety. The Grand Duchess Xenia has been confined to her bed for several days.

Crushed to Death.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Oct. 22.—William J. Burkinshaw, son of E. Burkinshaw, of this town, who had been a driver on a street car in Toronto for some years, finding no work in Toronto returned home on Friday and engaged with Nickle Dyment & Son to go to the lumber woods, where he commenced work clearing a roadway at a sawlog dump and had cut off a large overhanging hemlock log, and in trying to get away from it he tripped and fell in front of the log, which was fast descending the dump. The log passed over him, completely breaking his spine and instantly crushing him to death.

ARRESTED A SUSPECT

The Supposed Perpetrator of the Listowel Outrage in Custody.

AN INQUEST IN THE SWAMP

The Coroner's Jury Sworn In on the Spot Where the Foul Crime Was Committed—Listowel and Vicinity Worked Up to a Feverish Excitement.

LISTOWEL, Oct. 22.—It is learned here that the searchers for the perpetrator of the shocking murder on Friday have come up with a man suspected of the crime at Arthur and that he has been taken into custody.

The people of this town and vicinity are very much excited and incensed against the perpetrator of this foul act and searching parties scoured the country with the view of obtaining some more direct clue. Reports from one of the searching parties returned from the vicinity of Arthur indicated that the guilty party had travelled in that direction. A tramp was seen about half a mile distant from the spot south and again on the north, having apparently come from the swamp where the body was found and where indications were also found that the perpetrator washed his hands in a pool of water in a ditch. The searchers followed each clue and it is reported overtook their man in the vicinity of Arthur, as stated.

The coroner's jury was sworn in in the swamp. After viewing the body of the unfortunate girl, and having examined some pools of blood, the jurymen adjourned to the residence of Mr. Keith. Evidence was given by the section men, Mr. and Mrs. Keith, the father and mother of the deceased, and others. Nothing was elicited, however, throwing any light or giving any information as to the perpetrator of this most brutal crime. The Listowel hall was appointed the place to meet next Friday at 10 o'clock for the purpose of awaiting developments and obtaining further information as to the perpetrator of this most brutal and cruel crime.

The clothes of the deceased were found on Saturday in another part of the swamp.

THE ATTACK ON CANADA.

A "Montreal Banker" Replies to Mr. Wilson and the Investors Review.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Mr. Foster's interview in the Chronicle is rather remarkable for it contains no hint as to the loan which the Canadian Government organ stated he was coming to Great Britain to negotiate. Mr. Foster touches upon pretty nearly the whole range of topics common to British and Canadian discussion except this "Loan" and the fast Atlantic service. There is little doubt, but that Mr. Foster's visit is for the purpose of aiding Mr. Huddart in a semi-official capacity. The people here generally approve of Mr. Foster's utterance that it is the desire of Canada to encourage British imports while all the same time she is perfectly friendly to the United States. His statement that Canada would never force confederation upon Newfoundland is regarded as superfluous because Canada is not in a position to do so.

The attacks of S. L. Wilson, the editor of the financial journal called the Investors Review upon Canada has not been allowed to pass unnoticed. In the Chronicle there appears a letter signed "Montreal Banker," in which the ridiculous character of Wilson's attack also echoed in the Chronicle is pointed out. Now that Mr. Wilson's attack has secured the recognition that he has desired for it, he will level his second broadside at the Dominion. Another attack upon Canada in the Review may be expected any day.

The Baptist Convention.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Oct. 22.—At the Baptist convention on Saturday a report was presented by Dr. Goodspeed re the outrage committed on Rev. D. Reddick. The report expressed indignation at the assault committed on a British subject in Harrison county, Texas, and urged the Canadian Government to enquire into the matter and take such action as will secure justice being done. The report was adopted. The following were elected to fill vacancies on the home mission board: Messrs. Thomas Urquhart, J. L. Carter and Rev. C. Goodspeed. The report of the committee on the state of religion in the churches was also presented. It showed a most favorable condition of spiritual life and steady progress in every department. The report of the publication board was presented by the business manager and showed that the cash sales during the year had made considerable advance and the profits enabled the board to declare a dividend of $15,000, which would be divided between the various denominational interests.

Baker Taken Over the Lines.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 22.—William Baker, the desperado, was taken across to Uncle Sam's domains on Saturday. The prisoner was greatly surprised when the American officers called for him, but there was no time wasted upon him. He was heavily shackled and walked to a cab in waiting. Detectives Furlong and McGinn, the two St. Louis officers, believed that Baker's confederates, of whom he is supposed to have many on the other side, would make an attempt to rescue Baker at the slightest opportunity, and to this end they went to considerable trouble to create impression that the desperado would not leave London jail until late next week.

Sword Championship Contest.

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—The sword and bayonet contest between Sergt.-Major Morgans, of Kingston, and Sergt. Hawker, of Montreal, for the championship of Canada, which took place here on Saturday night, resulted in a tie, each contestant taking 19 points. The contest was a very lively one and Sergt. Morgans' sword drew blood, Hawker being slightly cut on the head.

A Whitewaylte Victorious.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Oct. 23.—The result of the Twillingate election for members of the Assembly has been announced. Mr. Foote, the Whiteway candidate, defeated Surveyor-General Michael Knight by a majority of 375. Knight carried the seat last November by three votes against the same opponent.

HIS WAS A FATAL LOVE

A Farm Hand Brutally Kills the Girl Who Rejected Him.

THE MURDERER'S CONFESSION

He is Captured and Tells of the Fearful Crime—He Killed His Victim With a Hammer and Then Mutilated the Body in a Terrible Manner.

ALBION, N. Y., Oct. 23.—One of the most brutal and atrocious murders ever committed in western New York took place eight miles north of here. Emma Hunt, a servant and companion of Joseph Vancamp's sister, Mrs. Allis, was murdered by William Lake, a farm employe, who was in love with the young woman.

The house is on a road near Curtiss Corners. After supper Farmer Vancamp rode to a neighbor's house, where his sister had spent the day. Upon reaching home an hour later the mutilated body of Miss Hunt was found on the floor. Lying near her were a razor and a hammer. Her throat and other parts of her body were cut, and about the head were marks of blows from the hammer. She was lying with arms outstretched in a corner, and pools of blood were near both doors of the room. The woman's skirt was nearly torn away.

William Lake, the farm hand, who in all probability committed the crime, could not be found, and deputy sheriffs scoured the woods in search of him. Lake is 24 years old, and is well educated. Miss Hunt did not care for Lake, it is stated, and in all probability he murdered her upon her refusal to marry him.

Although the crime was comitted on Thursday evening the murderer was not found till yesterday when he was arrested and lodged in jail.

Constable Barry Handy of Waterport located the fugitive in the large grain barns of Mrs. Rachel Hoag about a mile and a half northeast of the village of Waterport, and about seven miles from the scene of the tragedy. Handy on discovering Lake covered him with his revolver. Lake at once threw up his hands. A large crowd soon gathered and some shouted "Hang him," but the constable drove rapidly away with his prisoner and was not molested. Two hours later he delivered Lake to Sheriff Rice at the county jail in this village.

Lake refuses to say a word to reporters. To Officer Handy he said: "After I killed Emma I went to Carlton station and then to John Ross' barn, where I stayed until Friday morning, and before daylight I went to the woods of George Mathels. This is about four miles from Vancamp's, where the murder was committed. I stayed in the woods until night, and then came to Albion and went to Maloney's grocery store, near Albion depot, and got some cookies. I was soon chased out of there and went down across the yards to the west part of the town and came near being caught. I finally got away and went to Nahum Latin's barn, about four miles west of Albion, and stayed there until midnight. I then went to the barn where I was arrested, which is about seven miles north of Latin's, and got in the hay mow and stayed there until you found me.

"I have not had anything to eat since I killed Emma except some apples, and three or four cookies that I got at the grocery. I am very tired and am glad I am caught. I am very sorry I killed Emma, but it is too late now. She bothered me and hectored me and I made up my mind to kill her. I loved her and could not bear to have her live. I struck her first with the hammer. I wrote out a confession while they were eating supper that night and packed my satchel also, but had no chance to take that. I lost my rubber coat in Albion. They were making it so hot for me that I made up my mind I had better shed the coat."

Lake would not talk much about the murder. Officer Handy will receive the $800 reward offered for Lake's capture. A large crowd gathered around the jail in Albion in the afternoon, but it was orderly and there is no fear of violence.

Charles Judd Buried.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 24.—The body of Charles Judd arrived here on Saturday. The funeral took place in the afternoon and was very largely attended. An Ottawa despatch credits Mr. Judd, brother of deceased, with having said: "I have thoroughly examined my brother's papers and effects and am at a loss to find how he could have taken his life. He was a quiet and temperate boy, on good terms with his family, and, moreover, had an estate of about $5,000 invested in various ways. I further understand that in a few weeks his position in the department would have been a permanent one."

Train Robbers Foiled.

GRAND LODGE, Mich., Oct. 23.—An attempt was made by confidence men to hold up passengers on the Detroit, Lansing and Northern train. G. H. Flowers, a Detroit drummer, and Mr. Reuben Reynolds, of Grand Rapids, were attacked by the men, as was Father O'Connor, of Grand Rapids. The crooks were knocked down and, although one of them attempted to shoot the drummer, were overpowered. While the train was approaching East Paris the crooks again drew their pistols and, holding the trainmen at bay, jumped from the train and escaped.

A Young Man Drowned.

THREE RIVERS, Que., Oct. 23.—A young Englishman named Reynolds, in the employ of the Laurentian pulp mills at Grand Mere was accidentally drowned by his boat being carried over the falls at that place. On the Piles branch of the C. P. R. a man named Lemay fell off the train and had both his legs cut off.

Killed by Highwaymen.

CHARLESTON, S.C., Oct. 23.—A special from Orange says Mr. Robert Copes, county treasurer, was waylaid and killed by highwaymen on his return from a calling tour. The governor has offered $500 reward for the murderers. The amount secured by the murderers was $5,000.

GENERAL BOOTH.

ALL have heard or read of General Booth and the thousands in Peterborough who have seen and heard him can easily see that he is a wonderful old man. He is not an orator, in the dictionary or popular sense of the term, but he has one of the first elements of true oratory. He is in earnest—he believes what he says and has therefore little difficulty in influencing others. If there is any secret to his success, aside from the Divine assistance he relies upon, it is because he sees his duty and does it. His directness of purpose and directness of action are closely timed. The world is full of full-dress sentimental religion, largely intellectual. General Booth's religion is practical, not theoretical. He recognizes that man has a body as well as a soul, and that a soul shrined in a suffering decrepit body is not likely to have any aspirations for good under such conditions. Our blessed Lord, when on earth, made physical relief of suffering, conjoined with, of course, spiritual relief the basis of most of his miracles. General Booth's wonderful power of organization has a shase of responsibility for his success. This enables him to put into literal practice the injunction, "Be ye warmed and filled." If the suffering ask for bread he is not given a stone, but a good warm dinner for "tuppence" and a bed for a penny. He reaches the soul through the and has thus power for good. The complaint of modern preaching is that it fails very greatly in effect. This is discouraging, but it is not surprising. It seems that the vast majority of persons who attend church do not need preaching. They know their duty if they would only do it. They "go to church as a matter of fashion or habit, many from a sense of duty, and, it is to be feared, very few from a sense of need. Under these circumstances it is not to be expected that the seed sown should bear abundant fruit. The masses who never see church or come under religious influences are those that General Booth and his system fish after, and with any kind of bait that promises results. And the success of his scheme, humanly speaking, is its justification. We all know what results have been effected in Peterborough by this agency. Drunkards nave been reclaimed and themselves made, according to their light centres, of good influences in the sphere where they have influence. Outrageous sinners have taken to what seems to be from its fruits, righteous living. Men may carp at Salvation Army methods, but judgment must be formed from results. We should have a good word for a bridge that carries us safely over the stream. The "General" bears a high hand and rules like an autocrat. If he feels that he is right, he has, it appears, some right of insisting on his own way. In secular matters we often feel, owing to the perfunctory way in which things are done—are badly done or not done, that representative institutions are a failure—and wish for some strong man with a club to take things in hand for a while. This might do if we had the right kind of a man, the kind of a man that would do right. The whole world lieth in wickedness, and the trouble seems to be that the world will not come to some appointed place, and be respectably made better. General Booth, and those who work on similar lines, feel that they have to get down to the world to lift it up. This is a practical age, and needs practical men. The scientist might tell of his grandest theories for years, and vainly, unless some practical man took them in hand and put them to use. A Solon might perch himself on a boulder and assail it with all the theoretical facts of dynamics, without effect, for a thousand years. The practical man takes a hammer, and by a few rightly directed blows opens the stone's heart. A preacher who fills a sinner's head with fine-spun theological theories and platitudes, finds the way to the heart a long one; he that goes directly to the heart has hope of speedy success.

SIR JOHN THOMPSON will leave for England next week to talk over the political situation with Sir Charles Tupper, and the result may mean some startling changes in the Government. There are those who insist on saying that should the High Commissioner accept the Premiership, Sir John will retire in his favour, and accept the Chief Justiceship of the Supreme Court. Last session of Parliament the Premier endeavoured to put a bill through Parliament permitting Judges of the Supreme Court to retire on full salary. It was not passed, but it is likely to be passed next session, and in that case there would be no difficulty in getting Sir Henry Strong to retire in Sir John's favour. Mr. Aigers, also, would find a resting place on the same bench. Strong efforts are being made by the party to get another leader before the general elections come on,

MR. HOBBS has been enthusiastically nominated as a candidate in the election to fill the vacancy caused in London, Ont., by the elevation of the Opposition leader, Mr. Meredith, to the Bench. Mr. Hobbs will probably be elected. Mr. Meredith's majority was greatly reduced last general election, and the Conservatives have no candidate that will approach the ex-leader in popularity, the circumstance to which he owed his election very largely.

ONTARIO is to be congratulated upon the excellent state of the public health. As the experts tell us there has been an entire absence of epidemics, and the only serious cases observed have been traced to United States cities. Mr. Foster ought, the Mail thinks, to raise the duty on germs and keep them out of the country.

QUEBEC's abandonment of the export duty on pulp wood will, says the Mail, tend to silence those who have been calling upon the Ontario Government to put an embargo upon the exportation of logs. Sir Oliver Mowat's disinclination to act upon the suggestion, proves to be another constitutional triumph for him.

As bear stories appear to be all the "go" these days a few good ones picked up from exchanges may not be amiss.

AND THE SHELL MISSED FIRE.

Mr. Albert Kosmack, of Sebastopol, Renfrew, recently had a somewhat exciting adventure. He had noticed during the daytime that some animal had been disturbing his turnip fields, and so armed with a rifle, he went out in the evening to watch. He had not long to wait when a she bear and two cubs appeared. He brought the older animal to the ground first, and then fired at one of the cubs. It was wounded, and its cry brought the wounded mother to her feet. She advanced on Mr. Kosmack. He waited until she was within about three yards. Then he fire—and the cartridge missed! It may be believed that he took no great leisure in getting in another cartridge, nor any great care in aiming again, for when he fired the muzzle was nearly touching the animal. The shot was effectual, and she lay dead at his feet. The second cub escaped.

WILLIE BUCHAN FIRST CRIED BEAR.

On Saturday evening as some children were roaming near the bush to the southeast of the town a surprise awaited them. Some things like two black dogs were seen prowling around, and Willie Buchan, we believe, was the first to cry bear. Marshall Rombough and some others who were working in a potato field near by, were soon on the alert, the town was notified and in a few minutes a number of the shots with trusty rifles were looking for bruin's gore. However, bruin, unfortunately, was not the first to bleed, as in the preliminary firing a bullet struck Mr. Charles Rombough on the leg, going through the calf from front to rear and making a painful and serious wound. The bullet, it is supposed, had glanced from a tree. Messrs. J. A. Hunter, Con. Knapp, James Brown and others were around, and in a few minutes Bruin appeared. The ground is very uneven, and there was shooting up hill and down. After some ineffectual firing a shot struck bruin's paw and carried off two claws. This fired him up and he started up the hill for J. A. Hunter. The latter, taking in the situation, and watching his chance, fired as bruin turned his right side towards him, and the bullet passed clean through his body. He never moved. It was now getting dark, and the other one, a cub, got scot free and has not yet been captured. The next morning before church a number were eagerly on the hunt. Mammy Muff has a fine black, glossy coat, weighs 135 pounds, and is in good condition. Mr. Hunter did more bear than business on Saturday night, as crowds flocked to the store to see the prowler of an hour before. Durham Review.

A LUCKY MAN.

Laid up for Months by a Severe Form of Kidney Disease—The Simple Cure he used—He's Well Now.

THEDFORD, Oct, 22.—Some men don't know when they are in luck and some do. Albert Maithers, of this place, is one of the lucky ones who knows of his good fortune and tells about it. He says he was laid up and could do no work for months because of kidney disease. When kidney disease has such a hold on a man as that, he is in a serious condition. Mr. Maithers recognised this and used every remedy he could think of, but without getting any help until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes cured him and he is attending to his affairs once more and is as hearty and happy as ever.

Accidentally Shot Himself.

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., Oct. 22.—An accident, with fatal results, befell Jesse Coleman, an undertaker of Akron, N.Y., when hunting in Little Lake Joseph, Muskoka, on Saturday. The deceased in company with several others was out on a hunting expedition. He got into his boat and was shifting his gun when it went off, the charge entering his right breast. He only lived a few minutes. Deceased was about 30 years old and leaves a widow and two children.

A Simple Accident, But Fatal.

ALVINSTON, Ont., Oct. 22.—A fatal accident happened at John Clark's, in the township of Brook. His son, a boy of 14 years of age, was pitching horseshoes along with some others and was accidentally hit in the temple by a shoe, from which cause he afterwards died.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose topay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

JAPAN'S TROOPS REPULSED.

Rumor of Another Big Battle—News From the Orient.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—A despatch from Shanghai to the Central News says the Chinese report that a battle has been fought on the banks of the Lower Yalu, in which the troops of Japan, who made the attack, were repulsed with heavy losses. It is added that neither side claims a definite victory. It is regarded as probable that the Japanese will declare an effective blockade of the gulf of Pe-Chi-Li within the coming week.

A despatch from Tien-Tsin reports that large quantities of munitions of war, supplied by Germans, are arriving there and are being forwarded to New-Chang and Port Arthur. German contracts for further supplies have been concluded.

The Standard prints a despatch from Tokio saying that 40,000 Japanese troops under command of Marshal Count Oyama, who was temporarily relieved from the duties of his position as Minister of War to take command of the Japanese forces in Corea, have left Hiroshima. The destination of this force is not known. A fleet of 35 transports was necessary for the conveyance of these troops.

The St. James' Gazette publishes a despatch from Yokohama saying that several hundred Coreans have rebelled in the province of Chal-La-Do, the extreme southwest province of Corea, and that a combined Corean and Japanese force has been sent to suppress the uprising. The Coreans, the despatch says, have become very restless under the firm rule of the Japanese.

The Graphic has a despatch to the effect that the negotiations for peace between China and Japan have been resumed and likely to be completed soon.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 22.—Four of the warships of the Chinese southern squadron have arrived at Wei-Hai-Wei. The Chinese steamer Tung Chow, which has arrived here reports that two Chinese ironclads and one cruiser which were repaired at Port Arthur have sailed from that port and reached Wei-Hai-Wei. More extensive repairs are required in other warships and they will not be able to leave Port Arthur for some time.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—A telegram has been received at the Japanese legation, stating that on the 19th instant, upon the assembling of the Diet at Hiroshima, Count Ito, Prime Minister of Japan, made an elaborate speech in the House of Lords, in which he explained at length the causes of the war between Japan and China. The feeling of the Diet appears to be unanimous in approval of the course pursued by the government. The two Houses on the 20th instant passed by a unanimous vote the bills introduced by the government relating to war expenditures involving a total sum of 150,000,000 yen.

The Tokio correspondent of the Central News says that the letters read by Count Ito in parliament yesterday will be published shortly. They are expected to throw new light on China's attitude before the war. "It is believed," he says, "that China intended to take advantage of the growing troubles to declare Corea a Chinese province."

A special embassy from Corea has arrived in Hiroshima. The Emperor received them yesterday. A report generally credited in Tokio is that China will sue for peace on the basis of the independence of Corea and the payment of a war indemnity.

FAMOUS HISTORIAN DEAD.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—James Anthony Froude, LL.D., the celebrated religious writer and historian, died on Saturday, aged 76 years.

James Anthony Froude, born at Dartington, Devonshire, in 1818, achieved fame principally through his "History of England" which deals with the period between the fall of Wolsey and the death of Queen Elizabeth. The history was published in 1856. He was educated at Oxford, later he became a fellow of Exeter. His first literary effort that attracted notice was a novel entitled the "Shadows of the Clouds," which appeared in 1847. Two years later the "Nemesis of Fate," was published. This work made a great stir in orthodox circles in England and the result was that Froude lost his fellowship.

Other works that have appeared from his pen "Short studies on great subjects," "The English in Ireland in the 18th century," "Cæsar Asketh," and two books about Carlyle's early life and Carlyle's life in London. Mr. Froude also edited Carlyle's "Reminiscences" and the "Final Memoir of Jean Welsh Carlyle." The cynical frankness which he exhibited in those two works provoked a great deal of savage criticism.

In 1872 Mr. Froude visited the United States on a tour. Mr. Froude was appointed Regus professor of history at Oxford by Lord Salisbury in 1892, succeeding the late Prof. Dreeman. He has been looked upon as almost the last of the generation of English literary men that included Tennyson, Carlyle, Thackeray, Dickens, Newman and Kingsley, all of whom he had known and with most of whom he had warm friendship.

SUFFERINGS OF A WRECKED CREW.

For Thirteen Days Living in a Hut on the Barren Coast of Labrador.

HALIFAX, Oct. 22.—The steamer Harlaw, which arrived on Saturday night from the west coast of Newfoundland, brought from Bay of Islands Captain J. H. MacDonald and five men, who composed the crew of the Gloucester schooner Martha C, which was driven ashore on that coast on September 28 and totally wrecked.

The schooner had been on a trading voyage to Labrador and was on her way home with a cargo of pickled fish valued at about $5,000 when the disaster overtook her. The vessel was at anchor in a place called Bear Cove or Bear Head. The force of the gale drove her from her anchors on to the rocks. The vessel soon commenced to break up and the crew after considerable trouble and narrow escapes from drowning managed to reach the shore, which they found uninhabited and barren. They constructed a hut from wreckage which came ashore and lived in it for thirteen days, being on the verge of starvation most of the time, their only food being a little flour which had become soaked with salt water and some salt fish which drifted ashore from the wreck.

They managed to secure some fresh water, however, and this helped to relieve their sufferings to some extent. They thought some vessel would eventually pass and take them off, but after waiting six days and none appearing two of the men started out to try and reach a settlement, and after a fifteen-mile tramp, during which time they suffered considerable from weakness, they got to Bay of Islands, and secured the services of a tug, and just seven days from the time they left their shipmates they arrived back at the scene of the wreck.

Capt. McDonald and the other three men, who had remained at the hut, had by this time become so weak from lack of proper nourishment that they could hardly row off to the tug, which was obliged to lay some distance off from the shore. When the men got to Bay of Islands they were kindly cared for by the United States consular agent, and after waiting a week took passage on the Harlaw.

Hawaii Has No Favors for Britain—The Hunt Season.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—The Government has been advised that Sanford Fleming and Mr. Mercer have arrived at Honolulu and been told by the provisional government that the reciprocity treaty with the United States prevents their giving Great Britain a station for landing a cable at Honolulu, Neckar Island, or any of the ocean islands that could be utilized, over the whole of which Hawaii claims prior rights.

The deer hunting season in Ontario opened on Saturday and will close on November 15. Dogs are allowed to be used during the whole season and no additional is allowed for "still" hunting, as there used to be. A person is permitted to shoot but two deer per season. It is illegal to shoot a fawn. For a first violation of any of the regulations of the statute a fine of $20 is provided. The penalty for a second offence is $50 fine and three months imprisonment. The season in the Province of Quebec opened on October 1 and closes on January 1. There, however, dogs are not allowed to be used at all.

A correspondent writes from Parry Sound: "Detective Greer, of Toronto, Constable McCrae, of French River; Constable Greer, of Parry Sound, and two other provincial officers left here on Saturday on a steam tug armed to the teeth, for the purpose of capturing the Perrault brothers, the gang of outlaws who have long bid defiance to the officers of the law and have terrorized every small hamlet on the shores and islands of Georgian Bay. It will be remembered that the leader of the Perrault brothers was recently shot and instantly killed in a scuffle with Constable McCrae, who attempted to arrest the gang single-handed and barely escaped with his life.

J. W. Emard, of Montreal, who is counsel for contractor St. Louis, is here looking after the case of St. Louis in the Supreme Court against the Crown for $68,000. ROBERT HALL.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the BEST makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

A Rough and Tumble Fight.

There was a rough and tumble fight between two local men, on the train which ran in from Port Hope on Saturday night. The scrap was conducted on the go-as-you-please line and the combatants threw one another over the seats or under them with the greatest impartiality. "Little Dick," the conductor on the train, attempted to separate the men and restore peace and order, but received a black eye before his efforts were successful. The case will go into court.

The Township and the Town Confer.

The representatives of the township met the members of the sewer committe on Saturday afternoon. The latter made a strong effort to induce the township authorities to allow the brickwork to be completed in the trenches already excavated before they were filled in, but the representatives of Monaghan were not willing to give way on this point, and no agreement was reached, the township insisting that if the work of refilling is not at once done by the town the township will itself undertake the work, at the town's expense.

Very Artistic.

A. Clegg is showing a line of fine gilt brass tables with polished oak tops, decidedly the finest of the sort ever offered in Peterborough, see his window. Also a great variety of other fancy parlor tables in choice woods, and an artistic line of highly finished antique oak chairs, with cobler seats of embossed leather, and a larger line of floor rockers at greatly reduced prices, in fact we have so many new things that we have no space this week to enumerate them. Our stock is complete in every line. A. CLEGG, 427 George street.

He Has Found His Ideal.

A certain Peterborough merchant is an intense enthusiast and lover of a good piece of horseflesh, and is always keeping his weather eye open for a good chance to invest his money to advantage. Nothing short of a "Robert J" will ultimately bring peace and contentment to his yearning breast. He is now happy in the proud possession of one of the best specimens of horseflesh on the planetary system. It matters not if is "a little high in the bone and low in the flesh" as the necessary speed is there without a doubt. Of course the merchant referred to is a judge of a good horse, and what he don't know about the critters aint worth knowing, still when it comes to the fine point of choosing, his friend and intimate chum is always called in to help successfully pilot the deal through, and with his confidante on deck, all ring-bones, spavins, splints, ingrowing toe nails and bunions are sure to be spotted, when the righteous wrath of the pair is poured out upon the man who tried to "do" them. The two were noticed by an EXAMINER reporter, sitting behind a brand new investment, yesterday, and from the broad smiles of mutual satisfaction which were exchanged some world-breaking records may shortly be looked for.

For coughs, colds and bronchitis the best and safest remedy is "Madill's Pulmonic Cough Syrup." Each bottle has a positive guarantee attached to it. If it fails to cure, return empty bottle and your money will be refunded.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Items of Interest to Local Sportsmen.

RUGBY FOOTBALL.

The members of Peterborough's first Rugby fifteen are well satisfied with the result of the trip to Port Hope on Saturday. Of course the winning of the game by a score of 28 to 5 was a sufficient cause for elation, but outside even of this fact, the gentlemanly treatment accorded the Peterborough boys and their friends leave them with nothing but words of praise for Trinity College School, its masters and its students.

The local Rugby team accompanied by almost a hundred and fifty of its friends left town on a special train at 1.40 Saturday afternoon and journeyed down to the little town on the lake. Arrived there the team were driven in a bus directly to the school, while the rest of the excursionists scattered around the town looking up friends and one thing another.

The game was started at three o'clock or a little after, and the two teams lined up in the following positions :—

TRINITY SCHOOL.			PETERBOROUGH.
H D Strathy		back	Cluxton
C W Gamble	halves		Lefevre
G Gilmour			H Moore
C D Harvey			Jones
M Jewett	quarter		Leefe
R H Tucker	scrimmage		Strickland
G Sprague			Colyer
G Baldwin			McIntosh
H James	forward		Montgomery
M L Ireland			Corry-Smith
S S Dumoulin			Kerr
W Renison			W Moore
B H O'Francis			Poussette
T W Marlin			Lambe
H M Rathbun			Bell

Everthing seemed to go Trinity's way at the start, and in no time they had rushed the ball down to touch, and the try was converted into a goal, giving the school six points. This was rather discouraging to the Peterborough boys as a starter, but the rush had warmed them to their work, and slowly, but steadily, they started to pile up a score on their side of the sheet. Leefe played a star game at the quarter, and broke through time and again. He started the Peterborough score by crossing the touchline with the ball after which the try was converted into a goal by Lefevre. The score was now even but it did not long remain so as Leefe again sprinted down to touch with the ball and once more did Lefevre convert the try into a goal.

The score did not change again before half time was called.

During the last half of the game the Peterboroughs scored successively, shutting the school out completely, but although this was the case the town fifteen only gained their points by working hard for them, as the school fought the hard uphill fight in the gamest manner possible. They were outplayed however and had to submit to the inevitable.

The goal which Lefevre kicked from the field was stated by the college authorities to be the finest thing in that line ever seen on the Trinity campus. It was a free kick from about the centre of the field and the attempt to endeavour to kick a goal at that distance seemed absurd and when the ball, so truly kicked, went sailing between the posts the applause was deafening.

Such a play took considerable starch out of the School and the town fifteen quickly ran the score up to 28-5 in their favour.

Leefe, who played such a good game throughout, was carried off the field.

Special mention should be made of the way in which the Peterborough wings held down their men during the game. The halves were thus given an opportunity to get in their work and they were equal to the occasion, sending the ball far down into Trinity's territory almost every time it fell into their clutches. The scrimmage, too, played a fast game, getting the ball fully seven times out of ten.

The Peterboroughs are a heavy team in weight, and consequently the Trinity boys who attempted to tackle them were sent to the earth in a way which must have bruised many bones. One little fellow in particular, who was very game at the tackling, was so besmeared with blood as to be almost unrecognizable.

Colyer of the home team saw many, many comets and shooting stars when he received a kick in the temple which stretched him out insensible for a time.

Poussette was the recepient of a thump over the heart and a kick on the forehead, either of which were almost enough to disable him.

The town fifteen were most graciously received by the masters, and after the match were invited into the buildings, where, after a bath, supper was served and everything done which could make the boys feel at home.

The Peterboroughs are now trying to get on a match with some of the senior or intermediate league teams in order to ascertain just how strong they really are.

The Origin of Man.

The Rev. Dr. Sarton, so popular with the people of Peterborough, will deliver two lectures in the George street Methodist church, on Monday and Tuesday evenings of this week. The subject of the lecture this evening will be, "The Origin of Man: Was it by Evolution or Creation?" and that of Tuesday evening, "Christian Morals, not as Evolution but a Revelation." The discussion of these subjects by a lecturer of such marked ability, is an event of no small importance, and should attract very large audiences. Dr. Sarton occupied the pulpit of the George street church yesterday, and delighted the audiences with his sermons. The charge for these lectures is simply a silver collection at the door.

—The parks were well patronized yesterday, and the Jackson and Nicholls more especially were visited during the day by hundreds of citizens, who took advantage of the fine weather to walk over and inspect the recent acquisitions.

—Since the arrival of a new barber in Oshawa, barber's itch has broken out, and there are now thirty aggravated cases in the town, including several professional and business men. The barber has skipped out to evade a coat of tar and feathers.

The attendance at the Park street Mission was unusually large last evening. The choir's rendition of "What will you do with Jesus" was much admired. Mr. Pady took his text from 1st Kings, ch. 3, verse 5, and preached upon the theme of "choice."

—That lot on Water street just opposite the Balmoral hotel, which the corporation uses as a dumping ground, is positively a disgrace to the town. It is overgrown with a rank growth of weeds, which are already scattering their seed in every direction.

—The work of the big new roller, drawn by four horses, was watched this morning by a large number of citizens, as it pounded down the crushed stone recently placed on Hunter street, east of water. It fulfils the work for which it was intended in a most satisfactory manner.

—Mr. C. LeBrun wears a self-satisfied smile this morning as the result of the neat manner in which he "got back" at one of the Port Hope boy's Saturday. After the conclusion of the Rugby game on Saturday one of the Port Hopers acknowledged that maybe Peterborough was on top in the matter of football, but added he "we can win from you at either baseball or lacrosse." "Maybe so," answered Mr. LeBrun, "but we can generally manage to last the season out, anyway." This Parthian dart completely discomfited the Port Hope man, and an adjournment was in order.

Engineer Marshaw, of the steamer Mary Ellen, Lakefield, is in town on his way home to Hastings. The steamer will make her winter quarters at Young's Point, being tied up on Wednesday next.

The anthem "Seek ye the Lord" was admirably rendered in St. Paul's church yesterday. Mr. H. McKeown took the solo and obligato in a singularly sweet voice, the tone and pitch being most pure.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Madill, of Toronto, who have been east on their wedding trip, on their return home remained over in Peterborough to spend Sunday with their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Madill, London street.

Miss Couch, of Gore's Landing, accompanied by her little niece, the daughter of Mr. W. J. Edmison, left this week, per the Allan Line, on a visit to friends in England. We wish them a pleasant voyage and safe return.—Cobourg Star.

Mr. William Waud, Lake street, Ashburnham, who, with his daughter, Kitty, has been spending the summer on a trip to the old country for the benefit of his health, returned this morning very much improved. His many friends are pleased to see his familiar form again on the streets.

Miss L. Minore will represent the Park Street Baptist Church at the Provincial Sabbath School Convention in Belleville. George Street Methodist Church will be represented by Rev. W. R. Young, Mr. L. A. Armstrong, Mr. A. E. Dickson, Mrs. Archibald McIntyre, Miss A. Sanderson and others.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Hembray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, and after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

THE GREAT DRAWING CONTEST.

Devlin's Harness Stood the Biggest Pulling and Won First Prize.

Mr. Geo. Dyell, of Emily, owns the team of draught horses that carried off the first prize at the Peterborough Central Exhibition this year for drawing the heaviest load the greatest distance in five minutes.

The harness used by Mr. Dyell for this contest was a set of light harness made by W. J. Devlin, the champion harness and collar maker of the district. This set was not made up specially for the competition, but for ordinary every day use, and the way they stood the severe test proved them to be "good leather well put together"—having carried off the first prize triumphantly. The weight that was drawn was 6,480 pounds of pig iron.

The crowd that watched the contest expected to see the horses go through their harness and pull them all to pieces. But they didn't—not even a hame strap gave way. Mr. Dyell also surprised the farmers of Victoria by drawing 7,000 pounds with the same harness at the Omemee fair.

Mr. Devlin wants it distinctly understood that the victorious harness was not made from oak tanned leather, as might be expected. No man can afford to put oak tanned stock into an ordinary set of harness such as these were at the price they are now sold for. The were made of the best quality of hemlock tanned leather, but they were they were "well put together," all of which Mr. Dyell is prepared to vouch for.

Farmers and horsemen generally can draw their own conclusions from the above, and please bear in mind that this is only an ordinary sample of our harness which we make up right along all the year round.

Yours truly,
W. J. DEVLIN,

The champion harness and collar maker, Hunter street, two doors west of George street. Idw

ALMOST DROWNED.

The Scow, With all on Board, Sinks.

On Wednesday last the wind was high and quite a wave rolled upon the waters of Pigeon Lake and down Gannon's Narrows, the waters rushed with more than usual force. It is at this point where the people of Harvey cross to Ennismore to shorten the distance to Peterborough. On Wednesday morning when Mr. M. O'Donnel, of Harvey, left home with his cattle and sheep to bring them across from their grazing farm, the morning was fine, but, as he proceeded, the wind arose until quite a breeze was blowing when they reached the ferry. Arriving at the crossing point he became doubtful whether to attempt the crossing or not; but, not to be stopped with the breeze, the cattle and sheep were driven upon the ferry and all went well until about half way across the stream when the cattle all made a rush and crowded to one end of the scow, bringing with them more weight than the conveyance was intended to carry and the end went under water. The air pipe taking in water and the scow in a very few moments was filled and proceeded downwards, Mr. O'Donnel and Mr. W. P. Chase and the cattle and sheep all swimming for shore. Some of the cattle landed upon the Ennismore side, others returned to the Harvey shore, only two sheep and one heifer being drowned. Mr. O'Donnel and Mr. Chase had close calls, being nearly exhausted when rescued. The scow has been brought to the surface and on Saturday last communication re-opened.

The scow will carry six teams with their loads when properly distributed over the surface. This is the first time any accident has happened, and it is more than probable that a fewer number of roaming live stock will be taken on board at one time in the future.

PRAISE FOR AN ASHBURNHAM BOY.

The Reynolds Enterprise of North Dakota in writing up the industries of Reynolds, "the best and boss town of Grand Forks County," speaks as follows concerning Mr. W. H. McWilliams, formerly of Ashburnham:

"One of the most extensive grain buying systems in the State to-day is that of the Brooks Bros. Elevator Co. They now have between forty and fifty elevators scattered throughout the grain producing sections of North Dakota, and the company is composed of some of the most wealthy and responsible men in the United States. Their elevators are all substantially and well built and contain the latest and most modern machinery for the quick handling of grain, and they probably buy and ship more wheat from North Dakota and the Red River Valley than any other grain firm. They established an elevator in Reynolds several years ago with a capacity of 50,000 bushels, and is one of the best equipped grain warehouses in the city. The management of the company's business at this place is under the charge of W. H. McWilliams, and he is an experienced grain buyer. Mr. McWilliams has been with this same company for the past fourteen years which is certainly sufficient evidence that his services are appreciated by the company and that his honesty and integrity are above reproach. He is the oldest grain buyer in experience in the city, and during the time he has had charge of this elevator he has made many warm friends among the farmers by his honest and straightforward manner of doing business. Mr. McWilliams came here about six months ago and has proven himself to be a liberal and enterprising citizen as well as a good grain buyer. This elevator is located near the depot and is the first one from that point on the north. This company buy and ship from 75,000 to 100,000 bushels of grain per annum and always pay the highest market price. Mr. McWilliams long experience in the business renders him an adept, and he is not only accommodating and does business satisfactorily to the farmer, but also to his employers."

A PRESENT TO A PRESIDENT.

AN EARNEST OFFICIAL APTLY HONOURED.

Mr. Geo. E. Elliott Presented With a Fine Gold Watch—A Fitting Recognition of Faithful Services—Central Exhibition Directors Honour Their President—Presentation Made by Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P.—Reply of Recipient — Eulogistic Remarks — How the Society Has Prospered.

On Saturday evening the parlours of the Morgan House hotel was the scene of an interesting recognition of faithful and efficient service. For four consecutive years Mr. Geo. E. Elliott has been the popular, energetic and successful president of the Central Exhibition and West Riding Agricultural Society. During his incumbency the affairs of the society which had reached a very much depressed and discouraging condition, have been vastly improved, and the serious burden of debt that weighed down the directors and trammeled their operations, has been converted into a substantial surplus, while at the same time large sums have been expended in valuable permanent improvements to the grounds.

The directors of the Society wishing to recognize their president's large share in the work that had been accomplished, invited Mr. Elliott to meet them at the Morgan House hotel parlours on Saturday, and at 5.30 several of the directors the secretary and some of Mr. Elliott's personal friends assembled, and of a beautiful gold stem-winding watch was made. Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., having been selected, addressed Mr. Elliott, and said they had met to take part in a very agreeable close of a day's business. The directors, he said, had requested him to express to Mr. Elliott their appreciation of the faithful and valuable services rendered by him to the Central Exhibition society for the past four years, over which his tenure of office had extended. Mr. Stratton recalled the circumstances of the depressed condition of the society's affairs when Mr. Elliott took office. There was a big debt which was in a double sense depressing to many of the directors—it was not only contrary to the interests of the society but they themselves were personally responsible for its payment. Mr. Elliott was reminded that during his term of office that debt had been wiped out, and in spite of large permanent improvements made upon the buildings and grounds, there was a very comfortable surplus resting in the bank. (Applause). Though he was free to say that the directors generally were faithful in the discharge of their duty, yet it was well known that the bulk of the work fell upon the chief executive officer of the society, and in view of the fact that this bulk of work had been most creditably done, the other directors had wished him (Mr. Stratton) on their behalf to put their sentiments of appreciation in the tangible form of this beautiful gold watch which the directors, as well as the speaker, hoped might mark for the wearer the happy years of a PROSPEROUS AND USEFUL LIFE.

The speaker, as well as the directors and public generally, knew that Mr. Elliott had strictly attended to his duties or he would not have accomplished so much. Indeed, so often, Mr. Stratton remarked, had he seen him in town on Central Exhibition business, that it looked as if Mr. Elliott had deserted his farm and became a resident of Peterborough, which indeed he might do with profit, for the same executive ability he had shown in managing the affairs of the Exhibition, would bring success in business where some men of town experience might fail. He hoped whether or not the directors should re-elect Mr. Elliott again as president, that they would be able to select a successor equally fitted for the position, for it was largely due to Mr. Elliott's expert coupled with the painstaking and faithful work of the secretary, Mr. Green, that the affairs of the society had succeeded so well.

Mr. Elliott said he thankfully accepted the handsome present as a handsome mark of the appreciation of his services from his co-directors. It gave him great pleasure to receive such a proof that his services were appreciated. If what little he had been able to do had met the approval of the Board and the Society, that fact in itself would have been a sufficient reward. Whatever success may have attended his efforts was in no small measure due to the active co-operation and assistance of the other members of the Board, who had all worked harmoniously and unitedly together, and in saying this he would not forget the faithful and efficient services given by Mr. Secretary W. J. Green.

Mr. R. Vance said he was glad to be present. He had for several years marked Mr. Elliott's zeal, and since he became president he had closely watched his actions, and he was glad to see and the earnestness with which he applied himself to the discharge of his duties, and he (Mr. Vance) was sure that his high opinion was shared by the other members of the Board.

Mr. Dawson Kennedy endorsed all that had been said, and he was heartily glad to see that Mr. Elliott's faithful work had been fittingly recognized. Since Mr. Elliott had become president of the Society, his excellent financial management had rescued the society from the financial slough of despond into which it had fallen, a condition which owing to their personal responsibility was an anxious one for some of the directors and their families. Mr. Kennedy incidentally referred to the high standing the Central Exhibition enjoyed abroad—even in distant parts of Ontario he had visited. He was glad that Mr. Elliott had received this recognition. When he had heard of the proposal he (Mr. Kennedy) said it was a righteous act and that no other member by virtue of earnest and faithful service deserved it better than Mr. Elliott.

Mr. T. M. Hunter was happy to be present on an occasion designed to recognize the merit of faithful services. He felt, handsome as the present made that evening was, it only paid a small instalment of the debt of the West Riding Society due to Mr. Elliott for the faithful and effective work he had accomplished.

After further congratulatory remarks by Mr. A. P. Morgan and others, the company separated.

THE DOCTOR'S CONFER.

The Object Being to Abolish Lodge Physicians—All Agree on the Main Point.

For some time past the M.D's. of Peterborough have been holding periodical consultations upon the advisability of abolishing the practice of some physicians in accepting the position of lodge physician to some of the many secret organizations, which in addition to the other many benefits derived, provide a medical attendant during the illness of the members of the order. For such medical attendance the physician so appointed receives an amount per capita from the lodge, and it is for the purpose of abolishing this practice that a round robbin was passed recently among the profession, and which was signed by all but two or three in Peterborough, but those who did not append their signatures to the document agreed to the principle and an effort will be made to have the Medical Council, during the coming year, pass an act making it unprofessional for a doctor to accept or continue the practice of accepting the position of lodge physician.

Should the medical gentlemen interested be successful in having this law passed each member of a lodge will then be compelled to secure a physician in the regular way. In the past no doubt large sums have been saved by some members in having a physician for the small sum of one dollar per year, and it will remain to be seen how the arrangement will be carried out. If successful the lodges will have to see that none of their members get sick and thus square the account with the doctors by not requiring their services. Every interest seems to be combining for their own protection. The doctors are also talking of establishing a "black list" upon which the names of all bad debtors will be registered, printed and forwarded to each member of the profession. The question of using the prescription blank furnished by the druggist is also being discussed, and it has been suggested that each physician should have his own, and upon which he will have an inscription forbidding the druggist from renewing the prescription without first obtaining the authorization of the physician. It is contended that the prescription is the property of the licensed physician signing it, and no druggist has the right to repeat it without authority.

The druggists had their innings last year. The doctors seem to be going "to bat" now.

For stomach and liver trouble, costiveness or biliousness, there is nothing better than "Madill's Stomach and Liver Pills."

THE CONTRACTOR WANTS THE TOWN TO PROTECT HIM.

The Council Meets To-Night to Ascertain the Legal Points Involved.

Contractor Robert Grant has been made a party to the suit of North Monaghan against the town, and to this Contractor Robert Grant seriously objects.

At a special meeting of the town council on Saturday evening, Mr. Moore, counsel for Mr. Grant, introduced a resolution, by the passage of which the council would have bound itself to protect Mr. Grant in the matter, by allowing, as we have explained, the city solicitor against the contractor as well as that against the town.

The resolution was divided into two sections. The latter portion, if passed, would bind the council to pay the contractor for the work he has already done on the sewer, as it is through no fault of his own that he is compelled to discontinue the ditching.

Mr. Scott was very anxious to have the resolution put through, but the members, although fully sympathizing with Mr. Grant and seeing the awkwardness of his position, were of the opinion that it would be better to have the opinion of the town solicitor on the subject before giving the final decision in the matter.

Mr. Grant was assured that the contractor of the council at his back, and that the members would see that he was protected in the matter, but in an affair of this kind it would not do to accede at once to his wishes without consulting the solicitor as to the legal aspect the case would assume under these circumstances.

HAD THE GOOD MEN

The council assembles again to-night, when Mr. Edwards will be present, and a definite settlement made regarding the resolution.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Health always brings wealth of beauty. A healthy state of the system comes with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a medicine prepared for woman's ailments—it cures those derangements and weaknesses which make woman's life miserable.

A woman who neglects to take proper exercise is particularly prone to excessive congestion, debility and a sluggish circulation. This is the time we advise the "Prescription." In all derangements and displacements of the special organs which result in "signs of inflammation," in catarrhal discharges from the lining membranes, and in distressing irregularities—this medicine is guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money is returned.

HAD TO FIGHT.

How a Captain Enforced Discipline Aboard Ship.

The British ship City of Florence was lying at anchor off port waiting to sail. There was a breeze of excitement on board, the result of which was a "scrap" between two sailors and a plunge for liberty into the bay. The crew had been engaged for some days, and the steward and the cook had become great cronies, and Capt. Leask noticed that the steward spent most of his time in the galley, and he took him to one side and spoke to him "like a father." He told him that it was very bad policy to get chummy with the cook, for it would be sure to end in a disagreement.

As the captain had predicted, it came to pass that the cook went to him with a long complaint about the steward, and scarcely had he gone out of the cabin when the steward came in with a similar tale.

"Wait a bit," said Capt. Leask, and he passed the word for the cook. When the latter entered the cabin the captain said:

"Now, then, you two gentlemen have started to fight, and we will sail to-morrow. It will be a continual fight on the home voyage, so the two of you go out there on the main deck and pummel each other until one cries enough, and let me hear no more of this."

The men went out and fought each other to a finish. There was little science displayed, but both could fight. The steward begged to be excused at the end of half an hour, but the captain insisted that the fight be continued. The steward rose to the occasion and landed on the cook's starboard ear, and the cook responded with a blow that knocked all the wind out of the steward's sails. The steward failed to come to time and sat on the deck until he recovered his wind.

"Go forward," said the captain to the cook. The steward began to strip himself.

"What are you doing?" demanded the captain.

"I'm going ashore," said the steward surlily; "I've had enough of this ship."

"Have you? Well, take your clothes with you. I don't want them. Put on that coat."

The steward put on his coat and then went to the side. Capt. Leask did not interfere with him, and he sprang lightly to the rail and took a header into the bay.

"Follow that man in a boat," cried the captain quickly to the mate, "and let him swim till he can't swim any more, then bring him back."

The orders were obeyed with alacrity and the boat followed the unfortunate steward until he appealed to the mate to take him back to the ship. He was taken back and landed on the ship a soaked, repentant, and crestfallen steward.

Bismarck's Last Waltz.

Mme. Carnette relates it thus: "Count Bismarck stood in a corner watching the dancers in the cotillion; the thought came to me that I might offer him a bouquet of roses, and thus compel him to dance with me. Herr von Bismarck was at that time the subject of universal interest. He accepted my bouquet and without hesitation responded to the invitation that went with it. He danced a waltz with me in a manner quite beyond criticism. This incident, which seemed to harmonize so little with Count Bismark's seriousness and the important part he was already playing in state affairs, amused immensely the kings and princes who were present. As he escorted me to my seat after the waltz he took a rosebud from the buttonhole of his coat and gave it to me with the remark:

"'Madame, please keep this bud as a memento of the last waltz that I shall ever dance. I shall never forget it.'"

Take Precautions.

A kerosene oil stove should not be left burning while no one is in the room, unless clean, and the wick carefully adjusted; accidents have several times resulted from a neglect of this precaution. When called away, it is best, to insure safety, always to put out the fire and relight it on your return. If the stove rests on the cooking stove, there is little danger, if left in burning order.

Wash Your Face.

Nothing is so destructive to the fair complexion as the habit of going to bed with an unwashed face. Remove the dust, open the pores and give nature a chance to do its work through the medium of the skin.

Catarrh is a constitutional disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a constitutional remedy. It cures catarrh. Give it a trial.

Watering Plants.

Watering garden plants, as commonly practiced, is an absolute injury to vegetation, for the reason that it is not done plentifully enough. When the earth is dry and hot the application of a little water only increases the heat and has a tendency to make the soil more compressed and drier than before. The most of our soils are more or less calcareous, and the action of the sun's heat has the same effect as heat upon limestone. The carbonic acid is expelled, and when brought in contact with moisture heat is generated, and unless sufficient water is applied to overcome the heat vegetation suffers. A sprinkling pot should never be used in time of drought, unless the soil around the roots of the plants is at the same time thoroughly soaked, and the watering should always take place after sunset, when the dew has begun to fall.

This is in accordance with natural laws. Rain and sunshine seldom appear together, and further, when nature waters vegetation the atmosphere is filled with moisture. Pool water and soap suds are good for the garden, and cistern water may be used, but should be exposed to the sun and air through the day before applying. Strong liquid from the barnyard is death to garden plants and should only be used after diluting until very weak.—Farmers' Voice.

The Tramp on Salt Water.

"Did you ever know that tramps travel by sea as well as by land?" inquired a sea captain. "Well, they do, and in the past two seasons more of 'em have taken to the salt water route than ever before. Coasting vessels are the favorite craft for tramps. They manage to get aboard just as a boat is about to sail and hide themselves in the hold, where they stay until the tug that pulls the vessel out casts off and leaves her, when they make their presence known. Sometimes there will be five or six of 'em aboard, and such a crowd is liable to make provisions run low before port is reached. Of course they are put to some kind of work, but there's mighty little to do aboard a coaster that a land lubber understands. These tramps are just like their land brothers. They are merely desirous of going from one place to another and keeping on the move all the time, although they sometimes tell mighty pitiful stories. I understand the evil is a good deal worse on the Pacific than it is on the Atlantic side, but it's bad enough on this side I assure you."—Washington Star.

A PRINTER'S ILLS.

A Brantford Compositor has Diabetes—He Drops 40 Pounds in Weight in a Short Time—How He Was Cured.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 15.—Thos Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier in this city, has seen some ups and downs in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr. Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six boxes worked a complete cure. Mr. Hazelhurst is to-day better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

S. P. SMITH, of Towanda, Pa., whose constitution was completely broken down, is cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He writes:

"For eight years, I was, most of the time, a great sufferer from constipation, kidney trouble, and indigestion, so that my constitution seemed to be completely broken down. I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and took nearly seven bottles, with such excellent results that my stomach, bowels, and kidneys are in perfect condition, and, in all their functions, as regular as clock-work. At the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, my weight was only 129 pounds; I now can brag of 159 pounds, and was never in so good health. If you could see me before and after using, you would want me for a traveling advertisement. I believe this preparation of Sarsaparilla to be the best in the market to-day."

SHOW US YOUR HANDS.

SOME OF THE SECRETS OF THE SEERS OF PALMISTRY.

Character Read in the Palms—By Studying the Features of Your Friends' Hands You May Learn their Characters—How It Is Done.

Whether there is anything of truth in the art of palmistry or not is a question difficult of decision; however, for those who may care to send their wits in this direction, most of the principal points from a recognized authority have been gleaned. Some knowledge of physiognomy and an instructive ability to note characteristics truly will not in any way interfere with the success of the ambitions pretty young girl or matron who wishes to play the role of seeress for the amusement of her friends.

Soft hands suggest one who labors with fatigue, to whom heavy work is a hardship, while the hand and character, if too large in proportion to the hand on a woman, betrays a scold, on a man a domestic tyrant. If the first phalange of the thumb be large, executive ability, strong will in carrying out a plan and power of control are present; if short, there is a lack of these characteristics, the owner is apt to be controlled by others, and will be weak in friendships and fickle in love.

The second division of the thumb, if long, shows a planning intellect; therefore, if both divisions are of sufficient and equal size, a strong, self-reliant character with intellect to plan and will to execute his plans may be expected.

The mounts of the hand are next in order. At the base of each finger is a little mound, or should be, of flesh. That at the base of the thumb is the Mount of Venus. It shows the physical strength and endurance of its possessor, the vitality and power of affection. If too well developed the nature is sensual.

The Mount of Jupiter is at the root of the index finger. Its indications are ambitions, honors, taste and intense likes and dislikes founded on the impressions. When too full it gives a tendency to vanity and egotism. Under the next finger is the Mount of Saturn. It implies earnestness, industry and prudence. The mount of the third finger is that of Apollo, which, if considerable in development, shows one may gain success through artistic or literary talents if cultivated and applied.

The Mount of Mercury is found under the little finger; it is found fully developed in the hands of men of science, also in those of successful teachers, preachers and debaters. The mount on the outer part of the palm below Mercury is Mars; its indications are courage, fearlessness in danger, and if over developed cruelty. Below Mars and opposite Venus is the Mount of the Moon, showing sentimentality, love of solitude, chastity in excess, and when quite a protuberance, discontent, sadness and caprice are marked characteristics.

Next to be considered are the three especial lines of the palm, with a few important accidental ones, and then we have a rather complete, if not minute, knowledge of palmistry. First is the line of life, showing the health, vitality and success of the individual. This line should begin midway between the thumb and forefinger, run clear and firm around the base of the thumb down to the wrist; such a line of life predicts good health, freedom from trouble and accidents. If, however, it be cut and broken by tiny lines, look out for nervous diseases and head sicknesses.

Next comes the head line, beginning at the starting point of the life line and extending through the middle of the palm, ending near its outer edge. Clear and deep in color, it speaks well of the intellect; if forked at the termination, it proves a possession of tact and policy. When this line joins and forms a well-defined angle with the life line, thought and action are in perfect harmony; if it does not join and there is an open space between the two, one is warned of a thoroughly hypocritical character.

The third prominent line in the hand, beginninning on the Mount of Jupiter and running straight across to the outer edge, is the line of the heart. This, deep and strongly marked, speaks well for the powers of affection; should it begin between the index and second fingers one may suspect a heart susceptible to the opposite sex; should it begin under the second or third finger it betokens a selfishness in the love relation, one who expects to be looked up to and obeyed. The line of fate begins in the lower part of the palm and extends up to the mount of Saturn, generally ending there. If unbroken, an even and tranquil life will be the possessor's; if cut by many lines, troubles and obstacles will annoy one's pathway.

Crisscross lines on the Mount of Jupiter show superstition, vanity and gayety; on Saturn, sadness and fear of misfortune; on Apollo, follies; on Mercury, deception, and on Venus, vulgarity. The loves of a lifetime are shown by small but distinct lines running parallel to the line of the heart and between this and the root of the little finger.

If one line only is formed the person is true to one object of the affections that will never be replaced.

A hand with tapering fingers indicates a mind of artistic bent.

A poet, painter or musician may have knotty and square tipped fingers, but he will always treat his subject in a material or practical way.

Long fingernails show a peacemaker, a steadfast friend, also a suspicious one. Short nails signify one who asserts and maintains his rights; broad nails, gentleness of disposition with some bashfulness; narrow nails, activity of body and with other indications, cruelty.

Round nails are honest, but belong to quick-tempered individuals. Fan-shaped nails betray vanity.

The crescent at the base of the nails indicates one frank in nature and speech; it also supposes good birth. A good-sized thumb is something to be proud of; it shows will and on the contrary betokens one enduring at physical effort and rather delighting in energetic activity.

Hard hands love adventure and travel; soft hands are content to hear of these things; hard hands may be strong in their friendship or love without much show of tenderness, while soft hands, more demonstrative, will not be so firm in affection.

The skin of the hand being too white suggests coldness and selfishness; if too red, coarseness and violent passions.

Now having some idea of the size and texture of the hand we will next look to its shape. A hand with smooth-pointed fingers has little order, but if smooth and square at the ends the very sight and idea of order is pleasing.

Knotty fingers indicate order, logic and a bit of suspicion in the character. —New York Advertiser.

When a doctor considers it necessary to prescribe sarsaparilla, he simply orders a bottle of Ayer's, knowing full well that he will obtain thereby a surer and purer preparation than any other which the druggist can furnish. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the Superior Medicine.

A Remarkable Event.

An event which has been the talk of the town for some weeks is the cure of Mr. Edward White, whose sufferings from Salt Rheum (Eczema) were well known. Mr. White's statement is as follows:

For 12 years previous to the last few months I have been a sufferer of the worst kind from Salt Rheum. I tried twelve different doctors, besides many patent medicines but received no benefit, but gradually became worse. Last January I was advised to try B. B. B. by the postmaster here. I soon perceived a decided change for the better, and it only took six bottles to make a complete cure.

EDW. WHITE, Victoria Corner, N.B.

Mr. J. B. Bowser, Merchant; Mr. Jas. W. Boyer, Manufacturer, and Mr. Thos. W. Letson, J. P., can certify to the truth of the above statement.

Cold in the head—Nasal Balm gives instant relief; speedily cures. Never fails.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affection, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the warmth of bed becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and a watery form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly afflicted from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

THREE RUNNING SORES

PHYSICIANS FAILED

BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

MRS. W. BENNETT, Acton P. O. Ont.

A SCALY ERUPTION

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Calcura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

line of the heart and between this and the root of the little finger.

If one line only is formed the person is true to one object of the affections that will never be replaced.

A hand with tapering fingers indicates a mind of artistic bent.

A poet, painter or musician may have knotty and square tipped fingers, but he will always treat his subject in a material or practical way.

Long fingernails show a peacemaker, a steadfast friend, also a suspicious one. Short nails signify one who asserts and maintains his rights; broad nails, gentleness of disposition with some bashfulness; narrow nails, activity of body and with other indications, cruelty.

Round nails are honest, but belong to quick-tempered individuals. Fan-shaped nails betray vanity.

The crescent at the base of the nails indicates one frank in nature and speech; it also supposes good birth. A good-sized thumb is something to be proud of; it shows will and on the contrary betokens one enduring at physical effort and rather delighting in energetic activity.

Hard hands love adventure and travel; soft hands are content to hear of these things; hard hands may be strong in their friendship or love without much show of tenderness, while soft hands, more demonstrative, will not be so firm in affection.

The skin of the hand being too white suggests coldness and selfishness; if too red, coarseness and violent passions.

Now having some idea of the size and texture of the hand we will next look to its shape. A hand with smooth-pointed fingers has little order, but if smooth and square at the ends the very sight and idea of order is pleasing.

Knotty fingers indicate order, logic and a bit of suspicion in the character. —New York Advertiser.

TABLE MANNERS.

In the Old Days of Hard Eaters and Hard Drinkers.

Bread, milk, butter and cheese were the staple articles of food, bread being the chief "A domestic was termed a man's 'hlaf-oetan,' or loaf-eater." A lady was a "hlaf-dig," a loaf-giver. Bacon was the principal flesh food, and other meats were also salted. Hence boiling was the common form of cooking. They even boiled their geese. The knives of a late period resembled modern razors. One in the Cambridge Museum was labeled "A Roman razor."

After dinner the cloth was cleared, hands were washed, as before the meal, and all commenced drinking. When King Edwy left the cup for the society of his newly made Queen, Dunstan forcibly dragged him back to the guests, because it was gross disrespect to leave off early after dinner. The cups were often of precious metals, curiously engraved and of much value, and were specially left in wills. The Abbey of Ramsey thus received from the Lady Ethelgiva "two silver cups for the use of the brethren in the refectory, in order that while drink is served in them to the brethren at their repast my memory may be more firmly imprinted on their hearts."

In pledging they always kissed. Story-telling and singing in the humbler gatherings were partaken by turns. In this way Caedmon, the Anglo-Saxon Milton, was first made aware of his poetical powers. Dancing was expressed by words meaning hopping, leaping, tumbling. It appears, therefore, to have been a somewhat violent exercise. The mirth among the men was often coarse to obscenity, and scenes occurred in the halls which may not be described. In some cases lands were granted to vassals on conditions which would degrade the roughest London costermonger. The ladies modestly retired early from these orgies, which frequently ended in quarrels and bloodshed, and in their bower, which was a chamber built separate from the hall, amused themselves undisturbed by the wassaliers.

The bower was furnished with a round table, stools and generally a bed. Chairs were for the great. The bed was a sack filled with straw and laid on a bench, hence the words bench and straw were commonly used for bed. When the bed was to be made, they took the bed sack out of the chest, filled it with fresh straw and laid it on the bench in the recess of the room, provided with a curtain. Bedsteads were rare, and only used by people of rank.—Westminster Review.

Just As They Always Were.

Women grow more frivolous every day. Young ladies scorn housework and learn to embroider, to play the piano and to flirt, while their mothers are engaged in all the drudgery of the household. They eschew all useful reading, and prefer French novels to English classics. In selecting husbands they choose dandies with social graces rather than men with solid attainments. They are full of strange, whimsical notions peculiar to the age. Reader, this is a synopsis of the opinions of an English magazine writer of 1789 on the women of his time. They sound very much as if they were written by certain pessimists of to day. There is no new thing under the sun.—Boston Transcript.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Mr. E. W. Elcombe occupied the pulpit of the Murray street Baptist church last evening in the absence of Rev. Mr. Trotter who is attending the Baptist Conference up west. General Haultain conducted the morning service.

The Baptist Y.P.S.C.E. meets this evening for the first lesson in Christian culture. The more important points in the Baptist creed will be taken up and discussed.

Yesterday morning the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed by a great many in St. Andrew's church. The pastor preached a most appropriate sermon from John xix, 30: "It is finished." The choir sang beautifully an anthem entitled "The Lord is my Shepherd." In the evening the congregation was large, completely filling the church. An impressive and stirring sermon was preached from Hebrews II, 3. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great Salvation?" The congregation was much affected. The choir being so engaged during the week was not up to its usual form in the evening.

REV. DR. SEXTON AT GEORGE STREET METHODIST CHURCH.

The Rev. Dr. Sexton, well known both as a preacher and orator all over this continent as well as in Europe, preached morning and evening in the Methodist church, George street, yesterday. The congregations were large at both services, that in the evening being especially so. In the morning the rev. doctor took for his text I Cor., II, 2, and preached an eloquent sermon on the "One Thing to be Known," dealing with the philosophy of the cross, and the humanitarian character of christianity.

In the evening the doctor dealt with a subject not often discussed in the pulpit, taking for his text a passage usually considered full of difficulty. II Thes., ii, 11-12. This theme was "God Sending Man Strong Delusion."

The text he said might to have an especial reference to the time in which the apostle lived, but it was equally applicable to our own day. For error was as old as Satan, and it appeared again and again in much the same form, but clad with a new name. The delusions of to-day had been seen in the world's history before and would doubtless be seen again in future generations. That we lived in very perilous times no one could doubt who used his powers of observation. Society was in a state of ferment. The old landmarks were in danger of being swept away and men's minds were agitated and anxious. Nor was this altogether an evil. The unjust might lead to a calmer and more permanent rest, the confusion to a more lasting order.

The doctor then described at some length the class of persons referred to in the text, they believed not the truth and had pleasure in unrighteousness or better rendered "were well pleased in the unrighteousness." They not only practiced unrighteous acts, but they took pleasure in so doing. Coming to the delusion to which they had made themselves subject he remarked:—

The Greek term here rendered delusion is very epressive. It is energean planes, literally the inworking of error. The expression is a very important one, and shows the source and mode of operation of the error. They believed a lie. The Greek word rendered lie is pseudel, that which is false. Luther has it, "Glauben der Luge;" and in the Revised Version of the New Testament the word "lie" is retained. It is unimportant whether we adopt this reading, or follow the Greek and render it falsehood; that which is false. The meaning is clearly the same; the inworking of error leads to the belief of that which is not true. Internally the working goes on. It is not external, the term used being employed in opposition, to dynamos, force, in the external universe. The inworking of error is opposed to the inworking of the Spirit of God, which leads into all truth. But are we responsible for this error inworking in our souls? Assuredly yes. Much egregious nonsense is talked in the present day about the irresponsibility of men for their opinions. We only believe, it is said, according to evidence, and no man can believe either against evidence strong enough to carry conviction, or in the absence of such evidence. * * * * *

Our opinions regarding religious truths may be influenced for good or evil by our moral acts and predilections. The statement, therefore, that we are irresistibly driven to certain conclusions according to the evidence presented to us, is, when made without any qualification, to say the least of it, misleading. In the next place, before we can escape responsibility for our beliefs, we must be able to show that we have lost no opportunity for obtaining evidence, and that we have used our utmost endeavours to learn the truth upon all subjects on which we are called upon to form an opinion. And if we cannot do this, then responsibility arises, not directly for the false views that we may hold, but for the neglect of seeking for and obtaining evidence which in all probability would have dispelled them.

Evil inclinations, love of self and immoral acts bring about the inworking of error referred to in the text, and the result can be easily foreseen. Most potent is it in its operation, speedily subjugating, not simply the affections, but the intellect itself, and hence distorting the judgment on matters of momentous importance to the well-being of the individual here and hereafter. In our own experience we can see how rapidly this process goes on unless guarded against with great care, and closely watched at every step. Free will belongs to all men, and in accordance with this freedom we make habits by our own voluntary choice, which habits speedily become permanent. We have only to reflect, to see how potent is this "inworking of error," and how very soon it will subjugate all the powers and faculties of the mind, unless it be checked at the commencement. Men pursue an evil course until they come to believe it to be right. A hundred illustrations might be given, familiar enough to you all. The first time we do a wrong act our conscience troubles us greatly, but only let us keep on repeating the act, and we shall soon cease to have any conscience to give us pain. "The inworking of error" will destroy conscience, and we shall reach that most fearful of all states—in which no remorse for wrong-doing is experienced, but rather in fact a pride in sin. Thus they come to "believe a lie," or as the Greek has it, "believe in that which is false."

The believing a lie does not necessarily denote intellectual, or what is usually called speculative error, but refers more particularly to moral questions. And yet intellectual belief is not to be excluded. The inworking of error is potent here also. A man may believe according to evidence, and yet it may be his own fault that more evidence was not obtained. Belief is largely influenced by the will. Don't let us forget that. Man very largely moulds his own character, and with it his beliefs. Every man has a free will, and by his voluntary choice he makes habits which become permanent. These constitute his character. In the end he comes to "believe a lie," and his doing so is entirely his own fault.

And this delusion or inworking of error is sent by God. "God shall send," or more correctly rendered, "God sendeth"—that is, He is ever sending. Spiritual laws are as certain in their operation as those which regulate material things. Indeed, material things and the laws of matter are but symbols of the deeper and more abiding spiritual realities. Does error come from God? No, but He abandons men to it when they have wilfully and persistently broken the law of righteousness, just as they fall into disease of body when a natural law has been violated. There is no help for this. It is in accordance with the eternal truth and righteousness of God. Why do our bodies suffer if we commit acts of excess? Not because God wills that we should so suffer, but because the suffering is a necessary consequence of the violation of His laws. It is His means of directing us aright, and if we fail to obey Him, the consequences must fall upon our own heads. The laws of nature are inexorable, and cannot be broken with impunity. Let a man ruin his constitution by dissipation, and, although God may forgive him for the sin, he will carry his diseased and enfeebled body to a premature grave. The pardon does not undo the consequences of the wrong-doing. "The inworking of error" necessarily carries with it its own penalty—a penalty stamped on it by God.

Thus God does not directly send the delusion, but "the inworking of error" is as much one of His laws as gravitation. A man may close his eyes to the natural light, or live for years in darkness, and the result in the end will be blindness. Does God send the blindness? Directly, no. Indirectly, yes; for it is the violation of His law that caused it. So if we close our eyes to the spiritual light, we shall become spiritually blind, and live in darkness, mistaking the spiritual things that surround us; in other words, we shall be deluded. God sends this delusion, that is, it follows the evil course of doing what He has prohibited, and not doing what He has commanded.

The preacher then described at length the ourpose of the delusion which was judgement, not damnation as rendered in the ordinary version of the Bible.

After the service was over the Doctor delivered an address at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A.

To-night he will lecture on "The Origin of Man, was it by Evolution or Creation?"

BIG LACROSSE FOR PETERBOROUGH.

A FINAL FIGHT FOR THE $300 LACROSSE TROPHY.

The Shamrocks-Capitals Tie to be Played Off in Peterborough—Negotiations on Foot to that End—The Match being here Depends on the Snap of Our Local Sports.

There is every probability that with ordinarily energetic management the grand "saw-off" of the tie between the great champion lacrosse teams, the "Shamrocks," of Montreal, and the "Capitals," of Ottawa, will take place in Peterborough. On Sept. 29th the grand struggle took place on the Shamrocks grounds, Montreal, between the

in the world, and so evenly were the giants matched that the result was a tie, and therefore the possession of the stakes—a $300 trophy—was undecided. The tie is to be played off this season, and as the Capitals will not play again in Montreal, nor the Shamrocks in Ottawa, a neutral place is to be selected and on the part of the Shamrocks Peterborough has been chosen. A member of the Shamrocks wrote to a friend in Peterborough, the letter being received this morning, that the Shamrocks are perfectly willing to

PLAY OFF THE TIE IN

Peterborough, if sufficient inducements could be given.

Here is a chance for our enterprising citizens to show their mettle. The Driving Park Lacrosse Grounds, about 16 acres in extent are sufficiently ample both for the purposes of the match and for the accommodation of the thousands who will throng to witness it. The grounds in a few hours can be made as fit as a cricket crease. As to the patronage that will be bestowed upon one of the grandest lacrosse struggles there can be no doubt. The tie match in Montreal three weeks ago drew a crowd represented by $15,000 gate receipts, and if the match the 27th of October, which is mentioned, would witness thousands of visitors pouring in from the seven points from which railways converge in Peterborough. The Montreals guarantee an excursion of 1200 from that city.

CAN BE SECURED FOR PETERBOROUGH,

The arrangement of the local match is now in the hands of wide-awake citizens and it is hoped that all who wish to secure for the town the benefit of the presence of thousands of visitors and to secure for the citizens the pleasure of seeing the very biggest lacrosse the town has ever seen will act.

There must be; no hesitation—prompt action is called for the public depend upon our wide-awake citizens interested in sport doing the right thing.

Suicide at Jerseyville, Ont.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—Mr. W. H. Howell, clerk in the Bon Marche, this city, received a telegram on Saturday announcing the suicide of his brother, Curson Howell, at Jerseyville, township of Ancaster, in Brant county, fifteen miles west of Hamilton. The suicide was 40 years of age, formerly resident in Toronto, but of late has been living in Detroit. His family relations have not been of the most pleasant character, and of late he has made repeated threats of ending his existence. He arrived in Jerseyville on Friday from Detroit, and gave out that the object of his visit was to view his mother's grave. About 7 p.m. he left his hotel to go up to the cemetery. Saturday morning, shortly after daylight, a visitor to the cemetery found the corpse of Howell lying across his mother's grave. Blood and brains were oozing from a gaping wound in his head and a revolver with one chamber destroyed, which was found beside him, showed the means he had taken to end his existence.

The Howland Memorial.

MIMICO, Oct. 22.—The annual meeting of the Industrial School Association on Saturday was attended by large number of people, the special feature being the laying of the corner-stone of the Howland Memorial building. The afternoon's programme consisted of drill by the boys of the Victoria Industrial School, inspecting of workshops and cottages by the visitors and the laying of the corner-stone by Mr. H. A. Massey, after which the meeting was held. Hon. G. W. Ross occupied the chair, and reports of Sec-Treasurer Alexander Girls' School, secetrary Board of Management and superintendents were read and adopted. The officers for the ensuing year were re-elected. The present by-laws were confirmed, after which speeches were made by some of the gentlemen present.

A Farmer Killed by a Train.

SCHNECTADY, N.Y., Oct. 22.—J. K. Tullock, a farmer, 51 years of age, on his way home from Rotterdam Reformed Church, was struck by a West Shore passenger train and thrown from his waggon with great violence upon his leg and arm and was horribly mangled, necessitating the amputation of the leg. He was taken to his home, where he died from his injuries.

North Grey Liberals.

OWEN SOUND, Oct. 22.—The Liberals of the north riding of Grey met in the town hall here on Saturday to select a candidate for the next general election for the House of Commons. The only candidate in the field being Mr. John Clarke, reeve of Kepple and ex-warden, his nomination was made unanimous.

ARCHDEACON CASEY'S CATHEDRAL SERMON.

FOR SWEET CHARITY'S SAKE.

Annual Sermon of the St. Vincent de Paul's Society—The Venerable Archdeacon Talks on His Subject "The Church—Musical Vespers Sung.

Yesterday was the day set apart at St. Peter's Cathedral for the special service and sermon in the interests of that excellent charity organization St. Vincent de Paul's society. There was an unusually large congregation present and his Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, occupied the throne in the sanctuary. Rev. Father Scollard sang vespers and an eloquent sermon was preached by Rev. Archdeacon Casey, upon the subject, "The Church."

The Archdeacon opened his discourse by stating that the Church was the consummation of revealed religion, and that there was no time in which there was not a revealed religion on earth.

Almighty God had revealed Himself to the first parents, Adam and Eve, and to the patriarchs, and He revealed to Abraham the promise He made to Adam of on Mt. Sinai. He gave the old law to Moses, which was to have a completion in the coming of the Saviour and in the church of the new law.

He gave the commission of the church in the words of the Saviour, "All power is given thee in heaven and upon earth, as the Father has sent me, so do I send you. Go forth, therefore, and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." From these words the Archdeacon showed that the Church had the right and authority to teach what was revealed by Jesus Christ, for all time, as Christ promised to be with His Church until the consummation of all things.

The fact that the Church has the authority of Christ to teach is proof that she must necessarily teach the truth, for with the commission Christ had declared that he who believed and is baptized and he that believeth not shall be condemned.

The Church, the Archdeacon, stated, was founded on the Apostles, and spread throughout all nations. It is a visible Church, and all the members can be known by their union with its head. The fact that the church is visible, and may be known by all, and is infallible in its teachings, makes it necessary for all who wish to save their souls to belong to the true Church, to believe its doctrines, and to practice the virtues which it is established to promote. Hence the doctrine of the Church, which is, "Without the Church there is no salvation," is but another expression of the WORDS OF CHRIST,

"He that believeth not shall be condemned."

The doctrine, "Without the Church there is no salvation," means, therefore, that all are obliged to obey the positive commandment of Christ to enter the one true fold. To be bound by any commandment, knowledge of the commandment is necessary, hence those to whom the teaching of Christ has not been proposed, or who are ignorant of the commandment, are not condemned on that account. But human reason never willingly rests in doubt, but naturally seeks the truth. Those who are in doubt concerning the true religion are obliged to remove that doubt if possible. Therefore, when any man doubts, concerning the true Church, as the salvation of the soul depends upon the knowledge of this truth, which is easy to obtain, he commits a most grevious sin by not taking the necessary steps to remove such doubt and on that account.

The Church as a living organization, continued he, is composed of what is called the body and the soul. The body consists of those who outwardly belong to the church and the soul of those sanctified by the grace of Jesus Christ. A person may belong to the soul of the church and not to the body, when he has observed all the commandments of God as far as his knowledge goes and is in a state of sanctifying grace. The church judges no man and does not pretend to have knowledge of the interior workings of divine grace in any particular soul.

Christ has commanded; it is for men to obey and enter the true church. In this age, however, of material progress, silver and gold are and few men are found to embrace the true religion of Christ, despite the scoffs and raillery of a scoffing world. Who are they, queried he, who will leave friends, father and mother and all, to embrace the cross of Christ? Alas, how few there are, while on the other hand for the sake of a little gold, not to offend their friends, how many there are who refrain from entering that church, which in their hearts they knew Christ established, but of these Christ has said, "They are not worthy of Me."

The vespers were musical and special, as well as excellent music was furnished by the choir, under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Hiller. The following music, incidental to the service, was well rendered —:

"Magnificat," by Rossini—full choir, solos by G. Ball, tenor, and R. J. Hiller, bass.

"Miserere," by Lambillotte—full choir, soloist, Miss M. Hurley, soprano.

"O Salutaris," by Verdi—duet, Miss M. Hurley, soprano, and Miss L. Hurley, contralto.

Solo—"Ave Verum," by H. Millard, Mr. R. J. Hiller.

"Tantum Ergo" in F, by Lambillotte—full choir.

The singing of the full choir was quite satisfactory, and it would not be amiss to mention particularly the singing of the "O Salutaris" duet by the Misses Hurley.

The offertory was liberal, a substantial sum having been taken.

SIXTEEN LOST AT SEA.

Peary's Steamer Falcon Thought to Have Gone Down.

THE CREW NEWFOUNDLANDERS

The Vessel is Now ten Days Over Due—She Left Philadelphia Oct. 3 With Anthracite Coal Overlending Said to Have Caused the Disaster.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—It is feared that the steam sealer Falcon, which conveyed the Peary party to and from Greenland has been lost with her entire crew of sixteen men. After landing the members of the Peary party who returned this year and the members of the auxiliary expedition and their baggage, the Falcon took aboard a cargo of anthracite coal for her home port, St. Johns, Nfld, She sailed from Philadelphia October 3 and nothing has been heard of her since. Nineteen days have passed since the vessel sailed. She is now ten days overdue. Westergard & Co., her consigners, have virtually given her up, and although the possibility exists that she may still be afloat there is little doubt that she has met with disaster. The Falcon's crew of sixteen men were all residents of Newfoundland and most of them live at St. Johns. Their names follow: Henry Bartlett, captain; Edward Tracey, first officer; Thomas Snow, second officer; Carl Fischer, chief engineer; Chas. Rankin, second engineer; David Barry; John Wells and George Kennedy, firemen, Lawrence Hackett, chief steward; Bernard Wall, assistant steward; Michael Walsh, John Luttess, Stephen Johnson, James Burridge, John Verge and John Cassidy, seamen. Statements have been made that the vessel was too heavily loaded, and that in addition to the coal in her hold she carried all she could on deck.

Would Denounce the A. P. A.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—At an elaborate banquet celebration of the 40th anniversary of the discovery of America by the Columbus Club last night a letter of regret was read from Civil Service Commissioner Roosevelt of New York. In part he said: "I should certainly devote my speech to denouncing as strongly as I know how the A. P. A. and all kindred associations. It is an outrage, in my opinion, to vote for or against a man because of his creed or of his birthplace if only he is a good American citizen."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The latest advices received by the marine hospital service show that cholera in Europe is on the decrease, and it is hoped that the advent of cold weather will put an end to the epidemic entirely. MORE HOPEFUL NEWS

A Reported Improvement in the Czar's Condition.

READY FOR THE SUCCESSION

Preparations for Nicholas' Reception at Corfu Are Going on Notwithstanding the Fact of His Illness and Perhaps Approaching Death.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Russian ambassador received a despatch from Livadia yesterday afternoon saying that the Czar was much better. This news was communicated to all callers at the embassy.

The Daily News' despatch from Berlin says: "The Czar walked half an hour in the park yesterday. The doctors keep him out of bed as much as possible so as to maintain his normal energy and counteract the weakness of the heart which is increased by lying.

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—The first despatch of yesterday concerning the Czar's condition was received here from Yalta, near Livadia. It was substantially as follows: "If the Czar's death should not be hastened by heart failure owing to recurring spasms or by apoplexy, both incidental to his malady, the doctors hope to combat the uræmia for some time. Usually the final stage of Bright's disease is marked with convulsions, delirium and at the last prolonged coma. These symptoms have not set in."

The North German Gazette says: A semi-official despatch received this morning says the condition of the Czar leaves everything to be desired. According to human foresight hope of a cure is excluded. Nevertheless, the press have been overhasty in treating the Czar as a dead man. We have good reason to state that a catastrophe is not expected in the immediate future.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A despatch to the Herald from Vienna says: The Czarewitch has telegraphed here that his father's state is not very alarming.

A cable to the Herald from Biaritz says: Better news has reached the Czar's relatives here. The Czar has resisted the weakness which presented the gravest danger, and a more hopeful feeling prevails.

VIENNA, Oct. 23.—The Fremdenblatt says the Grand Duke Alexis, who arrived here yesterday evening on his way to Livadia, received a despatch from the Czarewitch saying that the Czar felt better, but that otherwise his condition was unchanged.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 23.—A despatch received here this morning from Livadia says the Czar passed a good night and feels stronger to-day.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Corfu to the Figaro says that notwithstanding the unfavorable reports of the Czar's condition the preparations for his reception there are still in progress.

The French foreign office has been paralyzed by the reports from Liviadia. Business has been at such a complete standstill that Lord Dufferin, the British ambassador, has been unable to finish his negotiations as to colonial questions. He will go to London October 27 or earlier, as there is nothing to be done here.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Tageblatt says that all preparations in the Russian capital point to the succession of the Czarewith, Nicholas. He says that the war office already holds in readiness the standards of Emperor Nicholas II. "The Czarewitch's marriage with the Princess Alix of Hesse," he adds, "will be hastened in view of the house law declared by Emperor Paul I. that no unmarried heir should succeed to the throne. Should the Czarewitch be childless upon ascending the throne the Grand Duke Michael, his younger brother, would be declared the heir presumptive."

PARIS, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Livadia received at the Russian Embassy at 4.45 yesterday afternoon said that the Czar was improving noticeably.

SEVEN MEN BURIED.

A Building Falls Inflicting Serious Injury to Several.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 23.—The Pabst Brewing Co. is engaged in tearing down an old building at the corner of Wabash and Third streets preparatory to putting up a new one. Yesterday the walls collapsed and buried seven workmen beneath the ruins. A large force was immediately set to work to rescue the men, and all were taken out alive, though some will probably die. The injured are: Frank Mullen, probably fatally; William Whalen; arm amputated; Andrew Wilash, severe injuries in head; Jacob Schmidt, scalp wounds; Steven Shier, rib broken and internal injuries; Andrew Nelson, badly cut and bruised; Eugene Brodhagen, dangerously injured about the head. The building inspector warned the contractor yesterday morning of the danger.

Diamond Mining Depressed.

CAPETOWN, Oct. 23.—Premier Cecil Rhodes presided yesterday at the annual meeting in Kimberley of the De Beers Mining Company. He said that the diamond product for the year was valued at £2,820,000. After deducting expenses barely £1,950,000 remained, but the dividends would be maintained. In referring to the American diamond market he said that he favored free trade but also reciprocity. If the Cape excluded Brother Jonathan's products perhaps it would bring him to his senses. He would not again ask the shareholders to vote £10,000 for an exhibit of diamonds in America. The moral was that they should leave America alone.

Rome "Socialist Workers" Suppressed.

ROME, Oct. 23.—Many associations known as "Socialist workers" which have for some time past existed in various parts of the country have been suppressed by the authorities, on the ground that they tend to excite and foster class hatred among the people.

ANOTHER ARREST MADE

A Tramp Held for the Listowel Authorities at Pickering.

WORE A BLOOD STAINED COAT.

Says His Garment Was Soiled in a Fight at Toronto—Answers the Description of Jessie Keith's Murderer Save in One Particular.

PICKERING, Ont., Oct. 23.—Constable Decker arrested a tramp at Cataract yesterday afternoon who resembles the description given in the papers of the tramp who was seen in the vicinity of Listowel on the Friday afternoon of the Jessie Keith murder except that he was clean shaven and had his hair cut rather short. He wore dark pants, brown hat, and coat. There appeared to be marks of blood on his coat which he stated he got in a row in Toronto. He was taken to the County jail, at Whitby.

Mr. R. Household, the late auditor of of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, states that a committee of four or five influential holders of Grand Trunk stock, representing some $750,000, are demanding from the Board of Directors that a strict investigation of the accounts of the company be made before the semi-annual meeting is held, on Tuesday, October 30. Household in this connection suspects that the company is living on loans, and he says, further, that if the enquiry is granted, and the results are as he expects they will be, the committee will be ready to lay the whole case before the meeting and also demand that Sir Henry Tyler retire from the Presidency of the company, and that the Board of Directors be re-formed.

LISTOWEL, Ont., Oct. 23.—There are no new developments as to the Keith tragedy. About 9 o'clock yesterday morning word was received from Alma, 30 miles northeast of here, of a man answering the description of the man wanted. A constable went out, and, after some inquiry as to his whereabouts at the time of the tragedy, found that he was ignorant of the facts, and after having satisfactory statements they released him.

The body was fearfully disfigured. There were great gashes in the throat and bruises on the head and body. The girl had evidently been struck with a heavy stick and stunned. Then she was carried into the wood where she was found. There her throat was cut from ear to ear, and then the brute, as if glorying in his horrible work, slashed the body with a sharp knife.

There was a long cut across the stomach, and another one in a downward direction, from the neck right down the whole length of the body.

When the body was found it was entirely naked, save for a white petticoat which was wrapped around the neck.

The petticoat did not belong to the murdered girl, but was made for a large, stout woman.

The clothes of the victim were found on Saturday afternoon. They were near where the body was discovered, and all the articles were there except the hat and boots.

The valise carried by the murderer has been found in the woods. It contained a number of articles of female wearing apparel. There was also a pair of overalls spotted with blood.

WANT CONFEDERATION.

Newfoundland, Says Mr. Murray, Would Like to Unload Her Public Debt.

HALIFAX, Oct. 23.—James Murray, a former member of the Newfoundland Government arrived from St. John's yesterday. In an interview on political affairs in the colony, among other things he said: "Public finances of the colony are in such condition that the tendency is to seek relief in confederation and thus get Canada to assume the public debt and its consequent responsibilities. Fisheries this year are turning out very poor. Labrador fish is worth only about $3 per quintal and this year it is only worth $2.50. Much privation and distress is anticipated during the coming winter in outlying districts. This will be a heavy drain upon the government for relief in addition to their other difficulties. This is the first year Newfoundland has had really bad fishing since the Whiteway party got in office in 1889."

THE CURRAN BRIDGE.

Emmanuel St. Louis, the Contractor, Charged With Fraud.

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.—Criminal proceedings were taken out yesterday afternoon at the instance of the Dominion Government against Emmanuel St. Louis, the big Montreal contractor, who built the famous Curran bridge. The information, which was sworn out by Commissioner Sherwood, of the Dominion Police, charges St. Louis with six offences of obtaining money by false pretences from the Government. He is also charged with destroying his books. The Government's action has caused a sensation as St. Louis has many influential friends in the party.

Date of Baptist Conventions Changed.

ST. THOMAS, Oct. 23.—At the Baptist convention yesterday a most important change was made respecting the date of meeting of the convention which was on motion altered from October to the last week in May, to take effect in 1895. The associational returns as a consequence will in future be made up to March 31. The foreign mission report showed a most successful record. The entire receipts for the year were $27,850. For the last fifteen years the membership of the churches has doubled itself each five years. Rev. B. Garside, returned missionary, read an important paper on "Face to face with heathendom," describing the country and people as they have appeared to him in the course of his work in India.

Mercier's Case is Peculiar.

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 23.—Ex-Premier Mercier's condition is puzzling the medical men. He was unconscious to-day and it was thought that he was dying, but towards the afternoon he rallied and to-night was reported a little better. He has frequent fits of unconsciousness and it is expected that he will die in one of these.

THE CHINESE-JAPANESE WAR.

The King's Palace Guarded by 400 Japanese Soldiers.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Graphic has this despatch from Chemulpo: Four hundred Japanese have been quartered in the King's palace in Seoul in consequence, it is said, of the discovery that the King's father is in league with the Tonghak rebels. The Chinese are mobilizing large forces in Kuren and Pow-Ting-Fu. The King's second son started for Hiroshima, Japan, on October 15, with a quantity of presents for the Mikado. Some 1,800 Japanese who were wounded in battle are under treatment here. There are many more in Seoul and 2,100 have been sent to Japan. At Ping Yang there are 1,200 Chinese in the hospital. Other despatches repeat the previous reports as to the opening of letters sent by Europeans in Corea. The mail bag between Chemulpo and Seoul was detained three weeks.

The Tien Tsin correspondent of the Times says that Admiral Ito with his fleet of 17 vessels is off the coast opposite Ping Yang and the Chinese fleet is at Wei Hai-Wei.

Japs Open a Despatch Bag.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch to the Central News from Shanghai says that the British consul at Seoul states that a despatch bag which was officially and amply sealed must have been opened while in transit from Chemulpo to Seoul. This must have been done, the consul adds, with the knowledge of the highest Japanese officials at Seoul, because they have since shown that they were acquainted with the gist of the contents of the bag. The consul has requested the Foreign Office to cable him instructions as to what action he shall take in the matter.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The officials of the Chinese Legation gave an emphatic denial of the reports that China is negotiating with Japan for peace or that she will at this time seriously consider overtures of peace from any source whatever. "The winter season" said one of these gentlemen to-day, "is so near at hand that hostilities must necessarily cease in a few weeks until the warmer weather of next year. China meanwhile will continue her preparations for war. What conclusions may be reached during the interval between now and spring no one can foretell but the present sentiment of the Chinese people to-day is for a continuance of the war and the rejection of any proposals looking towards peace."

TIEN TSIN, Oct. 23.—It is stated from a reliable source that negotiations for peace between China and Japan are proceeding at Seoul. Chinese officials at London are, however, inclined to discredit the story.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23,—Within the last few days heavy orders from Japan have been placed in New York for canvass duck, suitable for army tents and sails, and for leather and manufactured boots suitable for military use.

SIXTY PEOPLE KILLED.

Rio Citizens Discover a Pit of Explosives, Which Go Off on Removal.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23.—Captain Hudgins, of the coffee barque Dom Pedro II., now in port, reports that a dynamite explosion occurred in Rio a few days prior to September 6, when his vessel sailed for Baltimore, whereby 60 persons were killed.

A Brazilian soldier discovered near the English cemetery a subterranean magazine in which the insurgents of the recent rebellion had concealed a large quantity of gunpowder, cartridges and dynamite shells, which they evidently intended using against the government. A rough cart drawn by two mules was sent to the scene to remove the contents of the hidden magazine to a place of safety. A detachment of soldiers accompanied the cart and a curious crowd of citizens followed it to the little hill which had been dug out to hold the explosives.

A quantity of the shells had been placed in the cart, and a pile of others had been passed out close behind it when one of the soldiers, while in the act of handling a shell, dropped it among the others. The same second an explosion shook the earth, a sheet of flame shot up and a cloud of whitish smoke hid everything from view. The vessels in the harbor rocked at their moorings and the entire city was thrown into wild excitement. More than a ton of dynamite had exploded from the dropping of the shell. The soldiers and mules were blown into fragments.

"Love and Life" is in the Cellar.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—In regard to the published report that as superintendent of public buildings he had decided that the painting "Love and Life" was too immoral to be hung in the White House, Col. John M. Wilson, the official thus referred to, says: "Upon the request of the state department I allowed the picture to be stored in the basement of the White House. I have no authority to say what shall or shall not be put on the walls of the executive mansion. The painting has never been unpacked and I have expressed no opinion about it.

The Aquia Creek Train Robbery.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Oct. 23.—Charles J. Searcey, the alleged Aquia Creek train robber, left here yesterday in charge of Robert Pinkerton, Sheriff Edrington and Commonwealth Attorney White and was taken to Stafford court-house for a hearing. The commonwealths attorney of Stafford county has prepared papers for the requisition of Charles A. Morganfield, the alleged accomplice of Searcey, who is held in Cincinnati. Mr. White wired the Cincinnati authorities to hold Morganfield for the Virginia officers.

Lactated Food the Baby's Strong Tower of Safety.

The food that babies love and cherish every day, is indeed a triumph in the art of infant feeding.

Before the production of Lactated Food it is well known that mothers of bottle-fed infants were obliged to make a change of diet for the little ones, at least once a month. This had to be done because babies became nauseated when fed too long on the common foods. The old foods often brought on infantile troubles and sickness, and the great majority of hand-fed infants died.

Infants love Lactated Food, and take it with a relish and zest. Being modeled after nature's food—mother's milk—it is palatable, healthful, strengthening and invigorating.

Lactated Food is a boon to every home in Canada where there is a baby. It "Saves babies' lives."

Consumption—Low Condition

Wonderful Results From Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Miss Hannah Wyatt
Toronto, Ont.

"Four years ago while in the old country (England), my daughter Hannah was sent away from the hospital, in a very low condition with consumption of the lungs and bowels, and weak action of the heart. The trip across the water to this country seemed to make her feel better for a while. Then she began to get worse, and for 14 weeks she was unable to get off the bed. She grew worse for five months and lost the use of her limbs and lower part of body, and if she sat up in bed had to be propped up with pillows. Physicians

Said She Was Past All Help

and wanted me to send her to the 'Home for Incurables.' But I said as long as I could hold my hand up she should not go. We then began

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

Go to the Fountain.

Your Burden of Pain and Suffering Will Roll Away.

Paine's Celery Compound Heals and Cures.

Thousands Have Been Given a New Lease of Life.

TEST ITS VIRTUE, WEARY SUFFERER.

"Go with thy pains to the fountain,
Go with thy load of disease;
Use nature's curer and healer,
Thou shalt have health, strength and ease.

Every ailing, sick and diseased man, woman and child must go to the same fountain for cure. There is no fashionable or royal road for the elite and wealth of society; the noble of birth, the titled and affluent must lay hold of the same means for banishing disease and suffering that is so eagerly sought after by those in humbler positions and circumstances.

As the sunshines on the rich and poor, the righteous and unrighteous, blessing all alike; so does Paine's Celery Compound give life, health, strength and a fresh lease of life to people of every grade and class who are victims of nervousness, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, indigestion and liver and kidney troubles.

All troubles quickly roll away when nature's great medicine is used. In the past tens of thousands have used the waters of that unfailing fountain of virtues, and have been made whole. Thousands are testing it to-day, and miraculous results are the fruits. If you are suffering, dear reader, delay no longer; test the great healer that has won so many victories, it will meet your wants and needs. For your encouragement the following letter from Mrs. Fanny M. Huff, of Salmon Point, Ont., is given as a proof of what results you may reap, if you use Paine's Celery Compound:—

"After receiving so much benefit from Paine's Celery Compound, I think it my duty to inform sufferers what this great medicine can do for all who wish to regain health and strength. I have been a great sufferer for years from nervousness and weakness, and have had the advice and attendance of doctors with but little benefit. I was induced to use your Paine's Celery Compound, some time ago, and I must confess it is the best medicine I ever used. Nothing else has ever done me so much good, and I now feel quite a different person.

"I trust sufferers will not be influenced to use any other medicine while they can procure yours which does such good work. I cannot speak strongly enough in favour of Paine's Celery Compound, and you may be assured I will always recommend it. You are at liberty to publish this letter in your work."

THE HARVEY PLOWING MATCH.

Mr. Wm. Fawcett takes one First Prize And Messrs. John P. Smith and John Smith Secured the Other.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—The first annual plowing match of the Harvey Agricultural Society was held in Mr. R. Tedford's field, lot 6, Con. 15, Harvey. It was a grand success, weather being favourable. There were no less than 21 ploughmen entered in the field, eager to gain first place in the prize list, which was as follows, divided into three classes.—

The ploughmen left the field at 4 o'clock p. m., after which the judges commenced work, which they handled in grand style. The judges were Messrs. S. McKibbon, John Lang and Alex. Thompson. Thanking the public in general for their liberal prizes which they gave towards the match, I remain

MOUNT PLEASANT.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mr. Mark Shield, of North Dakota, is visiting relatives and friends in this locality.

The lodge of Royal Templars from Springville visited the I.O.G.T. of this place last Thursday evening, and had a very profitable, and we hope, pleasant meeting. After a lengthy programme was gone through the receiving lodge entertained them at luncheon.

Mr. Geo. Morrison, of Omemee, is visiting at the parsonage.

Quite a number of the citizens took in the Presbyterian anniversary in Omemee on Sunday and Monday.

Mr. A. P. McLean, of Peterborough, was home on Sunday.

Miss M. Hayes, of Bobcaygeon, is visiting at her brother's, R. J. Hayes.

Another Voice From Smith.

SMITH, July 7, 1893.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Mem-bray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, and after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

THESE ARE ODD FISH.

SOME CURIOUS DEEP SEA CREATURES WHICH HAVE BEEN CAUGHT.

The Hackle-Head—Conger Eels—Untimely End of a Fishing Frog—Various Odd Members of the Finny Tribe From the Salt Water.

A number of fishermen who go out on the fishing banks steamboats have been thoughtful enough to save their odd and curious catches for the New York Aquarium. The result is that Prof. H. T. Woodman now has as pets in his whale and shark tanks two huge anglers or fishing frogs, weighing from seventy-five to ninety pounds, one exceptionally perfect specimen of the deep-sea skate, measuring about four feet from tip to tip of its wing-like fins; three large deep sea eels or sirens (conger eels the fishermen call them), a small sturgeon, a dogfish four feet long and half a dozen sea ravens, small and large.

There would now be three anglers had the fishermen tempered enthusiasm with discretion. The third one is now presumably in the fish heaven. He lived more than a week, showing how hardy some fish forms are, for everything was done to disgust him with life. He was hooked on the fishing banks and hauled to the surface hand over hand. Then somebody jammed a boathook deep into his head between his eyes and landed him. On arriving at the Battery the martyr fishing frog was jabbed again with the boathook, which a man then put over his shoulder, with the unhappy monster dangling at the end. The hole in his head was as big round as a half dollar, yet he tried pluckily to live it down, and only turned up his ventral fin after ten days.

The two biggest sea ravens also had a bitter experience. When they were hooked the enthusiastic amateur scientists put them into a pail than was too small for them, and consequently when they were put into the tank they remained bent like bows for several miserable hours. Now they are straightened out and as full of original sin as ever. The other specimens fared better after Prof. Woodman had gently hinted that fish were not made of boiler iron.

The anglers are naturally the most interesting fish of the lot to landlubbers, both on account of their habits and their hideous appearance. The angler is a pollywog monstrously magnified, with sea-weed trimmings. The two specimens in the aquarium are exceptionally perfect. The sea-weed-like fringe along their jaws is uninjured and they possess the full complement of long tentacles on the beard and back. These they erect and wave gently in the water to attract small fish who think the deceitful things are something good to eat.

The Coxey armies would have another cause for grievance against things in general if they could see those two anglers. They lie still with their chasms of mouths half open and the foolish killies, with which the tank is well supplied, swim right in. The angler does the rest. His mouth reaches clean to his tail, which is also curious, being exactly like a big, muscular hand.

The skate doesn't like the angler at all. When he was hove into the whale pool he swam around madly on the surface, flapping his wings like a turkey buzzard and turning up his eyes in disgust. His insultingly human-like face was twisted into an expression of hauteur embarrassing to witness. He is still discontented.

The conger eels, horrible basilisk-like creatures, don't care for anything. They just exist and nothing interferes with them, for their venomous shape scares even the blundering dog-fish, who, whenever they approach him, darts off in an "Excuse me a minute" fashion and pretends to be very hungry for killies. This is a palpable mockery, for he couldn't catch one in a thousand, except by accident.

It is interesting, however, to see him hunt them, for he drives them exactly like a hound drives a rabbit. The sturgeon doesn't pay any attention to these doings. He swims around gracefully, the Beau Brummel of the aquarium. The sea ravens—those wonderful, weird, grotesque creatures which can make themselves look like toadfish or sea robins or hackleheads, but preferably imitate rocks or seaweed—don't swim around much, because each raven has found some particular rock or clump of weeds which he now simulates wonderfully. The biggest one lies behind some brown bladderweed, which he resembles so closely that many people have failed to distinguish the fish from the weed until after long inspection. Another lies beside a weed-covered rock, and on Friday the writer could barely discover him.

Besides these fish there is a simple but most interesting collection in one of the big wall tanks. It comprises a magnificent glowing red sea anemone, half a dozen bengalls, a score of tom cods, several three-spined sticklebacks, half a dozen hackleheads (the thorny-headed sculpin, striped white and black like a zebra), about twenty sea horses, some shrimp, several crabs and lobsters and a school of the common killies.—New York World.

EX-MEMBER of PARLIAMENT REUBEN E. TRUAX

Hon. Reuben E. Truax, one of Canada's ablest thinkers and statesmen, a man so highly esteemed by the people of his district that he was honored with a seat in Parliament, kindly furnishes us for publication the following statement, which will be most welcome to the public, inasmuch as it is one in which all will place implicit confidence. Mr. Truax says:

"I have been for about ten years very much troubled with Indigestion and Dyspepsia, have tried a great many different kinds of patent medicines, and have been treated by a number of physicians and found no benefit from them. I was recommended to try the Great South American Nervine Tonic. I obtained a bottle, and I must say I found very great relief, and have since taken two more bottles, and now feel that I am entirely free from Indigestion, and would strongly recommend all my fellow-sufferers from the disease to give South American Nervine an immediate trial. It will cure you.

"REUBEN E. TRUAX,
"Walkerton, Ont."

It has lately been discovered that certain Nerve Centres, located near the base of the brain, control and supply the stomach with the necessary nerve force to properly digest the food. When these Nerve Centres are in any way deranged the supply of nerve force is at once diminished, and as a result the food taken into the stomach is only partially digested, and Chronic Indigestion and Dyspepsia soon make their appearance.

South American Nervine is so prepared that it acts directly on the nerves. It will absolutely cure every case of Indigestion and Dyspepsia, and is an absolute specific for all nervous diseases and ailments. It usually gives relief in one day.

Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle-aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

Dr. W. Washburn, of New Richmond, Indiana, writes: "I have used South American Nervine in my family and prescribed it in my practice. It is a most excellent remedy."

A Little Gold Brick

Mr. T. D. Ledyard, of the Ledyard Gold Mines Company, brought into the Globe office, yesterday, a little brick of gold, weighing eight and a half ounces and worth $160. It was the first brick made from or produced from the Ledyard mines, and represents 52 tons of mined ore. The balance, however, contained eight tons of gold concentrates worth $600, making the total value of the product of the 52 tons, $760. The Ledyard mines are situated in Belmont township, Peterborough county, about 110 miles east of Toronto. The gold brick exhibited was produced by means of a Huntingdon mill. The gold concentrates are shipped to England for treatment. Mr. Ledyard looks forward to continuing operations regularly and profitably.

That Electric Railway Scheme.

Mr. Randall is pushing his electric railway scheme in Port Hope. He proposes to run a line to Rice lake, and claims to have secured the right of way from Port Hope to Bewdley. Steamboats are to make four round trips from Peterborough to Bewdley. If arrangements can be made, Mr. Randall will build a branch to Cobourg. If the projector will take our advice he will build to Cobourg first. He could make a sure thing of a road from Port Hope to Cobourg, but the Rice Lake scheme is too much to begin with.—Cobourg Post. {It would be interesting to learn just what inducements could be held out to a contractor to build an electric line between Port Hope and Cobourg. It is hardly probable that any sane man would go this way about making a fortune.

—Last night a number of the large girders used in the construction of the new Cox building were left projecting from the building, across the sidewalk and into the roadway, with no guardian lantern left on the spot to warn passers-by. Not a few citizens barked their shins on the irons and the remarks passed could not possibly be construed as complimentary to the employees who so carelessly left the girders in the position which they occupied.

FATAL WELL-DIGGING ACCIDENT IN HARVEY.

Isaac Robinson, of Lakefield Instantly Killed—Young Mr. Tedford in a Serious Condition.

(Special to the Examiner.)

On Monday afternoon a fatal accident took place in Harvey township, on the farm of Mr. Robt. Tedford, near Lakehurst. Two men, one of them Mr. Tedford's son, were engaged in digging a well, and had got down a distance of 32 feet. The young man Tedford, it appears, went down before the gas had sufficiently left the well after the discharge of a blast, and was overcome. The man at the windlass not hearing anything, and fearing the worst, sent down Mr. Isaac Robinson, of Lakefield, who was also present, to investigate. He also found that he could not stand the effects of the gas and asked to be drawn up. As he reached to within about six feet of the top of the well, he and, toppling over the edge of the bucket, fell to the rocky bottom of the well, and was, it is to be assumed, instantly killed. The other person, young Tedford, who was all this time at the bottom of the well, recovered sufficiently to call out. A ladder was let down into the well and a rope lowered. This the young man fastened around his waist, and was hauled to the surface. He is still in a dangerous condition. The man who was killed, Isaac Robinson, a labourer, was about 50 years of age, and leaves a wife and five children, who will receive whatever benefit there is in a life assurance policy of $1,000. The deceased was highly respected and the family have the general sympathy of the community. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon from the family residence, Lakefield, under Sons of England auspices.

NO DYNAMITE WAS USED.

The Sewer Still Intact Though Many Expected to See the Brick Work go up in the Air.

A good many of the townspeople were down at the scene of the excavations for the new outfall sewer this morning, expecting to have some amusement when the township men started to fill in the trench. No movement of the kind, however, was made on the part of the Monaghan authorities.

Mr. Watson, Q.C., was in town yesterday and it is stated that his advice was sought by the township regarding the filling in of the sewer. His counsel was to the effect that while they had a perfect right to adopt such a course of action should they see fit, yet it would be be unwise and might prejudice the case should it again come into court, as the action would perhaps be looked upon merely as a retaitory measure.

It is more than probable that the threat to blow up the brickwork with dynamite was made more in a spirit of showing the town that it was at Monaghan's mercy, than anything else.

Councillor Best, chairman of the Sewerage Committee, holds that as the sewer was laid down under an existing award and as work was stopped as soon as the injunction was served, that the town is not committing a trespass by leaving the sewer as it is.

THE MARK STREET CHURCH'S ANNIVERSARY EXERCISES.

Tea Served in the Town Hall—Address During the Evening—Music by the Choir.

A most successful tea was held by the ladies of Mark street Methodist church, in the Ashburnham Town Hall, last evening, from five until eight o'clock. The tables were loaded with good things and the tea was patronized by a large number from this side of the river as well as by the villagers. The ladies who ministered to the wants of the inner man were most obliging, and those who partook of the refreshments, had no cause to regret their action on account pf any apparent neglect. There was abundance for all and all were made to feel that they were present to do justice to the repast.

At eight o'clock all adjourned to the church, where addresses were delivered by Rev. Wm. Limbert, of Lakefield, and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Beer. Rev. A. Mac Williams, of St. Andrew's, and Rev. J. J. Rae, of Charlotte street Methodist church, were expected to make addresses, but were both unavoidably absent.

The music contributed to the programme during the evening by the choir was greatly enjoyed, as it was rendered in a most excellent manner. Miss Trucie Kindred presided at the organ, and Misses Eva Kindred and Nellie Hooper took the solos in splendid voice.

A COUPLE OF CASES TAKE A COUPLE OF HOURS.

The Plaintiffs win in Both Suits at the Non-Jury Sittings, Yesterday.

It only took Justice Rose a couple of hours to hear argument and dispose of the two cases on the docket for trial at the non-jury sittings, yesterday afternoon.

The first case, that of Armstrong vs. Burnham, in which Dumble and Johnston, appeared for the plaintiff, and Hatton & Wood for the defendants, was one in which F. W. Armstrong, of Hillboro, Ohio, sued Mrs. Ellen Burnham for $1,563.20, and $152.95 interest, being an action forwarded on a foreign judgment. Justice Rose gave judgement in favour of the plaintiff in the amount of $1699 13 and costs.

The other case was that of Swinton vs. Swinton. E. B. Stone for the plaintiff and G. M. Roger for defendant. The action was brought by Miss Nancy Swinton, against her brother, Wm. Swinton, of Smith, for maintenance on the terms of their father's will. The plaintiff was allowed $750 for past support and the defendant was directed to provide her with a house and lot while she remained single.

THE FIRST WORK OF THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

SAVING A CHILD FROM EVIL HOME SURROUNDINGS.

The First Case Under the Local Society—A Child Exposed to an Idle and Dissolute Life—The Evidence Taken—By the Court's Order the Child is Taken from Undesirable Parental Control—Transferred to the Custody of the Society.

Last evening at 7 o'clock the first case brought before the courts under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society of Peterborough, was heard before Police Magistrate Dumble. The following "information" and evidence sufficiently explain the case. For the sake of the future of the child, and to prevent its name being connected, by the help of the press, with the associations from which it was deemed necessary to separate her, the names of the parents and child are not given.

Police Magistrate Dumble dealt with the case upon the following information laid by Mr. J. Hampden Burnham, secretary of the local society, under the authority of 56 Vic., cap. 45, sec. 13:

The informant says that he believes that —— a female child under the age of ten years, who by reason of its parents is suffered to be growing up without salutary parental control and education and in circumstances exposing such child to an idle and dissolute life.

Mr. Edwards hon. secretary appeared on behalf of the society.

Chief Rousal, the first witness, said he knew the child in question, now present, and also the father and mother. The father had not worked for three or four years. Had been most of that time in jail as a vagrant. He had no home, nor visible means of support. He had no regular work nor any proper home to offer to his wife and child; he had not supported them for some years, nor had lived with his wife. He, (witness) knew the mother, she had the common repute of being a prostitute. She has two daughters with her—one, the child in court, who was nine past. The elder daughter was on the street a good deal. The common repute of the elder daughter's morality was that she was a prostitute. There had been a good many complaints about the family, and about two weeks ago the chief had advised the mother to leave town. She agreed to go. Witness got tickets from the town this morning to take the mother and eldest daughter out of town. He did not think the home was a proper one for the child. The circumstances of the home exposed the child to lead an idle and dissolute life. The parental control and education of the child were not salutary.

To Mr. Edwards—The mother said that women of bad life resorted to her house and that the accused shared the profits. She had been convicted of keeping a house of ill-repute two years ago and had served a term of six months.

The magistrate addressed the father and said the object of this case was to place the child beyond immoral influences. The father replied that he was glad such was the case, and moreover he would pay for the child's keep wherever she was, as he had work now.

Mr. Hampden Burnham sworn, said: He was Secretary of the Children's Aid Society of Peterborough, duly incorporated under the Act. Knew the father and mother. Investigated the case and found that it was a proper case for action on the part of the society. According to common repute the home life of the child is such as, in witness' opinion to lead to its ruin. The mother is commonly reputed to be a prostitute. He believed the father was unfit to take care of the child—in fact he had no hesitation in saying so.

Town clerk Armstrong testified that on June 8th, 1892, the mother was convicted of keeping a house of ill fame.

After having heard the evidence, the magistrate recorded his finding as follows:

"I find and adjudge that the child —— is being brought up without salutary parental control and education, and in circumstances exposing it to an idle and dissolute life, and I do order that the child be delivered over to the Children's Aid Society of the town and county of Peterborough."

After this judgment the magistrate addressing the mother, who made some demonstration of sorrow at the idea of being separated from her child, said that she might be fond of the child and part with it reluctantly, yet the circumstances required that it be removed from her custody and placed under better influences than it would have with her. It would be better cared for very probably than with her.

The child was then, as provided by the Act, examined by Town Physician Yelland to see that it had no contagious disease. It was found to have a slight catarrhal affection and was sent to the Nicholls Hospital pending its recovery and the finding of a home. The Chief of Police removed the child to the hospital in a close carriage.

WILL THE GREAT GAME BE PLAYED HERE?

It is Altogether Likely That it Will, as a Good Offer Has Been Made.

The Directors of the Driving Park Association have taken up the matter of the Shamrock-Capital lacrosse match and are putting forth great efforts to have the two teams come here to play off the tie.

Communication was opened last night, with the secretaries of both these clubs, and after the advantages of Peterborough had been fully set forth, as an excellent place in which to play the match, the offer of 30 per cent. of the gate receipts to each club was made.

It is estimated that between six and eight thousand spectators would witness the match, as Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa could each be relied upon to a certainty of sending, at the lowest estimate, about 4,000 excursionists to town among them, and it is thought that the neighbouring towns would be sufficiently enthusiastic to send in heavy contingents also.

The Shamrocks are willing and anxious to play here and an answer to the offer is expected to-morrow.

ST. ANNE'S, SUDBURY.

A Fine New Church for the Peterborough Diocese.

A fine new church, one of three that have been erected in the diocese of Peterborough this summer, is situated at Sudbury. It will be completed by Sunday next, ready for consecration by his Lordship Bishop O'Connor who will perform the ceremony.

St. Anne's is a beautiful and well built church, beautifully situated upon the slope of a hill facing south, and looking down upon the hustling village like a tutelary saint. The structure is of solid brick, resting on solid stone foundations. Its area is 47x92 feet, with a chancel at its northern end, 18x25, and westward of the chancel and adjoining is the sanctuary, 25x16 ft. There is a basement under the main building to hold the furnaces with which the building is heated. The church has a tower and belfry, centrally situated, eighteen by eighteen feet, and 90 feet in height, ann will contain the bell that calls the faithful of Sudbury to prayer.

WORK WAS BEGUN

on May 18th last. The building was erected by day work under the superintendence of Mr. Richard Sheehy, town, who has turned out an excellent job. To make sure of the brickwork, he took with him from town Messrs. Jas. Taylor, A. McDonald, J. McPherson and M. Larone.

The brick was completed about a month ago and the entire edifice will be completed by and, as stated, consecrated, next Sunday.

His Lordship paid the church a visit last Sunday, and was highly delighted with both the manner in which the work had been forwarded, as well as with the work itself. He should be, even if difficult to please, for the work has been not only promptly, but well done, and the church is a fine structure, solidly and well, if not ornately, finished within. The windows are fitted with Cathedral glass, and the interior is spacious and well adapted for its intended purposes. The total cost will be about $13,000.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSOCIACIATION OF ST. JOHN'S.

The President's Chair Will be Occupied by a Lady—A Good Programme.

Almost the entire membership of the Young People's Association of St. John's turned out last night, and, in consequence, the meeting held last night was an excellent one.

In accord with the rules of the Association, the first half hour only was donated to the business of the society. During this time Miss Annie Sproule was unanimously chosen to fill the office of president until the end of the year, the signatures of a number of new members were inscribed on the roll and the treasurer for a time did a thriving business, as the annual fees are now due.

Miss Burley, Miss Butler, Miss Foote and Mr. W. J. English were appointed a Lookout Committee to interview absentees from the meetings, and also to increase the membership of the society.

At the conclusion of the business a most excellent programme of music was given. An instrumental duet was brilliantly played by Miss Vink and Miss Kate Henderson, and a reading which was much appreciated was given by Mr. T. Baker. A vocal solo by Miss A. Wood, and an instrumental by Miss Sproule, were both well received, and a chorus by the Glee Club brought the evening's entertainment to a close.

A FALLING BEAM SERIOUSLY INJURES FOREMAN MARTIN.

Although Hot is Hurled Through the Air a Considerable Distance he Miraculously Escapes Death.

Mr. William Martin, foreman of the Dickson Company's repairing force, is at present lying at his home on Dalhousie street, suffering greatly from the effects of what all who witnessed it thought at the time to be, a fatal accident.

The gang of men have just returned from work on the company's dams at Lakefield, and were engaged in repairing the dam at the London street bridge.

Mr. Martin was standing above the men on the end of a projecting cross beam of the bridge, while the gang was at work jacking up one of the long timbers upon which the cross-beams rest. The tremendous pressure brought to bear by the jack forced apart two diagonals supporting a heavy sixteen foot timber, eight inches square, which was directly over the foreman's head. The beam in question gave way at one end first and falling, struck Mr. Martin a glancing blow across the shoulders and the back of the head, hurling him from his position and causing him to fall at the base of a pier, which is covered with stones. The drop was a distance of 13 feet, while the pier is about fifteen feet removed from the spot where a straight fall would have thrown the unfortunate man. An appreciation of the force of the blow may be gathered from the fact that he was thrown to such a distance.

The workmen hurried down to the foreman's assistance and found him lying on the stones with his head in the water. Hasty, but kindly hands picked him up and in about ten minutes Mr. Martin recovered consciousness. He was taken to his home and the assistance of Dr. King summoned. The sharp pains across the injured man's breast led to the belief that in his fall he had crushed one of his lungs. Great difficulty was experienced by him in breathing at the time but this morning he was a great deal easier though suffering considerably. Dr. King states that no bones are fractured. It is astonishing that a beam of such large dimensions falling a distance of 16 feet did not instantly kill Mr. Martin when it struck him in so vital a part as the base of the scalp.

C. D. RICHARDSON'S DEATH.

He Was the Youngest Insurance Manager in Canada.

The numerous friends in Peterborough of Mr. J. A. Richardson, Canadian Passenger Agent of the Wabash Railway will regret to learn of the death of his son, which took place at Toronto on Saturday last. Referring to the death of Mr. C. D. Richardson, who enjoyed the distinction of being the youngest insurance manager in Canada, being only 27 years of age, the Toronto News says:

"Mr. Richardson was formerly a member of the firm of Melville & Richardson, steamship agents, and no less than four years ago entered the London Guarantee and Accident Company. His energetic work soon brought him into notice and he was appointed assistant to A. T. McCord, the manager at that time. When Mr. McCord died less than a year ago Mr. Richardson was immediately appointed manager.

"The deceased was the only surviving son of Mr. J. A. Richardson, Canadian passenger agent of the Wabash railway, and was born in the village of Millbrook, Ont., where the family resided until ten years ago. William T. Richardson, the only other child of Mr. J. A. Richardson, was a member of the Queen's Own and served in the Northwest Rebellion, but died of typhoid fever contracted while in service.

"Carlton D. Richardson was a warm-hearted young man and popular everywhere he was known. He was a member of the Elm street Methodist church and a teacher in the Sunday school there. He leaves a widow and two children, the former being a sister of Mrs. E. F. Clarke. Mr. Richardson's death leaves vacant a position worth $5,000 a year.

"The funeral took place on Monday afternoon to Mount Pleasant cemetery. The services were conducted at the residence by Rev. Dr. Galbraith, pastor of Elm street Methodist church, assisted by Rev. H. C. Matthews, of Alliston. The chief mourners were Jos. A. Richardson, father of the deceased, E. F. Clarke, C. H. Mortimer, H. C. Otter, John Daniel and Alex. Scott, brothers-in-law; H. H. Jones, of Port Hope, a cousin, and Isaac Richardson, of Millbrook, an uncle."

THE CONTRACTOR IS NOT GUARANTEED PROTECTION.

There was no Quorum at the Meeting of Council Last Night.

Councillors came and Councillors went at the town clerk's office, last night, but there were never enough present to form a quorum, so at about nine o'clock, all idea of holding a meeting was abandoned. The report to the effect that the brick work of the new outfall sewer, already completed, would be blown up to-day with a dynamite blast by the township authorities, caused no little excitement among the town fathers and citizens present, all objecting to see about $3,000 of the town's good money go up into the air in this fashion. The rumour is in all probability foundationless, however, as the township would hardly resort to such an extreme measure.

Another conference between the town and the Monaghan authorities is in progress this afternoon.

Mr. Robert Grant asks—

1 That the town will defend the action brought against him.

2 That the town will pay all damages and costs that he shall be subject to in the action.

3 That, if the trenches now opened or work completed, or materials provided, be interfered with, the town will replace and make the same good to said Grant.

4 In case said Grant is altogether prohibited from going on with the work, the town will pay for the work done and materials supplied at prices proportionate to the whole contract price.

D. RITCHIE & CO'S SUCCESS.

Obtained Diploma, Also the Only Medal Awarded for Tobacco at The Toronto Industrial Fair.

D. Ritchie & Company, plug tobacco, cut tobacco and cigarette manufacturers of Montreal, Can., have just been officially advised that they have been awarded a diploma for the fine quality of their goods and an extra Bronze Medal for their excellent display of plug tobacco, cut tobacco and cigarettes.

It dare not be said that the best tobaccos and cigarettes of the Dominion were not exhibited at the Toronto Industrial Fair, for they were there. It is, therefore, with pride that it is chronicled that this firm was awarded the highest honours.

Every dealer who handles their brands will find them indispensable to success. In Montreal and Toronto their "Derby" plug smoking tobacco is side-tracking the old issues, and wherever it is placed it becomes the leading brand after a very short time.

The award was undoubtedly deserved. The firm is known all over the world, and their success at the Toronto Fair is sufficient evidence that the best plug tobaccos, cut tobaccos and cigarettes are manufactured by them.

NEVER ENDORSE ANY MORE.

I had both money and a friend,
I lent my credit to my friend;

—Old Story Revised.

Oh, no, we'll never endorse any more.
—New Song.

Chauncey M. Depew has been associated all his life, from the very day he left Yale College, with rich men. He was one of Commodore Vanderbilt's "boys," and has been the intimate of the commodore's sons. The Garretts, the Scotts, the Morgans, and all the kings of the railroad and banking world for twenty years and more have been among Mr. Depew's friends.

All of these gentlemen have been tackled by the fellows who are proverbially "short." This is a class of borrowers, who want to exchange checks; that is, the borrower wants the check of a sound man to use immediately, and in return gives a check dated ten or more days ahead, when he expects that his bank account will be rich enough to meet it. There is in this fraternity a set of downright swindlers, whose checks are returned with that exasperating stamp, "No funds." As Solomon said:

"My son, if thou be surety for thy friend, if thou has stricken thy hand with a stranger, thou art snared with the words of thy mouth, thou art taken with the words of thy mouth."

Solomon evidently knew something about "hand shakers." Mr. Depew has come to some conclusions also, and here they are:

"Never endorse an accommodation note. If you wish to help your friend, make up your mind how much you can afford to lose, and lend him that. He will consider seriously the repayment of this money, while your name on that paper will not receive a second thought. If his venture is a failure and your money is gone, you will not be greatly disappointed, and your compensation will be an approving conscience and the satisfaction of having done the best you could for one whose appreciation of your effort you value. But your endorsement he regards as a mere formality. He believes in himself and has great contempt for your fears. At each renewal of the note he will want the amount increased or an additional note, on the plea of increasing business and opportunities. When you have become frightened at the sum for which he has made you responsible, and find that you must stop or be ruined, he will say that unless you aid him further he will be forced into bankruptcy, and you will be the cause. When he fails, as he inevitably will, you find that the money raised on your notes has paid enemies and strangers who insisted on his dealing with them on business principles, and that you are his largest and perhaps his sole creditor. You are crippled financially for a time, and perhaps for life, by meeting the maturing obligations which you have endorsed, and your former friend, now your bitter foe, is loudly proclaiming in his own justification, that you are the author of his ruin. The result of your excursion in the careless lending of your name will be that you have lost both friend and fortune, and have discovered, perhaps too late, that you are a fool. I have had in greater or less degree, several such experiences."

It is said on good authority that Mr. Depew lost forty thousand dollars last year by endorsing notes. He'll never do it again, he says.—N.Y. Sun.

LAST SLAVE AUCTION.

AND HOW IT WAS WAS CONDUCTED ON A GEORGIA PLANTATION.

Interesting Account of a Scene Witnessed Near Savannah—The Class of People Who Attended Such Sales—Slaves Valueless After the War Broke Out.

The death of a gentleman in Philadelphia recently has recalled the last great slave auction in the south in 1859. This gentleman was the clerk of the sale, and and he wrote as a memento an elaborate and circumstantial account of the two days' proceedings, and this he did secretly, so intense was the desire of the managers to prevent any report getting to the papers of the north.

The sale was held at the race track, near Savannah, and the negroes were the property of Mr. Pierce Butler of Philadelphia. His family name was Mease, but inheriting a fortune in land and slaves from his grandfather, Maj. Pierce Butler of South Carolina, he changed his name. He very generously shared his fortune with his brother John, who, after service in the Mexican war, died about 1850. Mr. Butler was an inveterate and most unlucky card player, and spent most of his time in Joe Hall's rooms, Eighth, above Sansom, then the most fashionable and exclusive card saloon in this city. Hall was, despite his profession, much respected and liked. He died a few years ago, a poor Methodist minister on the eastern shore. It was in Mr. Hall's place that Mr. Butler made the losses that forced him to sell his slaves. It is said that on one occasion he held four deuces and proceeded to bet in a fashion that led Hall to remonstrate, but Butler laughed at him. With $26,000 up he was called, and Hall held four kings.

Butler inherited the beautiful old mansion now the site of the Sharpless building, Eighth and Chestnut, Philadelphia, and this he was forced to sell, and, in 1859, his creditors began to press for their money and his agent, Charles Munhead, conveyancer, of this city, went to Georgia to arrange the sale of his slaves. It was a cheerless day in October, 1859, when there came trooping into the race ground 988 negroes, divided into groups representing families. At the head of that sad procession was a withered man and woman, bent almost double by toil, leaning on sticks, and with them a giant negro, their only son and a well known blacksmith. All were marched under the sheds, and negro-like, at once commenced to gather sticks for a fire. About half of them came from the rice fields of Darien. These were pure Congo and in many instances retained their uncouth African language. The rest were far more intelligent in appearance and were from St. Simon island, a cotton plantation.

The white crowd was a typical southern one, partly negro traders, flashing in diamond shirt pins and gandy chains, and bullies from the swamps and ruffianly overseers, many of them northerners. All of these were heavily armed and made an ostentatious show of weapons, and their loudly expressed wish was "to ketch, be Gawd, sah, any yankee newspapah sneak that might ventuh on the ground."

There was not a single representative of the old planter families from the vicinity, as they were disgusted with the whole proceeding. It was one of their traditions that they had never sold a negro born on their plantations, except for persistent misconduct, and after the sale Butler found himself a stranger among his former associates.

And now the bell in the grand stand rang and the crowd gathered around the portly "Majah" Stone, who, in a speech fluent with adjectives, praised the crowd, the "niggahs," and our beloved Georgia, first among the states—and that was business in those halcyon days. There were 429 lots of black humanity, and prices ranged from $260 up to $2,100—this last for a first-rate blacksmith, bought for an estate in the neighborhood. Ten years later the slave was in the legislature, and the master's family lived on his bounty.

The professional traders were the largest buyers, Col. Pate of Vicksburg taking 220. It was announced from the first that no division of families would be permitted and this made the sale less profitable, as many of the members were old or infirm, and to get the good ones purchasers had to take others less desirable. It took two days to make a finish and the proceeds amounted to $303,650. The second day brought in a wind from the sea and a cold fog that swept in waves over the grounds. The negroes huddled about the fires, cooking their bacon and hoe cake, and here Mr. Butler put in an appearance. From a bag carried by a servant he gave each one of his old servants $1 in bright quarters. After all was said in denunciation of the sale, the fact remained that it was necessary on Butler's part; his creditors ordered it, and one of the most vigorous people in enforcing his claim was a Philadelphia gentleman who was a leading and oratorical abolitionist.

Out of the sale of one of the groups arose a series of tragdies that fitly illustrated the tendencies of negro trading. Most of the men in this business were fighters. They knew they were despised and avoided by gentlemen, and so exacted a certain amount of respect socially by their readiness to resent an insult. Tom Pate, a well-known Vicksburg trader, bought at the sale a man, his two sisters, and wife, with the guarantee that they should not be separated. Disregarding this Pate sold the sisters, one to Pat Somers, a brother trader, and the other to a resident of St. Louis. What legal rights a negro had in the south were well protected. Somers was told of the guarantee, and he sent the girl back to Pate and demanded his money. A quarrel was the result and Somers was shot dead. Ten days later his nephew killed Pate and died from the wounds received. The feud was kept up until every male bearing the name of Pate was wiped out and then the war liberated the sisters, who were alive in St. Louis in 1887.

Butler sold in time. A year afterward his slaves would not have brought $1 apiece. He died in 1867, and without suspicion of having been poisoned by some of his negroes on the plantation in Georgia.

A Mistake That Stands.

The conversation moved along with the ticking of the little clock on one of the bookcases before us. A pet cat that was prowling about knocked down a book from its place. The master picked it up. It was a copy of Ben Hur. The talk turned to the author.

"I asked Wallace one day," said the talker, "if he had made any geographical mistakes in either of his two last works. He told me that in one of the best descriptions he had he was mistaken as to locality. But he said that six months after the book was out he received a letter from a woman calling his attention to the mistake. She gave him all the evidence necessary to establish the truth of her statement and his investigations corroborated what she had written."

"Did he correct it in a later edition?"

"I asked him that and he said he had not. It was not because he did not respect the woman, but he said if he made the correction he would remove what had been an impression on the minds of many for years, and as the mistake involved no infringement on historical fact, he concluded to let it stand."—Chicago Herald.

A Brantford Compositor has Diabetes—He Drops 40 Pounds in Weight in a Short Time—How He Was Cured.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 15.—Thos Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier in this city, has seen some ups and dows in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr. Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six boxes worked a complete cure. Mr. Hazelhurst is to-day better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

S. P. SMITH, of Towanda, Pa., whose constitution was completely broken down, is cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He writes:

"For eight years, I was, most of the time, a great sufferer from constipation, kidney trouble, and indigestion, so that my constitution seemed to be completely broken down. I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and took nearly seven bottles, with such excellent results that my stomach, bowels, and kidneys are in perfect condition, and, in all their functions, as regular as clock-work. At the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, my weight was only 120 pounds; I now can brag of 150 pounds, and was never in so good health. If you could see me before and after using, you would want me for a traveling advertisement. I believe this preparation of Sarsaparilla to be the best in the market to-day."

MANNERS IMPORTANT.

AND HOW MUCH THEY MEAN IN THIS WORLD.

In Every Walk of Life—How About Yours?—The Greatest Scholars, Rulers and Saints Should be by Inference the Greatest Gentlemen.

Manners are important. They mean much in the world. They form a large element in the success or failure of life. Yet, like all good things, they are both over valued and under-valued. It is a human characteristic to judge by appearances, and from them to draw conclusions, even though the experiences of life should teach us differently. When we see a man with an attractive personality and refined manners we have no hesitation in deciding that his inner self, his character, must correspond with his outer self, for few people are able to resist the charms of polished and agreeable conduct. Happily the natural conclusion is most often the true one, but we should not forget that appearances are deceitful, and that the old saying that the broadcloth coat hides the rogue is not always untrue. On the other hand, some of the truest and best people in the world, men and women who are widely known for their genuine excellence, their intellectuality, their goodness of heart, possess only the most indifferent and unattractive manners. Even though they stand pre-eminent in ability and character, we are apt to harbor unpleasant judgments against them because of abrupt and unpolished conduct.

When we understand this we should realize that a man's personal deportment is not a safe guide. We shall learn that manners, while unquestionably to be desired and cultivated, should neither be over-estimated nor under-estimated. There is a happy medium, a fortunate union. Of course character is to be preferred to polish in genuine worth, but there is no good reason why the two should not be united. While such undue prominence should not be placed on manners as to make them the chief qualification of success, they should not, on the other hand, be decried as frivolous or foppish accessions to earnest manhood. To forgive a man every social vice, to condone even his offences against honor or honesty, to sympathize with his well-merited punishment, because of his manners, which attract and please all coming in reach of his influence, are attitudes of society highly dangerous to to that perception of truth and fact which is necessary to all right thinking. A fascinating address is allowed to cover too much mental and moral turpitude, and the owner of such personal gifts should only be held to stricter account for misusing so potent a means of inspiring affection and confidence in his fellow men. Yet this is not an argument for rudeness, for good manners should be held as absolutely indispensible. They mean to the handsome man greater beauty, to the intellectual man greater mental power and wider influence. Perfection—that is, human perfection—is impossible without refined and careful manners. Their value is absolute, not fictitious. "Rudeness is a social sin, for it transgresses against the charity which avoids from principle the giving of needless offence to any one." There is no excuse for intentionally giving way to one's own arrogance and petty personal tyranny; to allow the coarse, selfish part of one's nature to hide and overpower the better self. Good manners may be artificial and assumed, but they are better than rudeness if rudeness is natural and spontaneous. There are some things in nature which should never be in evidence, and of these one of the most important is rudeness. On moral grounds it is unchristian, for it transgresses the golden rule, sins against justice, and causes the passions of anger and ill-feeling in the one to whom it is addressed. Mentally, it is a want of sense and judgment, for a clear perception will show that it is opposed to intellectual justice, and socially it is a bad policy to pursue, for it alienates friends and creates enemies. It may be added, moreover, that good manners show a sense of self-respect and a recognition of the respect and rights due to others, marks of courtesy which alone distinguish the true gentleman. People of position and influence stand as patterns for their inferiors; hence, to them good manners are essential. The religious person loses the best part of his religion if he forgets that kind and uniform courtesy which is the companion of all true charity. In brief, those who stand in any degree as leaders and men of influence should realize their most complete possibilities by cultivating courtesy as a distinguishing characteristic. "The greatest scholar, the greatest ruler, the greatest saint, ought to be by inference the greatest gentleman."

Common Sense

Should be used in attempting to cure that very disagreeable disease, catarrh. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local applications can do no permanent good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Pills cure constipation by restoring peristaltic action to the alimentary canal.

A Remarkable Event.

An event which has been the talk of the town for some weeks is the cure of Mr. Edward White, whose sufferings from Salt Rheum (Eczema) were well known. Mr. White's statement is as follows:

For 12 years previous to the last few months I have been a sufferer of the worst kind from Salt Rheum. I tried twelve different doctors, besides many patent medicines but received no benefit, but gradually became worse. Last January I was advised to try B. B. B. by the postmaster here. I soon perceived a decided change for the better, and it only took six bottles to make a complete cure.

EDW. WHITE, Victoria Corner, N.B.

Mr. J. B. Bowser, Merchant; Mr. Jas. W. Boyer, Manufacturer, and Mr. Thos. W. Letson, J. P., can certify to the truth of the above statement.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

THREE RUNNING SORES

PHYSICIANS FAILED

BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I had been treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed, until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

MRS. W. BENNETT, Acton P. O. Ont.

A SCALY ERUPTION

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I have used other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

THE PRODUCTION OF THE DRUG CALLED ARSENIC.

It is Mined, and the Miners, it is Said, Really Do Not Suffer from its Effects—How and Where it is Obtained—Queer Effect of the Poison on Linen Fabrics.

Many points of interest are brought out in a description in a technical journal of the way in which arsenic is obtained from one of the most famous mines in England, the Devon Great Consols. The mine was originally worked for copper alone and would have been abandoned, but for the discovery that the waste thrown out as worthless when copper was sought proved rich in arsenic. Although copper is still raised, it is in small quantities, and the mine has been resolved into an arsenic works. The arsenical pyrites consist of 25 to 30 per cent. of iron, 12 1-2 to 14 per cent. of arsenic and the rest of earthy matter. After being crushed this is sorted by girls of from 13 to 16 years of age. It is then washed and "jigged" or sifted and passed on to the first calciner, where it is burned with low class coal and produces "arsenic soot"—that is, arsenic so mixed with smoke soot from the coal as to be a gray color.

The arsenic and soot, deposited in combination in the chimney or condenser, are scraped out and taken to the second calciner for purification. The calciners consist of revolving iron drums, through which a fire of anthracite coal is carried on rotating iron furnaces kept red hot. As the arsenical soot is subjected to the influence of this heat the arsenic is sublimed and condensed. The operation has to be carefully watched and if the workmen burn the arsenic badly they have to pay for it. Three men in four weeks make 100 tons of arsenic. The chimney in which the arsenic is condensed is a mile long. It is carried to an incline up a hill, with iron doors in the side. As the hot blast passes upwards it deposits a crust of arsenic crystals on the brickwork all around to a depth of from two to three inches, and minute dust of crystals fall to the floor. The smoke has then to pass into an upright chimney 125 feet high, but just before doing so it has to traverse a shower of water, which catches what remains of the arsenic, nothing but sulphurous acid being allowed to escape.

The arsenic is liable to produce sores if permitted to lodge in wrinkles and folds of the flesh, or about the mouth and nostrils. As a rule, however, this only happens when there is carelessness as to personal cleanliness, and the arsenic workers simply have to wash themselves thoroughly every day on returning from work. Otherwise the work is considered healthy. It prevents all eczema, and the fumes of sulphuric acid, as well as the arsenical dust, are fatal to germs of the disease. Most workmen remain at the works for a number of years without suffering, but occasionally the symptoms of arsenical poisoning, loss of appetite, nausea, frontal headache and anæmia declare themselves. When this takes place the work has to be given up entirely. The greatest danger to which the workmen are exposed to is met when it is necessary for any purpose to enter the upright shaft. The effect on the eyes is most painful, and a further curious evidence of the virulence of the pervading atmosphere becomes manifest. The men wear linen garments, lined with flannel and the sulphuric acid fumes completely destroy the linen in a few moments, leaving the flannel intact, so that the men go into the shaft in linen and come out clad in wool. Fortunately, it is seldom necessary to enter the shaft, or great loss of sight would ensue.

The Boy and the Cop.

The boy was fishing from the tail end of a boat, anchored about fifty feet out in the river, and a policeman on shore was watching him.

"What are you doing there?" called the officer, when he saw the boy paid no attention to him.

"Who are you?" asked the boy, with an eye on his job.

"I'm a police officer."

"Where?"

"Right here in the city of Detroit."

The officer thought perhaps he had caught a runaway from the Canadian side, and concluded to play him a bit before hauling him in.

"What state is Michigan in?" asked the boy.

"Michigan," replied the officer, without noticing, and the boy grinned.

"What's your name?"

"John Smith."

The officer was having lots of fun.

"Are you sure?" asked the boy.

"Of course; I ought to know my own name, oughtn't I?"

"Sure; but a boy can't always tell what a copper knows by what he tells him."

"Well, I'd like to know why I oughtn't to know my own name," said the officer, quite puzzled.

"I can't tell you," said the boy, "and I can't tell, neither, why you don't know I'm fishin' when you see I ain't doin' nothin' else," and the boy slapped out a fish about ten inches long. "There," he exclaimed, "do you know any more now?" and the officer had business elsewhere.—Detroit Tribune.

Scientific Cooking.

Some of the present celebrated scientific cooks confess to a most woful ignorance on the all-important subject at the time "they were married." And the older ones declare that "in their day" there were no books fit to study upon the subject of cooking, as chemistry had not yet been applied to the art. One scientific cook confesses to having experimented on feeding her husband, but declares that the experiment proved a success, as his dyspepsia vanished. She says the first knowledge she acquired was the art of making the baker's best bread. And then somebody else says that she is glad that she says "their best bread" for most of the baker's bread in this country is atrocious—an insult to a self-respecting stomach.

There is no better medicine for family use than Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Their sugar-coating makes them easy and even agreeable to take, and as they contain no calomel or other injurious drug, they are perfectly safe for patients of any age.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

REV. DR. SEXTON ON EVOLUTION.

Last evening Rev. Dr. Sexton delivered a lecture in George street Methodist church, according to announcement, on "The Origin of Man, was it by Evolution or Creation?" There was a tolerably large attendance. The Rev. W. R. Young, B.A., presided, and conducted the preliminary services. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Grant, Baptist minister.

The learned Doctor commenced by stating that in dealing with the question he laboured under two difficulties. First, the subject was a very large one; he had often given from twelve to twenty lectures on Evolution, and all, therefore, that he could do in one evening would be to glance at a few principal points; secondly, the subject was a scientific one, and he might have to refer to facts in several branches of science with which the audience was not familiar. They might, however, take it for granted that he would state nothing as a fact that was not so recognized by all scientific men; the inferences drawn would of course be his own.

The word Evolution was constantly used by the sceptic as though it explained all the phenomena of the universe, whereas itself needed explanation. It simply meant to unfold, and no process of unfolding could produce that which was not there before the unfolding took place. The term was first used by Herbert Spencer, and his definition of it was as follows: "Evolution is a change from an indefinite incoherent homogeneity to a definite coherent, heterogenity, through continuous differentiations and integrations." This had been put into simple English thus "Evolution is a change from a no-howish untalk-about-able all-alikeness to a some-howish and in general talk-aboutable not all-alikeness by a continual something-elsefication and stick-togetheration."

No theory of Evolution could account for the origin of Life. At this point the whole thing broke down. For even Huxley had shown in his lecture on "Biogenesis and Abiogenesis" that there was no instance known of a living thing being envolved from non-living matter. Darwin asked for a few low forms of life to start with, which was asking pretty much, still for the present that should be conceded.

The doctor here explained the nature of natural selection at some length, and then proceeded:

There had not been gradual and uninterrupted progression in the appearance of organic beings on the earth. Fishes came before reptiles, and the mollusca and radiata before fishes, but the mollusca and radiata of the early periods were more highly organized than those of the later. Neither were the first fishes the lowest in organization; they were more highly organized than those which appeared later.

The theory of Darwinian evolution was utterly unscientific, and

WAS NOT BASED UPON FACTS.

There were upwards of twenty thousand species of animals, and no single instance could be quoted of one being transformed into another. Sir Richard Owen, perhaps the greatest comparative anatomist of this century, who died recently at something like 90 years of age, had said that "observation of the actual change of any one species into another through any or all of the hypothesized transmuting influence has not been recorded," and even Huxley had admitted that the hypothesis was not proven. As far as he could judge, species had maintained their distinctive peculiarities since they were first created. Not only could no instance be given of the change of one species into another, but no fossil in any strata or formation, of one in a transition state has been discovered. Haeckel in his diagram giving the genealogy of man from the moneres, had been compelled to introduce several different species of animals that never had any existence at all out of his own fertile imaginat on. Surely this was not science. The theory was first formed and then facts were sought for in support of it, and when not found were were invented. And this in an age when the scientific method of induction was professed to be followed.

The thousands of facts referred to by Darwin—and his work was a most valuable one—showing the changes that take place in animals and plants under domestication, were all wide of the mark and had little or

NO BEARING ON THE QUESTION.

Most of these were known to common gardeners and breeders of animals long before Darwin's work appeared. They had no reference whatever to the origin of species, but only to the production of varieties. For whilst we could vary the form, colour and structure of an animal within certain limits—and only within certain limits,—the specific physological characteristics always remained absolutely the same. The sheep was always a sheep, the dog never ceased to be a dog, and the rabbit never became anything else but a rabbit, not even when we succeeded in varying their forms and appearance until they were almost unrecognizable as such. As Agassis had said, "so-called varieties or breeds, far from indicating the beginning of new types, or the initiating of new species, only point out the range of flexibility in types which in their essence are invariable."

Then none of such changes were permanent. As soon as human interference with these artificial varieties ceased, they would all return to their original state. The four great breeds of pigeons to which Mr. Darwin attached so much importance were only preserved distinct by constant care and watchings in the part of the pigeon fancier. Every young bird was examined as soon as it left the shell, and if black bars were observed on the wings of one it was killed, because such marks indicated a reversion to the blue rock from which all the varieties originally sprang. If the domestic animals were left to themselves they would all return to the condition of their ancestors.

THE SAME LAW APPLIED TO PLANTS.

The fact of the infertility of hybirds was utterly opposed to the theory of Darwinism, and no sophistry would explain it away. Here would be seen the law established by the Divine Lawgiver preventing the confusion of species by the permanent blending of one with the other. But for this the organic world would have become a vast chaos of bizarre varieties incapable of any sort of classification.

The question of the origin of man presented great difficulties, for, as Milton had said:

For man to tell how human life began is hard;
For who himself beginning knew.

We had no experience of our own beginning as individuals, and the race could have none as to how it commenced. We must, therefore, fall back on Revelation or on the arguments drawn by science from analogy. Man was unquestionally an animal—eating, drinking and sleeping like other animals. Then some of his mental powers were possessed by the lower animals in a lesser or inchoate degree. Yet there was in many respects a wide difference between him and them, and it was difficult to see how this chasm could be bridged over. Indeed, all the changes said to have occurred in a lower animal to convert it into a man would have been to the disadvantage of the animal, and by the very law of natural selection would have destroyed it instead of tending to its preservation.

MAN WAS EVIDENTLY FORMED

for the purpose of walking erect, whilst the highest mammalian animals below him went on all fours. A line drawn through the head at the base of the brain, in front of the dorsal and through the bodies of the lumbar vertebræ, the centre of the hip joint, in front of the knee joint and through the middle of the instep, would give the centre of gravity. No muscular force is required for man to stand erect. The nervous system (the great central axis) is protected from injury by the S-shaped curve of the spine and its elasticity. The flexed position of the limbs, as in jumping, is the habitual position in the apes. Any change in the monkey causing it to approximate to man would be to its disadvantage.

There was the absence of hair on the body of man, whilst it was found on all other mammalian animals. This also would have been a disadvantage to any animal in which it first occurred, unless accompanied with intellect to supply the deficiency. The prehensible character of the monkey's foot was of the greatest value in climbing. If that had disappeared suddenly such a change would have placed the animal at a great disadvantage amongst his fellows. The perfect hand of man—which was

THE AGENT OF HIS CIVILIZATION

—could not have come by evolution. Apes could make no use of their thumbs. The human brain was out of all proportion in size to that of the Gorilla, for whilst there was a difference between the brain of the highest race of men and the lowest of twelve cubic inches, the difference between the lowest men and the gorilla was more than fifty cubic inches. This would in no way be accounted for by natural selection and it proved the degeneration of the savage from a higher state, for his intellect was not commensurate with his brain power. Then take the power of speech, this was peculiar to man. No brute ever uttered a word. Yet this was owing to no defect of organs in the lower animals, but to the lack of the intellectual power with which speech is ever associated. Three proportions might be laid down with regard to speech. 1. Articulate speech is a distinctive attribute of man. 2. It is a universal attribute of man. 3. The faculty of speech is spiritual and not material. Language could only be taught by hearing others speak. A child who never heard a human voice would be dumb. Scores of cases were on record to prove this. Human speech had not been evolved.

The lecturer referred at some length to those intellectual powers of man which brutes did not possess, and to the lack of instinct and the power of self-preservation in the young of human beings. He then proceeded to show that no change had been shown to have occurred in the human race from the earliest period. The oldest remains known and the theory that the primeval condition of man was a savage, had not a shadow of support in facts. The forms and features of man and animals, as depicted on Egptian monuments, or as still traceable in the mummies of the pyramids, were the same as we meet to-day, and probably the human intellect had never risen to a higher degree than in the days of Hebrew prophets and Greek poets and philosophers.

At the close of the lecture, which was most attentively listened to, the Rev. Dr. replied to a great number of questions sent up by the audience.

To-night, the subject of the lecture will be "Christian morals not an Evolution but a Revelation." A large attendance is expected.

PRESENTATION OF AN ADDRESS.

Text of the Address Adopted to Bro. W. C. Springer.

At the regular meeting of Otonabee Lodge, I.O.O.F. No. 13, on Oct. 15th, a resolution was adopted appointing a committee to draft an address to Bro. W. C. Springer, an active member of the lodge, who proposed removing, and since has removed, to Cleveland. Accordingly, the following address was drafted, and at last night's meeting of the lodge was adopted, and directed to be forwarded to Bro. Springer, who though far distant still remains a member, having provided for retaining his connection by paying his dues a year and a half in advance.

W. C. Springer, Esq.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—When so lately taking leave of Brothers McGill and Early we were not aware that we would so soon be called upon to part with another of our members.

We deeply regret the loss of your services to our Lodge, and will long miss the pleasures of your cheerful influence and the benefit of your good judgment. You have won an enviable place in the respect of every member who has had the opportunity of learning of the sterling integrity of your character. Your sober and industrious habits and your skill as a workman have gained for you a reputation for ability which we feel assured will attend you throughout your future career.

We unanimously regret your departure and feel the strongest assurance that the qualities which have won for you the respect of this community to which you came but a few years since a stranger, will gain for you and your good lady a prominent position in the estimation of those to whom you return with a more extended experience and a matured judgment.

We wish you a happy and prosperous future accompanied with God's richest blessings, and we hope for a renewal of our social joys, which if not realized in this world, may be enjoyed in that Grand Lodge whither all true fellowship is directed.

Yours in F. L. & T.

Signed on behalf of Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, I.O.O.F.

A LUCKY MAN.

Laid up for Months by a Severe Form of Kidney Disease—The Simple Cure he used—He's Well Now.

THEDFORD, Oct, 22.—Some men don't know when they are in luck and some do. Albert Maithers, of this place, is one of the lucky ones who knows of his good fortune and tells about it. He says he was laid up and could do no work for months because of kidney disease. When kidney disease has such a hold on a man as that, he is in a serious condition. Mr. Maithers recognized this and used every remedy he could think of, but without getting any help until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes cured him and he is attending to his affairs once more and is as hearty and happy as ever.

Address and Presentation.

The Markham Economist says:—The departure of Mr. J. D. McDonnell, late section foreman on the C. P. R., Locust Hill, for Peterborough, was the occasion of a very pleasant gathering of his friends and acquaintances, on Saturday evening, Oct. 6th. After a sumptuous banquet prepared by mine host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Nighswander, those present gathered in the spacious parlours to hear the following address and to witness the presentation of a beautiful oak chair. After the presentation, Mr. McDonnell, mastering his emotion, expressed in a few well chosen words his surprise and gratitude, and his deep regret that duty should call him to sever his connection with friends endeared to him, and assured those present that the sight of their beautiful present would recall pleasant reminiscences of days spent at Locust Hill. The address read as follows:

Mr. J. D. McDonnell:

DEAR FRIEND,—We have been called together this evening to bid you a kind farewell ere your departure to another field of labour. You have now spent seven years amongst us, and all these years you have shown yourself upright and honest with your fellowmen. While our religious and political views may not always have been on the same line, yet all has been harmonious and friendly. The company by whom you are employed have, no doubt, appreciated your ability and have called you to a wider field of labour, where, no doubt, greater responsibility will be laid upon you—observation in the past has taught us that you are able to cope with any additional responsibility which you may incur. We feel that we could not conscientiously allow your departure without some recognition of your worth. Allow us, in the name of your friends, to present to you this chair as a memento of former associations; while not of any great value, still we hope that you may long live to enjoy it, and while meditating thereon, think of your old friends in this vicinity where you have spent a small portion of your lifetime.

Signed on behalf of those present,

G. E. RESSOR,
D. B. NIGHSWANDER.

TORONTO TO BUFFALO.

Niagara Falls Asked to Assist the Promoters of a Connecting Line.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 23.—William Kyle and R. F. Segsworth of Toronto, representing the Toronto capitalists who lately purchased the old horse car line between Niagara Falls and Drummondville, waited on the town council in special meeting last evening. Mr. Kyle addressed the meeting, pointing out that it was the intention of the new company to rebuild the old line, making it an electric line and changing the route to run along the escarpment to Chippewa, with line to Drummondville, extending the line north to connect with boats at or below Queenstown for Toronto; also with boats at Chippewa for Buffalo, and asked the council to provide a bonus of $50,000 to $75,000 to assist in constructing the new line. The council passed a resolution referring the matter to their business committee to look into the genuineness of their franchise and matters generally and report to the next regular monthly meeting.

OTTAWA, Oct. 23.—Thomas Birkett is talked of here as a candidate for the mayoralty against Mayor Cox.

The supreme court to-day had the case of the city of Toronto vs. Jarvis up for hearing. A POOR HALF YEAR

Had the G. T. R.—Mr. Household Renews His Attack on President Tyler.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—To many causes is ascribed the poor showing of the Grand Trunk railway in its half-yearly report. The Board of Directors blame the silver question and the panic that ensued in the Western States as the first cause and they also cite as an additional cause the strike of the Pullman workmen and its disastrous spread. The coal strike is another contributing cause, as are also the low price of farm produce and other general causes that have brought about the present depression of trade. It is admitted that the half-year just closed is the most disastrous ever expienced in the history of the Grand Trunk Railway.

Yesterday his coat and medicine box were found lying upon the river bank. A purse coutaing $1.05 was found in a pocket of the coat. It is supposed that he has committed suicide by drowning. MILLIONS ARE INVOLVED Judgment Rendered in a Famous Law Suit at Cleveland.

PENDING FOR SEVERAL YEARS

Gigantic Railroad and Mining Enterprise in Which Fortunes Were Invested and Lost—The Chief Promoters Sued for Certain Moneys Loaned.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 24.—Judge Augustus J. Ricks, sitting in the United States Circuit Court, Northern Ohio district, has decided the famous suit involving the ownership of millions of dollars worth of stock of the Canadian Copper Co., Anglo-American Iron Co. and Central Ontario Railroad Co. The suit has been pending in the courts for several years, and grew out of the manipulations of the stocks of three companies by James B. and Samuel R. Ritchie. Those interested in the deals with the Ritchies were ex-Senator H. B. Payne, Judge Stevenson Burke, of Hocking Valley fame, the estate of H. B. Cornell and J. B. and George McMullen. The Ritchies sunk fortunes in the enterprises, and something like $1,500,000 was borrowed from the other stockholders named, the Ritchies giving large blocks of stock as collateral securities.

When the failure of the enterprises became apparent to even the most sanguine of the stockholders, the Ritchies were sued for the amounts borrowed. A counter-claim of nearly a million and half was set up for personal services of the Ritchies in manipulation of the stocks. The best legal talent in the state was engaged in the trial of the case and the fight was a very bitter one. In deciding it to-day Judge Ricks disallowed all of the claims of the Ritchies and entered judgments against them as follows: H. B. Payne $600,000; Stevenson Burke $380,000; Cornell estate $200,000; McMullens $270,000.

The Ritchies were given eleven days in which to liquidate the judgments. In the event of their failure to do so the collateral securities were ordered sold. The sale will be advertised in all the financial centres of the world. If the amount realized from the sale of the stocks exceeds the amount of the judgments the balance will be paid to the Ritchies. If there is a deficit, securities held by the wife of S. H. Ritchie will be ordered sold by the court. In passing on the case Judge Ricks referred to S. R. Ritchie as a man who was bound up in an effort to make millions and in whose scruples he had very little faith.

Peculiar Surrogate Court Case.

BUFFALO, Oct. 24.—A somewhat unusual application was made at the Surrogate term yesterday, when John J. Ferguson filed papers asking for letters of administration for the estate of his son, Daniel J. Ferguson, without knowing positively that he was dead. Mr. Ferguson lived in Toronto in 1877, and was a traveling man. Daniel was in the same business and was working for a Toronto firm. He owed the firm considerable money, which he was unable to pay, and he left his home suddenly to escape the demands which were being made upon him by his employers. His folks heard from him nine years ago, when they received a letter which had been mailed in Minneapolis. In this letter he said he was doing pretty well and promised to write to his folks frequently. Since then nothing has been heard from him, and his relatives have come to the conclusion that he is dead. The Surrogate granted letters of administration to the father.

Troubles of Three Celestial Actors.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—B. C. Chetwood, counsellor for five Chinese actors, Chin Ah Bond, Loi Shei Han, Lau Yeong, Ye Ong Pan and San Hai Lan, now in Canton jail, St. Lawrence county, for attempting to enter the United States contrary to law, obtained from Judge Wallace yesterday a writ of habeas corpus for the men. The writ is returnable before Judge Coxe, in Utica, on November 13. The men were arrested on September 17 at Ogdensburg, a week after they had rowed across the St. Lawrence river at night. They declared they had missed the ferry boat from Montreal to Ogdensburg. They were detained by United States Commissioner Edward L. Strong for deportation after a hearing.

Explosion of Gasoline.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 24.—Two three-story buildings at Nineteenth and Biddle streets were demolished by a gasoline explosion about noon yesterday. A barrel of the fluid was standing on the sidewalk at the corner and in some way took fire and exploded. H. W. Damme's grocery store and Paul Kurtz's butcher shop were wrecked and several other adjacent buildings damaged. Frank Kelly, Patrick Dwyer, Gus Bear and Mrs. Damme and child were injured.

Defaulter Hardiker Surrenders.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 24.—George Hardiker, defaulting assistant cashier of the Grand Trunk and Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee railroads, was induced yesterday to come over from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, and give himself up. Hardiker says his accounts are $6,500 short. He expects his friends to help him settle up the loss.

Grover Changed His Mind.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A Herald special from Washington says: President Cleveland's attitude in regard to the participation of administration officials in the present campaign has been somewhat modified, and from this time on Federal office holders will take quite a prominent part in the contest.

WHO SLEW WESTWOOD

One Witness Swears Frank Was Mixed Up in a "Girl Affair."

THIS OCCURRED LAST WINTER

The Murdered Boy's Mother Made Some Statements at Last Night's Continuation of the Inquest Which Conflict With His Father's Sworn Testimony.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—The inquest into the shooting of Frank B. Westwood, the Parkdale youth who was recently shot down at the door of his father's house by an unknown person, was resumed at No. 6 police station last evening. That interest in this dark deed has not to any great extent abated in the interval which had elapsed since the last session of the enquete was evidenced by the presence in the hall of several hundred citizens of the West End, and the usual complement of reporters, police officers and waiting witnesses.

The adjournment of a week ago was taken ostensibly for the purpose of giving the Crown's representatives an opportunity to get in shape the line of evidence they proposed to offer, and to await developments. The expectation, then, that something new would come out, and the fact that several members of the Westwood family would take the stand made the audience anxious and interested.

Mrs. Westwood, mother of the murdered boy, first took the stand. Her evidence was but a repetition of the now familiar story of the crime, with the addition of a few minor details not before brought out. The shooting occurred but a few minutes after she retired to her room. A peculiar fact is that she swore the denotation of the shot was accompanied by a sound like the shivering of glass. In some slight particulars her evidence contradicted her husband's. Strange to say, his mother's story was that the wounded boy reached his room and partially undressed without assistance while she was telephoning for medical aid. Frank had always made her his confidante and she knew of no trouble he had had with any person. He and his brother Charles were on the best of terms, and she knew of no intimacy between him and his brother's wife. Neither did she know of him going with any girl in the city. There was smoke in the hall when she reached Frank's side, and the outer door was closed.

Willie Westwood, the 16-year-old brother of Frank, had nothing of importance to tell. He was first awakened by a sound like breaking glass and a few minutes later Frank staggered into his room, and in reply to a question of what the noise was, said "I'm shot. Realistically he described his brother's condition and his terrible wound. Frank was a member of the Maroon Boat Club and associated principally with Edgar Lennox, young Cooper and the Caldwell boys. Willie had never seen his brother with nor heard him speak of any girls. The stonehooker story was revived and the boy said the first shot his father fired struck the water, but the others went over the tree tops. He knew of no difficulty Frank had ever had. To his knowledge the murdered youth had seldom visited his brother Charley's house. The latter had a 22-calibre revolver.

W. H. Andrews had met Frank at the corner of Queen street and Jamieson avenue about 9.10 o'clock on the night of the shooting. Lennox and Cooper were with Frank and the four strolled around for an hour. He left Frank with Cooper at 10.15 at the corner of Jamieson and King. He knew of no girls with whom young Westwood associated and was not aware that he had any enemies.

Isaac Anderson did not know of Frank having any improper relations with any girl. He had, however, heard of him being mixed up in a "girl affair" last winter, but could not say whether there was any truth in the story.

W. Cooper, who was one of Frank's intimates, said he knew nothing of the latter's being intimate with any girl. He had never heard of Frank having improper relations with females. Westwood was not a "lady's man." Crown Attorney Curry pressed the witness hard, seemingly suspecting that he was not anxious to tell all he knew; but Cooper stood by his first statements.

Edgar Lennox, Frank Westwood's bosom friend, knew of no city girl with whom the murdered youth kept company. He had heard him mention a young lady outside the city. Frank had had improper relations with a girl a year ago, but not during the present year. The first thing Frank said to him after the shooting was: "Well, old boy, it's hard lines." He then declared that he knew of no possible reason for the shooting. Frank had said the afternoon before his death: "Well, if I have to die it's all right." Lennox gave his evidence in a hesitating, unsatisfactory way.

Wm. Britt, of Jameson ave., son-in-law of Dr. Sparrow, had, with two policemen, made a thorough search of the grounds shortly after the shooting, but failed to find any tracks or other evidence of the presence of the murder.

Harvey M. Taylor, Eglington, had been with Bert. Westwood all the evening of the murder up till 11.30 o'clock. He knew Frank Westwood well and thought him a youth of exemplary character. Mrs. Bert. Westwood was with him (the witness) and her husband during the whole of the evening of the 6th inst.

W. B. Keene, boat builder, Sunnyside, knew Frank Westwood well, and never saw him with a girl. He knew nothing of him being intimate with a girl living at his (Keene's) house.

At this point the inquest was again adjourned till Monday, 29th inst.

Dominion House in January.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—Hon. Mackenzie Bowell talked to a reporter yesterday as to the rumors of a December session. He said that the reports had probably gained credence because the order had already been given for the yearly house-cleaning in the main block of the Parliament buildings. This, the Minister said, was being done early this year, but it was no indication of the early opening of Parliament. "I don't think you will see the session begun before the end of January."

CZAR IS WORSE AGAIN

Princess Alix's Arrival To Lavidia Disturbed the Emperor

GREATLY REDUCED IN WEIGHT

This Heart Continues Weak, Insomnia Has Reappeared but Improvement is Noted in his Appetite—Foreign Journalists are Excluded from Lavidia.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily News says: The excitement of Princess Alix's arrival had a bad effect on the Czar. Private information concerning the Czar's condition is again pessimist. The weakness of his heart is no better. His insomnia somewhat abated on the 21st and 22d, but reappeared yesterday. The heartiness of the Czarewitch's reception of Princess Alix will silence all unpleasant rumors regarding the marriage.

A despatch to the News from Odessa says: With the exception of official reports no telegrams referring to the Czar's condition are permitted to be sent from Lavidia. Nobody known to be a foreign reporter is allowed to reside in Yalta, hence the many untrustworthy rumors afloat. Odessa believed on the 21st and 22d that the Czar was dead.

The bulletin yesterday caused the greatest anxiety and grief. All the members of the Czar's family except the Duchess of Coburg are now at Lavidia.

The Czarina, in responding to the telegram of the Paris journalists, said that she was deeply touched by their expression of sympathy.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 24.—The Czar's physicians issued a bulletin at 7 o'clock last evening, saying that in the course of the day the patient had been languid and had shown slight convulsive symptoms, but his appetite was better.

The Crisis Reached.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—The Figaro correspondent at Livadia says the Czar recently experienced thirteen hours of terrible suffering. The crisis of the disease, the paper further says, is now reached. His Majesty's condition shows a slight improvement and the members of his entourage are more hopeful of his ultimate recovery. His physicians, however, consider his condition grave. Galignani's Messenger publishes a despatch from Lavidia signed by the Grand Duke Valdimir and timed 1.12 p. m., saying that the condition of the Czar has shown improvement for the past two days, but is still very grave.

A Central News despatch from St. Petersburg says: "It is semi-officially announced that the wedding of the Czarewitch and the Princess Alix will take place in the presence of the Czar in the palace chapel at Lavidia at 3 o'clock to-day. The princess joined the Orthodox church yesterday. It is stated that on leaving Spala the Czar weighed 200 pounds, about 28 pounds below his normal weight and that he now weighs only 140 pounds." The Berlin correspondent of the Central News says that an official despatch from St. Petersburg confirms the announcement that the marriage of the Czarewitch and Princess Alix will take place to-day unless the Czar should become suddenly worse in the meantime.

RIOT IN CHICAGO.

Hoodlums Board a Train, Abuse the Crew and Fire the Depot.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—Deeds of violence such as characterized the recent railroad strike were repeated last night at Grand Crossing and South Chicago by a gang of hoodlums. An Illinois Central suburban train was boarded by a gang of toughs, who abused the crew, calling them scabs. When the train reached Wildwood the depot was burning, and while the trainmen devoted themselves to extinguishing the flames the miscreants set fire to a train of box cars on a side track, one car being destroyed. When the train again started it was found that all the semaphores had been removed and the lamps placed under the wooden work of the roadbed, the structure burning like tinder. The flames were put out with sand and tinders, but not until the track in places was so weakened that supports had to be placed under it. This is the first outbreak of the tough element since the strike and the damage would have been much greater but for the hard work of the train crew.

Will Allow No Interference.

HIROSHIMA, Oct. 24.—At the special session of the Japanese Diet, which closed yesterday, a memorial was adopted urging the government to execute the desires of the Mikado with a view to the restoration of peace in the east, the increase of the glory of Japan, the punishment of China, and the prevention of future disturbances of eastern peace. The memorial concludes with the declaration that Japan will not tolerate interference by any nation to prevent her obtaining the ultimate objects of the war which she has been waging against China.

Annexation of Neckar Island.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The protest against the annexation by Great Britain of Neckar Island in the Pacific, which was to be presented by the combined colonies to the Imperial Government, will now be allowed to lapse owing to the failure on the part of the delegates to Hawaii to secure the purchase of the island.

An Agreement Made.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—At last an agreement has been made between the city and the aqueduct company, and a franchise is in sight for the capitalists at the back of the scheme. The agreement provides adequate protection for the city.

Tenders for the Canadian Loan.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Immediately upon the announcement that tenders for the Canadian loan of £3,250,000 would be received until the 29th inst. at a minimum price of 95, the bonds were quoted at 2 per cent. premium.

Death of a Baron.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—George Sclater-Booth, the first Baron Basing, is dead, aged 68 years. He was elevated to the peerage in 1887. From 1874 to 1880 he was president of the Local Government Board.

MAKE THE CONTRAST.

THE Toronto News truthfully remarks:

The Ontario Government does not make a muddle of every public work it undertakes. On the contrary hardly one such undertaking has been carried out by that Government which has not been conducted economically and wisely.

Why is this? It is simply because the Ontario Government does business on business principles, and ministers make themselves personally responsible for the proper expenditure of the public money. The opposite condition prevails in Federal administration. There is hardly a public work conducted under the Dominion Government in which there is not more or less—generally more—stealing, and, always, waste. Why is this? Because ministers get election funds from contractors, favoured at the public expense, and because ministers claim that they are not responsible for the moneys spent under the auspices of their departments. Conservative journals are not found to condemn ministers, who take such rascally views of the responsibility of their position. But when these same plunderings and stealings under the very eyes of ministers are found out by the officious Grits, these same journals claim the highest praise as due the ministers, who should have prevented these stealings, because they prosecute dishonest contractors to make them disgorge the stolen money of the people. What has been the result? In the McGreevy-Connolly affair it was proven that the country paid $3,136,000 for the work, which cost the contractors $2,184,000, of this nearly a million dollars the government election fund got its share and yet the government had the cheek to sue the contractors to recover $560,000, doubtless the moiety of the spoil, the Conservative election fund did not draw; and again, what was the result? The Government compromised the case for $45,000, a big share of which went for costs. Now we hear of the determination of this virtuous Government to prosecute Mr. St. Louis, who also contributed to the election funds—quite as a private citizen, of course—to make him disgorge a portion of the stealings in connection with the disgraceful Curran bridge affair. Mr. Haggart says he is not responsible for the stealings that took place on a work under his department. We cannot compare, we can only contrast, the different ways in which the Ontario (Liberal) Government and the Ottawa (Conservative) Government manage affairs. In Ontario, honesty and efficiency and ministerial watchfulness over every detail; at Ottawa rampant dishonesty, ruinous inefficiency, and a minister, who traffics in his responsibility, drops the reins of restraint from one hand, and with the other grasps the spoil which his underlings steal—for the purpose of showing what confidence the electors, at so much per head, have in his righteous administration.

GREAT minds sometimes take slight things seriously. For instance, the Montreal Star in a ponderous editorial way deals, to the length of a quarter of a column, with the relation of that featherweight in politics, Dr. Ryerson, to the Patron movement. After assuming to show that Dr. Ryerson has made a bid for the Patron vote, the Star says, as seriously as a judge:

Since the disappearance of Mr. Meredith, Dr. Ryerson is easily one of the most commanding figures in the Ontario Opposition.

Really, now; what size do you suppose the other members of the Opposition feel themselves to be. Ill-natured persons think that the largest thing about Dr. Ryerson, politically, is his—well, maxilliary region, commonly called cheek.

MARTER THE NEW LEADER

Chosen as Successor to Mr. Meredith at the First Caucus of the Opposition.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—The members of the Opposition in the Local House met here last evening to select a successor to Mr. Meredith. Messrs. Marter, Whitney, Ryerson, Miscampbell, Howland and Willoughby were nominated.

Miscampbell and Willoughby retired, and the other nominees left the meeting, while their colleagues balloted on the remaining names. After considerable discussion Mr. Marter was chosen.

True Bill Against Mrs. Hartley.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 23.—The grand jury returned a true bill for murder against Mrs. Hartley, the woman who is charged with the heinous offence of poisoning her husband. The facts as alleged resemble very much those which were proven in the sensational Sharon case, where a woman attempted to poison her husband with arsenic. Louis Henry Ling, the hired man, created a sensation by a confession that Mrs. Hartly wanted him to give poison to her husband, and that he had seen her give him medicine with poison in it. The fellow also stated that he had been led into an intimacy with Mrs. Hartley at her intigation. That Hartley suspected he being poisoned by something was also developed at the inquest. The only son, Fred. Hartley, said to the doctors, "It's a hard thing to say, but I suspect my mother."

Its Dangerous Ground

that you stand on—with a cough or a cold, and your blood impure. Out of just these conditions comes Consumption.

You must do something. In the earlier stages of Consumption, and in all the conditions that lead to it, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a certain remedy. This scrofulous affection of the lungs, like every other form of Scrofula, can be cured by it. In severe, lingering Coughs, all Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, and every disease that can be reached through the blood, it is the only medicine so effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure you have your money back. Nervous prostration and debility are conquered by it.

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam cures coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Miss Lottie Moore returned last week from an extended visit to Huntsville, N.Y.

Mr E. Brown, Peterborough, is visiting friends in Asphodel.

Miss Bertha Sperry, Peterborough, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. D. A. Fraser.

Mr. Geo. Center, of Toronto, is visiting his sister, Mrs. S. S. Weaver.

Mrs. W. H. Stephenson, is visiting friends in Mostery, N.Y.

A number of our young folk attended the Foresters' ball at Westwood last Friday evening.

Mr. Robert Wilson is moving from his old stand on Colborne street to Peterborough street. The old building will be torn down to make room for a large brick store.

There was a large number of young people at the station last Wednesday night to welcome Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Fraser home on the eve of their wedding. The happy couple have taken up their residence on Wellington street. We add our congratulations and best wishes to those of their numerous friends here.

New pupils are being added to our High School, every week. The attendance has now reached 150, with the prospect of a further increase.

The following motion was passed unanimously at the last meeting of the Literary society:—Moved by Miss Roxburgh, seconded by Mr. Hunter, that the society pass a hearty vote of thanks to the members of the Epworth League for the kind reception extended to them, on the evening of Friday, October 12th.

A concert will be given in the town hall, next Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the public school. No pains are being spared to have a first-class musical and literary programme. The proceeds are to go towards paying for a geographical chart for the school. There should be a large attendance.

The trial of the sheep-killing case came before Squire Breckenridge, on Monday. Peter Ferguson, of Dummer, charged Duncan Ferguson with keeping a dog, which killed sheep. The case was decided in favour of plaintiff, damages being assessed at $15, each to pay his own costs.

Two more appeals from Norwood against the results of the recent departmental examinations have been sustained. A junior leaving certificate has been awarded to Robert Weir, while Maggie Chase has succeeded in gaining her primary certificate. This makes a total of 38 passed by this school.

The bridge over the old flume at the flour mills has been torn up and the place filled in with gravel. This is a considerable improvement as there was always great danger of a washout.

The branch of the Union Bank here has moved into its new quarters in the store formerly occupied by J. W. Clarke. The place has been finely fixed up. The old windows have been removed and their place taken by plate glass, with large panels of cathedral glass at the top. The counter is of cherry and is ornamented with beautiful carvings. In the rear is a large fire-proof vault.

The induction of the Rev. J. F. Somerville into the pastorate of the Presbyterian church, took place Thursday afternoon last. A large number of the ministers belonging to the Peterborough Presbytery were present. Rev. J. K. Smith, moderator, presided. After the induction a tea was given by the ladies in the basement of the church. A large number of people were present and a pleasant evening was spent. Speeches were delivered by a number of gentlemen, and a good musical programme was rendered. The proceeds amounted to $65.

A LUCKY MAN.

Laid up for Months by a Severe Form of Kidney Disease—The Simple Cure he used—He's Well Now.

THEDFORD, Oct, 22.—Some men don't know when they are in luck and some do. Albert Maithers, of this place, is one of the lucky ones who knows of his good fortune and tells about it. He says he was laid up and could do no work for months because of kidney disease. When kidney disease has such a hold on a man as that, he is in a serious condition. Mr. Maithers recognized this and used every remedy he could think of, but without getting any help until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes cured him and he is attending to his affairs once more and is as hearty and happy as ever.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

NORTH SMITH.

The following is an essay on, "Why we should seek Christ?" given by Endeavorer, who has since gone to receive the reward of his faithful endeavours for Christ and the church:

Why we should seek Christ?—First, because of what Jesus has done for us, and second, because of our need of Him. Jesus has wrought out for each one of us a perfect salvation, which cost the only begotten Son of God so much suffering, pain and anguish, and scourging and mocking, and even the shameful death upon the cross of Calvary, where He exclaimed "It is finished." He was treated, as we deserved, that we might go free. He came to the earth and took our sins, that we might take His righteousness and go to Heaven. He was condemned for our sins, in which He had no share, that we might be justified by His righteousness. He became a substitute and bore the curse for us. He took that law which we have trampled upon, and magnified it and made it honourable, by rendering a perfect obedience and by showing that it was His meat and His drink to obey it, saying, "I delight to do thy will, O, my God." He gave Himself in our room and stead, the just for the unjust. The divinity of His nature and infinite purity of His character gave such weight to His atonement, such value to His blood, that the claims of God's justice is more fully met than if a whole world full of sinners had been sent to perdition. Yea, so fully satisfied is justice that it now unites with love in urging the sinner to return and seek his God. We see then that the atonement of the Lord Jesus was not the cause of God's love, but the result of it. God does not love us because Jesus died, but, Jesus died because God loved us. God loved the sinner as much before Jesus died as he did after, but there was no channel through which that love could flow into the sinner's heart in consistence with his truth and justice. Mighty barriers stood in the way, which no hand but the bleeding hand of Jesus could tear away. The truth of God stood in the way in the stern words, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." But when Jesus made bare his holy bosom and received its burning print into his own heart for sinners these barriers were all removed, and now the love of God can flow on without restriction, till it fills with pardon and peace the vilest sinner who seeks his Son. Is not this sufficient reason why we should seek him. God has no greater display of love to spread before you. Heaven's richest gift has been given for you and now the invitation is gone out to you. Seek the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon Him while he is near.

Secondly, Why should we seek Christ? Because you need Him; you need Him in time and you need him in eternity. He is the only true refuge, and in Him you will find a safe shelter when the temptations, trials and troubles of this life come upon you. Seek Him because He is a mighty tower into which the righteous can run and be safe. You may not see your great need of Him now. Well, then, you will need Him in eternity; trust Him in time, and He will be with you in eternity. All around you is changing. The hand of death and decay will touch everything earthly that you cling to, and it will perish from your sight. Already many of the loved companions of your early days are gone. If you seek anything earthly you lean upon a broken reed. Seek friends, and they may die and leave you, or prove false to you. Seek riches and they may take to themselves wings and fly away. But seek Jesus, and you have a friend, "the same yesterday, to-day and forever." Do not cast from you such a wealth of love. The hand that was nailed to the cross for you is stretched out to save you, but it is also strong to smite. Bleeding love despised, will bring down eternal ruin on your head. Oh, what will you do without the Saviour's presence when you come to die? I see your pale, frightened countenance as you lie upon the bed of death. I see your anxious look, as the world fast recedes from your view; friends gaze at you through their tears but cannot die for you. Your physicians can do no more for you. Your heart struggles wildly under the grasp of death. Eternity is drawing very near to your view. In another moment, with all your sins upon your soul, you will be before God. Oh, what will you do without a Saviour to plead for you, without his blood to wash away your guilt, and without His strong arm to lean upon as you go through the valley. Surely now you will not stop to question, "Why you should seek Christ." Jesus has said, "Be not troubled about many things, but one thing is needful and Mary has chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her."

The North Smith C. E. Society will hold their meetings on Thursday evening of each week for the winter months. Report of officers for next half year:
President—Mrs. J. H. Sanderson, re-elected.
Vice-President—Miss M. Fitzgerald.
Recording Secretary—Miss M. Preston.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss M. Nelson.
Treasurer—Mr. J. Blewett.

COLD SPRINGS—OTONABEE.

From Our Own Correspondent

On Saturday afternoon, Oct. 20th, a team representing the Cold Springs football club drove to Frazerville to play the return match with the "Cedar Valley Rangers." The two teams had already met, and the score was a tie, 0 to 0, so there was considerable speculation as to the probable result of the return match. Mr. Clare Moore, who was referee on the former occasion, was again chosen to fill that responsible position, which he did, as before, to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. His fair and gentlemanly rulings well earned the three hearty cheers given by all the players in his honour at the conclusion of the game. The teams lined up as follows:

Cold Springs.		Cedar Valley.
W W Matchett	goal	O Moore
Albert Price	backs	Stewart Hall
John Martyn	backs	John Findlay
Percy Price	half backs	J Isbister
Joe Welch	half backs	Albert Reynolds
K Macdonald	half backs	W Syers
W Hertlihey	forwards	R Campbell
H P Kennedy	forwards	D Armstrong
A Rose	forwards	T Thompson
John Rose	forwards	F Waterman
H Tapscott	forwards	T Isbister

After play began the first game was scored by Ceder Valley, and before half-time was called Coldsprings had also scored on goal. During the second half neither side got a goal, thus leaving the score a tie again, 1 to 1. After the usual cheers the Cedar Valley Rangers invited the visitors down to the temperance house to partake of an excellent supper which was provided by the home club. When the players, whose appetites had been sharpened by the vigorous exercise of the game, had done ample justice to the good things provided for the wants of the inner man, they departed for home, but not before giving three hearty cheers for the Cedar Valley Rangers, by whom they had been treated so well. Those who saw the match say they have seldom, if ever, seen a better exhibition of football, and it was all done in a very friendly spirit. The Cold Springs boys have nothing but words of praise for the members of the Cedar Valley club, who did all in their power to make the afternoon and evening pleasant for the visiting team.

It is not certain yet whether another match can be arranged for this season between the above mentioned teams, but if it should occur it will no doubt be very exciting and interesting.

GENTLEMEN,—Last July, I took Congestion of the Lungs and was in bed for four weeks. I was very weak and could not speak above a whisper. Dr. Lawson, of Hamiota, attended me and sent a bottle of Milburn's Emulsion. It soon restored my voice and health.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, and after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

ROBERT HALL.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the BEST makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

A TRAMP ARRESTED SUSPECTED OF MURDER.

A POSSE FROM OMEMEE SURROUNDS HIM.

Is This the Murderer of Little Jessie Keith—He States he can Prove an Alibi—Intense Excitement.

(Special despatch to the Examiner.)

OMEMEE, Oct. 24th.

Yesterday afternoon, Dan. Callaghan, who lives ten miles north of the village, while here, said, in conversation with Mr. Eli Williamson, that he had given dinner to a tramp, who had come from the west. Callaghan was shown the description of the murderer of Jessie Keith, near Listowel, on last Friday, and he said that his boarder in every particular. As soon as the circumstances became known, Constable Glass set forth with the following special constables, sworn in for the occasion, Eli Williamson, Thos. McPherson, Thos. Stevenson, jr., A. Jedmin, William McCrea and Ottawa Page, principal of the High School. It was ten o'clock last night, when they arrived at Dorgans, where the tramp was in bed for the night. The officer of the party arrested him, and after due deliberation of the party, they thought he answered the details published concerning the murderer enough to warrant detaining him before a magistrate. He is now in the lockup and will have an examination before Dr. Cornwall, J.P., to-day. When arrested he asked "if it was for murder." He says he can prove that he was in Lindsay on last Saturday morning, and if he can establish this fact it will prove pretty clearly that he could not get there from the scene of the murder in less than twenty-four hours. There is quite an excitement over the arrest, and the details will be watched with more than ordinary interest.

ANSWERED THE DETAILS

FOR A HEARING

ANOTHER ARREST.

While Chief Constable Sherdian, of Omemee, was arresting Constable Mitchell for furious driving, the latter pulled part of the old pioneer's beard out by the roots, causing a free flow of blood. The whiskerpuller justifies his hirsute violence on the grounds that he was not guilty, and consequently took the law (minion's whiskers) into his own hands.

—Bottled cold tea is well enough in its place, but when it is done up in an ale bottle, the top of which is neatly covered with tin foil and the whole enclosed in a straw case, it somehow doesn't seem as good, as when something more exhilirating was expected. It is a cruel joke to present such a bottle to a man with a beer thirst upon him.

—A false alarm called the hose and hook and ladder waggons to a point half a mile beyond the boundary, yesterday afternoon, at about four o'clock. The alarm was sent in from the new Albert street fire-box in Ward No. 1, but on the arrival of the brigade, it was found that a huge bonfire of leaves and rubbish was the cause of the alarm. The smoke rolling out from behind a barn created the impression that it was the building itself, which was in a blaze.

—"The Impotence of the Churches in a Manufacturing Town," (Fall River, Mass.) is the subject of an article in the forthcoming number of the Forum by the Rev. Wm. B. Hale, author of the recent article on the religious analysis of Middleboro', Mass. Mr. Hale in the service of the Forum, has made a personal study of the moral condition of Fall River to ascertain to what extent the churches, divided as they are, are equal to the demands made on them by the conditions of a modern manufacturing community.

—A couple of little children were up before the police magistrate this morning on account of not attending school. One little fellow boldly declared to the P. M. that he didn't go because he didn't like it. He thought, though, that he would sooner go to school than take a flogging in the cells, so was given a chance. The other boy complained of being abused by the other lads, but was advised by the magistrate to be regular hereafter on pain of being severely dealt with. The boys mother stated that the lad had been attending school for two years, as had his sister, but that their teacher did not seem able to even teach them the alphabet. Constable Stewart conducted both youngsters back to their respective classes.

THE EMPLOYMENT OF LABOUR.

This Year's Contribution of the Dickson Manufacturing Company—Suggestions of Important Repairs Effected.

During the past summer the labour market has not been of the briskest. Our manufacturing establishments, where the labour is concentrated, and the hands employed can be seen at a glance, seem to be our largest employers of labour. They, doubtless, give considerable employment, and distribute large amounts in wages. But there are other concerns which, through the distributed character of the labour employed, does not make as much show, yet are important factors in giving employment.

During the whole of the past season the Dickson Company in its large area of operations has given a large amount of employment. A few hints of what has been done will not be without public interest.

The Rogers' dam has been rebuilt from the very bottom, gravelled and timbered and made a practically new dam. The raceway has been repaired, and the flumes to the Rogers mills as well as the little saw mill, have been rebuilt and everything in connection with the raceway put into first class shape.

The stone mill has been practically rebuilt and it is now one of the completest most modern and well equipped 250 barrel roller mills in existence. All the apparatus and appliances are up-to-date. The plan of the machinery was made by the most competent mill man in Canada and the plan carried out in the most thoroughly workmanlike manner. The mills are under lease to Messrs. Davidson & Munro, who will put them in operation, it is expected, in a few days.

The little saw mill, on the Rogers' race, has been partially rebuilt and put into really first-class shape and is now busily in operation with a gang of from fifteen to twenty hands. The main dam across the river has been thoroughly opened up, the first time the water since November, 1870. It was originally a well built dam, and is now considered one of the most compact, best built dams in the country, and is perfect and staunch in every respect, except where the wear of the water has had effect, and that has been looked after. The sheet piling has been renewed, and the work of gravelling thoroughly attended to. It is now in excellent shape.

HAS BEEN SHUT OFF FOR REPAIRS

Large employment has been given local workmen, as well as village workmen, by the extensive repairs to the Lakefield dam, which has been largely rebuilt, with new sheet piling and gravelling, and the backing renewed from the woollen mills to the Government dam.

The grist mills on the raceway, recently occupied by Mr. Meldrum, are to be remodelled thoroughly according to the requirements of modern advance in mill machinery improvement, and the Dickson raceway, and the power house at the southern end are also included in the contemplated scheme of improvements. While speaking of the raceway the street parallel with it is not by any means overburdened with improvements and repairs at the hands of the town authorities.

In all the operations referred to there have been employed constantly twenty teams, and as those who know anything about work of this kind know that each team represents the employment of eight or ten men, it will be seen that between 150 and 200 men, besides the teams, have been given employment, a no small matter these hard times when labour is so exceedingly scarce.

All about the Dickson Company's premises is clean, neat and shipshape, a considerable contrast to the condition of some of the adjacent streets.

Grafton's beats them all for style, fit and finish in clothing.

LAKEHURST.

(From Our Own Corespondent.)

A very successful tea meeting was held in the Methodist church here on Wednesday evening, 17th inst., at which a good number were present. In spite of the unpropitious weather and the gusts of wind and rain, the ladies of the congregation turned out nobly and did their part in providing the refreshments for those who came. Tea was served in the town hall from 5 to 7 o'clock p.m., after which all repaired to the church where a programme was, in due time, presented. Rev. M. H. Fulford, pastor, took the chair, after which all joined in singing "All hail the Power of Jesus Name." Rev. W. Limbert of Lakefield, came forward and addressed the assembly. He complimented the people of Lakehurst upon their efforts in sustaining the cause of Methodism in this place, and upon the beautiful church erected for the worship of God. He spoke at length upon our duties to God and his church, universally. His address was listened to with rapt attention. Then followed the rest of the programme, consisting of music by the choir, solos, recitations, readings, clubswinging and various other exercises. We must not forget to say that Rev. F. J. Greer, of Selwyn, was was also with us and delivered an interesting address on "Success in Life." He dwelt at length upon the different points in his argument, viz: 1st, find your place; 2nd, stick to it; 3rd, do you work well. The rendering of the programme was indeed a credit to all who participated in it, the audience expressing their pleasure by rounds of applause. The proceeds of the evening amounted to about $23. After the customary votes of thanks to the speakers, chairman, choir and providers of the entertainment, the doxology was sung, and, the benediction being pronounced, all went home well pleased and happy.

The annual ploughing match took place on Wednesday, the 17th inst., upon the farm of Robert Tedford, Esq. There were a score of competitors in the field and all but a few were able to win prizes in their different classes. The classes, three in number, were well represented. They were, viz:—(1) men's class, (2) young men's class, (3) boys' class.

Mr. W. Payne and family are about to remove from among us. They go to Dummer to live, some eight or nine miles east of Lakefield. May success attend them.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ireland, who have lately concluded to sail together in consort for the rest of their lives, occupy the house left vacant by Mr. Payne. May they also be blessed in basket and in store, in health and happiness.

Rev. W. H. Fulford has just returned from a visit to Brighton, the home of his childhood.

There is a prospect that at some future date a bridge will be built where the ferry is now in operation. Some work has been done on the Harvey shore in building piers of stone.

The work of building piers at Buckhorn is still progressing. They propose changing the sawlog slide from its present position so that it may not interfere with the canal lock on the north side.

We had a slight flurry of snow on Sunday last. This may be regarded as a precursor of that which must follow in a few weeks.

SOME CASES TO BE TRIED ON FRIDAY.

County Magistrate Edmison Will Have Some Peculiar Cases to Deal With.

Upon information laid by ex-Reeve Sanderson, of Smith, two residents of that township have been summoned to appear before Magistrate Edmison, on Friday next, to answer to the charge of cruelly treating and abusing their horses. It appears that the two men, who each owned an apology for a horse, made a bet of $25 on the result of a race from Peterborough to Omemee and return. The first half of the distance was accomplished, but on the return trip the leading horse was fatigued to such an extent that it stumbled and being unable to recover itself, fell and broke its leg. It is asserted that, in order to try and win the race, the poor beast was forced along the road on three legs, dragging the broken limb after it for a distance of two miles further, when finding that it could not possibly cover the intervening distance between it and the town, it was killed.

The other case which will be tried will not be of much importance though the grave charge of arson has been preferred against the prisoner. Upon information laid by Mr. E. B. Stone, John Newnham was taken into custody upon the complaint of Thomas O'Neil. The latter charges that the prisoner set his house on fire Oct. 17th, and had been uttering threats to burn the dwelling just previous to the incident. In speaking of the case to-day Mr. Edmison remarked that the penalty for arson was severe, no limit being set for the term of imprisonment. He understood, however, that the house which was burned belonged to the prisoner and that two weeks ago the complainant had received notice to leave the house at the expiration of the fortnight. Just what the object of the prisoner could be in firing his own house, Mr. Edmison cannot see. Newnham to-day elected to be tried summarily by the magistrate.

THE SEWER QUESTION—THE OPENING TO BE FILLED.

Councillor McIntosh in Town, To-day, With Instructions From the Council.

This morning, Councillor McIntosh, of North Monaghan, arrived in town, with instructions from the council, of that municipality, to employ a sufficient number of men to fill in the opening made by Contractor Grant, for the new outfall sewer. However, so as to give the town every opportunity of filling in the big ditch themselves, North Monaghan has, upon the advice of their solicitor, given Peterborough one day more, in which to fill the trench.

Mr. McIntosh says that the municipality is determined to prevent the sewer entering the river, but it is to be hoped that upon second thoughts, the wiser counsels of both the town and township will prevail for the benefit of the ratepayers pockets, and that both municipalities will drop the little feeling which seems to have arisen and to be increasing and that they may apply a greater degree of business prudence to the consideration of the question. If North Monaghan is approached in a proper spirit, with reasonable safeguards protecting their interests, guaranteed, an arrangement should yet be arrived at, and the work proceeded with.

It should not be necessary for the town to send horses post haste for the Reeves of the adjoining municipalities to consider matters, after the contract had been let. An arrangement should have been arrived at before the necessity for such action became apparent.

THE "ROB ROY" IS SOLD AND GOES TO BRACEBRIDGE.

A New Steam Launch Will be Built This Winter to Take its Place.

The number of Peterborough's fleet of steam launches has been diminished by one, as the little "Rob Roy," owned by Mr. R. M. Roy, has been sold to a resident of Bracebridge. The "Rob Roy" was one of the nattiest of the many craft of this character, which ply the waters of the Otonabee, and she will be greatly missed by the many who were accorded invitations to take a trip upon her during the summer.

Mr. Roy, however, will have a new launch completed by the spring which will be far speedier than the little Rob Roy and will be about six feet greater in length. A new engine which Mr. Roy was building for the Rob Roy will now go into the new boat. It is of about six horse power and is expected to drive the new launch through the water at a rate of about ten miles an hour. Mr. Roy and his son, Mr. Ed. Roy, are making nearly all the appliances for the engine themselves.

The name of the Rob Roy was not included in the bill of sale, so the new yacht, upon completion, will be known by that cognomen.

ARE AT SEA.

Conservative M.P.P.'s Have No Definite Plan of Action—Small Attendance at the Opening of the Caucus—May Adopt a Policy.

Toronto News.

This is the day of the Conservative caucus. Three-thirty was the hour the members were to meet in the Empire office, but few of them turned up. The rest are expected this evening, and it is hardly likely any business of importance will be transacted before to-morrow.

O. Bush and James Reid were the first two outsiders to arrive. They were not met by any brass band, and after gazing around the Union Station for signs of an enthusiastic reception at the hands of a populace hungering for a capable leader, they decided to hoof it up to the Walker. One room did both.

Later on W. A. Fallis, who defeated Equal Righter Geo. Cambell in Durham, drifted in. He also made for the Walker. Dinner, not a room, was what he wanted.

There were of course five members living in Toronto who were early on deck. No one had any programme mapped out. Organizer Robert Birmingham didn't deem it worth his while to be in town for the convention.

What the caucus will do before it gets through, not even those attending it can tell. It is called for general business.

AS TO THE POLICY.

"Will there be any change in the policy?" the News asked one of the members.

"That would be impossible," was the prompt reply, "because as far as I could see we never had a policy before." I look on this meeting as more of a character at which the members can meet, get acquainted and exchange ideas. You see, of the 26 members of the party, exclusive of Mr. Meredith, 15 are new men. We want to know hat they think before we can map out a course for the party."

[Since the above was put in type Mr. Marter has been chosen leader at the caucus which took place last evening.]

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

IS THIS THE MAN?

Aleneda Chattelle, a Frenchman, a Likely Suspect in the Keith Murder.

LISTOWEL, Oct. 24.—The tramps arrested at Erin, Ont., and held on suspicion of being the murderer of Jessie Keith, gave the name of Chatle. When arrested Chattelle had in his possession ladys black waist and a pair of hose. He is a Frenchman. Upon being advised of the arrest the Crown authorities ordered the prisoners removal to Listowel for identification.

At Stevensville yesterday afternoon another tramp was detained on suspicion, but was released after a thorough examination.

The prisoner Chattelle, who was arrested at Erin and brought here for identification, was taken to Stratford jail last evening. While the authorities have not been able as yet to fully identify Chattelle his general appearance answers more exactly the published description of the murderer than any of those yet apprehended. He could not give a satisfactory account of his movements since the fatal day, and the police felt quite justified in sending him to jail after investigation. Many of those who have seen Chattelle believe him to be the right man.

LATER—The latest development in the Keith tragedy is the arrest at Erin of a suspicious character who answers to the description of the murderer. The man, whose name is Aleneda Chattelle, was arrested by Constable Travis of Erin on account of his suspicious actions, and when searched he had a number of articles of ladies' wearing apparel that may lead to the detection of the crime. He threw away a parcel containing a ladies' cashmere waist, but Constable Travis recovered it and he gave what seemed to be a satisfactory account of how he came in possession of it.

Should it be the property of the owner of the much discussed valise, then the chain of evidence is sufficient to bring the murderer to justice. The suspect was brought here yesterday afternoon and while the witnesses as to his identity were of the the opinion that he is the man wanted, there still appears to be some material evidence lacking in the matter.

Chatelle's account of his doings and whereabouts are not considered satisfactory, and he will have to render a much better account of himself than he has yet done. Government Detective Murray arrived here last night and will proceed to Stratford with the witnesses to fully identify the man, who has already been lodged in the county jail there. The valise and contents will also be taken in order to have its alleged owner in Ailsa Craig identify it and the garments. Chattelle is a French Canadian, and has evidently not been a particularly good citizen, to say the least, and the indications point to his complicity in the crime.

OMEMEE, Ont., 24.—About a dozen men went out ten miles north of Omemee last night and arrested a tramp answering the description of the Listowel murderer. He is now in the lock-up here.

GOVERNMENT MUSEUM FOR BANFF.

To Illustrate the Mineralogy and Natural History of the Rockies.

OTTAWA, Oct. 24.—A new Government museum will soon be started at Banff, N.W.T. For some time past the Dominion Government have been contemplating this move, with the object of illustrating the mineralogy and natural history of the Rocky Mountains. The directors of the Geological Survey have been instructed to prepare a complete exhibit for this museum. Prof. Macoun has prepared an exhibit of all the birds and plants of the mountains and prairie. Two hundred specimens of birds and 1,000 of plants will be shipped in a few days, also a large collection of minerals and specimens of the forest trees.

A Conservative demonstraeion is to be held at Moncton, N.B., on the 6th of November. Addresses will be delivered by Hon. John Costigan, Sir Charles Tupper, Hon. J. A. Ouimet and Controller Wallace. A number of meetings will in all likelihood be held in Nova Scotia.

Hugh Sutherland is in the city on Hudson Bay railway business.

In the Exchequer Court yesterday judgment in favor of the plaintiffs in the case of Gilbert v. Regina was rendered. Gilbert Bros. were contractors for Galops Rapids, and while their work was in progress were compelled to excavate more material than their contract called for owing to the nature of the soil. The amount of the judgment was $149,981, with interest at 4 per cent. This, with costs, will aggregate $200,000. Over $1,000,000 has been spent already on the work in dispute.

L. S. Hughson on "The present opportunity." The convention accepted with great heartiness an invitation to hold its next meeting at Montreal in May next.

The Perraults at Penetang.

PARRY SOUND, Oct. 24.—The steamer "Manitou" arrived here last evening from Penetanguishene with the two Perrault brothers, who had evaded the detectives at Moon River last week. They were accompanied by Detective Greer and Albert Greer, a constable of this town. It appears that after getting away from Moon River the Perraults went to their home at Penetanguishene and remained around there in hiding until pounced upon by Detective Greer. When being laid hold of they made no resistance. They had evidently intended clearing out as their boat was provisioned and ready for sailing.

THE RULING MARKETS.

TORONTO, Oct. 23, 1894.

On the street 300 bushels of wheat sold at 53 for white and 51 for red; 6,000 of barley at 42 to 48, 100 of peas at 55 1-2, 800 of oats 31 to 32, and a load of buckwheat at 45. Outside prices were unchanged.

Grand Trunk return of traffic for week ending October 20, 1894—Passenger train earnings, 1894, $125,463; 1893, $204,541: freight train earnings, 1894, $273,679; 1893, $272,439. Total earnings, 1894, $399,142; 1893, $476,980; decrease, 1894, $77,838.

Except for a few independent fluctuations the New York stock market hardly stirred. These individual movements, however, were not uninteresting. Nothing more characteristic of the market could be imagined than the fact that despite the rather noteworthy legal victory of the Reading management hardly a share of the stock was dealt in on the market throughout the day. The advance in sterling rates did not affect this apathy. The actual rates were well up to the figure under which last Saturday's half million gold shipment was made.

A PRINTER'S ILLS.

A Brantford Compositor has Diabetes—He Drops 40 Pounds in Weight in a Short Time—How He Was Cured.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 15.—Thos Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier in this city, has seen some ups and down in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr. Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six boxes worked a complete cure. Mr. Hazelhurst is to-day better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

S. P. SMITH, of Towanda, Pa., whose constitution was completely broken down, is cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He writes:

"For eight years, I was, most of the time, a great sufferer from constipation, kidney trouble, and indigestion, so that my constitution seemed to be completely broken down. I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and took nearly seven bottles, with such excellent results that my stomach, bowels, and kidneys are in perfect condition, and, in all their functions, as regular as clock-work. At the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, my weight was only 129 pounds; I now can brag of 159 pounds, and was never in so good health. If you could see me before and after using, you would want me for a traveling advertisement. I believe this preparation of Sarsaparilla to be the best in the market to-day."

Buy all our shoes at McNaughton's.

MOLLY is a sweet, sensible little woman—economical, too—always buys what she can get the best value for her money.

FOR MYSELF, I used to buy my shoes down town, but I dropped into McNAUGHTON'S to see if he was selling as cheap as the big George Street stores. Bought three pair quicker than scat.

THE BABY, well, the kid wouldn't wear a shoe that didn't come from McNAUGHTON'S. Is never troubled with croup.

VIOLETS.

Among what Time has left me petals pale,
A bunch of scentless violets; long ago
I plucked them dewy, wore them 'mid the glow
One harvest afternoon; their graces frail
Had fled forever ere an evening tale
Of sweet first-love o'erwhelmed me, even so
I kept them dearest of the flowers that blow,
And yet their keeping was of no avail.
E'en as I gaze, the breath of life is given
To joy long dead, first felt in twilight hours,
And tingling memories wake the living past;
So may it be when dawn shall rise in heaven,
Life's faded treasures bloom like morning flowers,
And drooping hope be garlanded at last.

A BIRD-HUNTING PIG.

He Was as Reliable as Any Pointer Dog in the Field.

We call pigs stupid creatures. This is not fair. They are really as intelligent as the majority of domestic animals, but the lives we allow them are too short and their opportunities too few for them to show their abilities to advantage. The pig of which I have more particularly to tell was by no means a handsome specimen, but what she wanted in beauty she made up in talent.

As a baby pig she belonged to a person named Toomer, and she was reared with a family of young pointer puppies. She took kindly to her playfellows, and when they became old enough to follow the keeper in his walks she too would come trotting and grunting after. When Mr. Toomer began to train his young charges for their work of finding and pointing out game there was danger that piggy might make mischief. Put the keeper would not leave her shut up at home. He had, he said, broken many dogs as obstinate as pigs, and could surely break a pig that was so much more tractable than the rest of her kind. So he taught her to "back," that is, to stand perfectly still whenever a dog had found game and was pointing at it. To teach her this he used both rewards and punishments; when she did wrong he pelted her with tiny stones, for he could not catch her and chastise her as he did naughty puppies, and when she behaved herself well he had always barley meal pudding in his pocket for her.

But this was not all. He discovered that piggy, like many other pigs, had a keen sense of smell. She learned to scent the game, and point at it for herself; but not quite like a dog. A pointer dog when he has found game stands generally with one of his forepaws held up till his master comes to him. Piggy, as soon as she was sure that she had found a partridge or a hare or a rabbit, would drop on her knees and so remain for five minutes if necessary. Unfortunately before her schoolmaster had time to teach her any further accomplishments he died. His widow sent piggy to a man with whom she lived for three years. But, alas, piggy did not escape the common doom of pigs. In the end she was shut in a sty, fattened, and made into bacon, as all her ancestors had been before her.—Chicago Times.

THE LAND OF "PRETTY SOON."

I know of a land where the streets are paved
With the things which we meant to achieve,
It is walled with the money we meant to have saved,
And the pleasures for which we grieve.
The kind words unspoken, the promises broken
And many a coveted boom
Are stowed away there in that land somewhere—
The land of "Pretty Soon."

There are uncut jewels of possible fame
Lying about in the dust,
And many a noble and lofty aim
Covered with mould and rust;
And O! this place, while it seems so near,
Is farther away than the moon,
Though our purpose is fair, yet we never get there—
The land of "Pretty Soon."

The road that leads to that mystic land
Is strewn with pitiful wrecks,
And the ships that have sailed for its shining strand
Bear skeletons on their decks.
It is farther at noon than it was at dawn,
And further at night than at noon;
O, let us beware of that land down there—
The land of "Pretty Soon."

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

A Great Battle

Is continually going on in the human system. The demon of impure blood strives to gain victory over the constitution, to ruin health, to drag victims to the grave. A Remarkable Event.

An event which has been the talk of the town for some weeks is the cure of Mr. Edward White, whose sufferings from Salt Rheum (Eczema) were well known. Mr. White's statement is as follows:

For 12 years previous to the last few months I have been a sufferer of the worst kind from Salt Rheum. I tried twelve different doctors, besides many patent medicines but received no benefit, but gradually became worse. Last January I was advised to try B. B. B. by the postmaster here. I soon perceived a decided change for the better, and it only took six bottles to make a complete cure.

EDW. WHITE, Victoria Corner, N.B.

Mr. J. B. Bowser, Merchant; Mr. Jas. W. Boyer, Manufacturer, and Mr. Thos. W. Letson, J. P., can certify to the truth of the above statement.

PHYSICIANS FAILED

BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. Three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

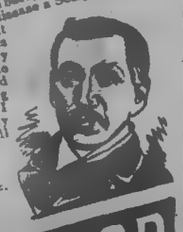
A SCALY ERUPTION

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.



GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured, by which I have been a sufferer for one year with the best physicians in the land; such as Consul Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Caticura Remedies, but all to no good. I tried other remedies, but they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

What Mr. Haycock Said.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 23.—Mr. Haycock, M.P.P., leader of the Patrons, says the published reports of his Glengarry speech were incorrect. He did not give, he says, expression to annexation sentiments. He said that during the past year Canadian farmers have been watching tariff legislation at Washington, the Wilson bill, more closely than they have watched affairs at Ottawa, and they have received benefits from the lowering of the duty on hay, horses, barley and eggs.

Mr. Fred Davis Killed.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—Mr. W. H. Davis, night editor at the Stereotype Plate Co. received a despatch from Palmerston yesterday evening saying that his brother, Frederick Davis, yardmaster at that town, had been killed while coupling cars. Deceased was 25 years of age. He leaves a wife but no children. Mr. W. H. Davis left for Palmerston at midnight.

Settlers Wanted in Northern Ontario.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—The Ontario Government will issue another pamphlet dealing with the resources of Muskoka and Nipissing, and pointing out the advantages for settlers who desire a cheap and profits ble investment in farm lands. Mr. Avern Pardoe, at one time an editorial writer on a Reform newspaper, has been selected to compile the information.

G. T. R. Conductors Aroused.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—Grand Trunk conductors are dissatisfied at the new order of things, which gives them a different run every day. The cause of the change is assigned by the men to be the trial now in progress in Montreal, and they resent the new order as an imputation cast on their characters. It is said that meetings will be held here and in Montreal and that something serious may be the outcome.

The Hartley Murder Case.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 23.—This city was crowded yesterday with farmers from the township of Burford, who came in anticipating the commencement proceedings in the Hartley murder trial. They are disappointed, as Mrs. Maria Hartley will not be taken from the county jail until ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

A Hunter's Terrible Blunder.

BARRIE, Ont., Oct. 23.—While out deer hunting in the Vespera swamp Robert Foster mistook two brothers named Tomlin for a deer and shot them both. One of the brothers, it is thought, cannot recover. Several of the buckshot entered his side. The other brother had two fingers shot off and was wounded in the arm.

Death of Prof. Carpmael.

TORONTO, Oct. 25.—Mr. Charles Carpmael, M. A., F. R. S. C., F. R. A. S, director of the Magnetic Observatory, Toronto and the Meteorological Service of Canada, died on Saturday in the south of France, where he had gone for the purpose of benefiting his health.

Closing Sugar Refineries.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—The Franklin sugar refinery will soon shut down for two or three weeks. This action is said is rendered necessary by the present congested condition of the sugar market. The Spreckels refinery is now closed and the McCahan refinery, the only one which is operated independently of the sugar trust has recently been running on one-third time.

Bush Fires Near Akron.

AKRON, O., Oct. 23.—For 48 hours a fierce fire has been raging west of this city. It started in a swamp but has spread into the highlands and 700 acres of timber and farming land have been burned over. The damage already done will amount to $45,000. All day Sunday, last night, and today men and women have been fighting the flames.

Suit After Seven Years.

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.—The case of the Bank of Hochelaga against M. Shallow, publisher of the Moniteur de Commerce, is up for hearing before a jury. The bank claims $50,000 damages for an article published seven years ago, at the time of the Central Bank failure, accusing the Hochelaga and Jacques Cartier Banks of having passed Central Bank bills on the public, knowing the bank to be in trouble.

THE RULING MARKETS.

TORONTO, Oct. 23, 1894.

On the street 150 bushels of wheat sold at 53c for white, 51c for red and 50c for goose; 2,500 of barley at 42c to 48c, and 500 of oats at 31c to 31 1-2c. Outside prices were unchanged.

The London stock markets were idle yesterday on account of Jewish holidays. The tone, however, was better, led by the rise in consols. Paris keeps firm and absorbs stocks, and this induces a calmer feeling all around amid the various political rumors. Americans were firm.

Prices in the New York stock market continued virtually unchanged. Neither the European situation nor the course of sterling exchange gave the cue for local operations. So far the signs are certainly indicative that the stock market fright over the Russian uncertainty has run its course. It will perhaps be remembered that even the assassination of the older Czar in 1881 failed to upset the markets. No gold was ordered for to-morrow's steamers.

At East Liberty sheep receipts were liberal. Extra, $3 to $3.10; good, $2.90 to $2.60; fair, $1.60 to $1.90; common, 50c to $1; yearling, $2 to $3; lambs, $2 to 3.60.

That the hog trade in the Toronto market is assuming large proportions is shown by the fact that last week the number brought in and sold beat all previous records by a large increase. The total number of hogs reached 7,694. Over 3,000 hogs were brought in on Friday and Saturday. The last highest record in one week was a month or so ago, when the number reached 6,406. The number of cattle last week were 3,075, and of sheep there were 5,442.

There is no better medicine for family use than Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Their sugar-coating makes them easy and even agreeable to take, and as they contain no calomel or other injurious drug, they are perfectly safe for patients of any age.

How Coolness Saved a Panic.

"The presence of mind displayed by the members of a small theatrical troupe who were playing in a frame building in one of the mining towns of Colorado last winter struck me as being almost heroic," said Clement Sawyer, of Cincinnati. "I had struck the town on business and to pass away an hour in the evening had looked into the little hall to see a travelling company give a representation of "The Danites." The performance was by no means bad and I was getting quite interested in the adventures of the heroine, when all at once I noticed the stage manager beckon the star to the screens which served as wings. He whispered something hurriedly and a second later the star fell heavily on the stage as though in a faint. The curtain was rung down and the stage manager, coming to the front, stated that owing to the sudden and dangerous illness of the leading actor the performance could not go on. A free entertainment would be given on the following evening to make up for the shortening of the play. The audience began to file out quietly and the hall was nearly half empty when a burst of fire came through the curtain. The shanty, for it was little more, had caught fire behind the scenes and the stage manager's idea was to get out the bulk of the audience before a panic set in. He succeeded so well that, although, of course, the building was burned to the ground, no one was hurt and the men who had been cheering the actors a few minutes before helped to save adjoining buildings by stretching wet blankets over the roofs."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Finesse.

Old man Sam was sitting one morning in front of his cabin enjoying the warmth of the sun, while his two little grandsons played about his feet.

Just then two young sons of his former master, who were visiting in the neighborhood, strolled up to have a chat with Sam. After talking with him awhile they handed him a bag of tobacco, and a handful of cigars, and were about to leave when they observed the children, and one of them asked whose they were.

"Dem's my gran'sons, Mimy's boys," replied Sam.

A sudden thought seemed to come to him as he looked at the young men, and a crafty look crept over his face as he added.

"Dey's named after you an' Mars' Andrew, Mars' Milton, 'cause dey's twins, jes' like you is."

The brothers commented on the fine looks of the children and their wonderful difference in size, for twins.

"One twin is generally bigger'n t'er one," explained Sam.

The young men smiled and gave each child a quarter as they left.

They had scarcely turned the corner of the cabin when they saw, through a crack, Sam take the coins from the children, look at them, and with a grunt of disappointment at what he considered the small return of his artifice, drop them in his own pocket.

"Mimy," he called to his daughter, standing in the door, "you call dem chillens Sam and Jake, same es you always done. Dey ain't no two-bit chillen. Hit's wuth er dollar ter change dey names, an' I had to make 'em twins, too."—M. E. S. in Kate Field's Washington.

New Metal Process.

A method lately patented in England by Mr. R. A. Hadfield is described as follows: A heat of ordinary steel is made in any convenient manner; this steel is preferably low in carbon. The steel is then transferred to a ladle. Another ladle is hung from a Denison suspended weighing machine, and has poured or placed into it the necessary quantity of molten or heated ferro manganese of suitable percentage, according to the percentage required in the steel to be produced. There is then added to this as much of the ordinary steel as will increase the weight of the contents to that of the required quantity of manganese steel. In this way thorough admixture may be effected, but, if desired, there may be additional stirring. The admixture will then be ready for pouring into ingots or castings.

THE RING.

There is now $17,500 posted on account of the match between Fitzsimmons and Corbett. Corbett has put $10,000 in Al Smith's hands to be turned over to Phil Dwyer when the proper time comes. Fitzsimmons put up $1,000 at the meeting in New York, and added $1,500 to it last Monday. The Florida Athletic Club has posted $5,000 towards its $41,000 purse.

Thus the match, which is for a total prize of $61,000, stands.

The Florida authorities may or may not prevent the fight. That cute little figure. Both the New Orleans clubs can, and will, if they are given the chance, pay nearly or as much for the event as the Florida organization. There is plenty of time ahead, and if the match is honestly made by the men it will be fought.

Corbett's manager is authority for the statement that the Olympic Club of New Orleans tried to mortgage its building at 8 per cent in order to raise enough money to make a front for the fight. The Auditorium Club was all right and had the money, but the Florida Athletic Club made the highest bid.

In the betting, which will begin as soon as the public considers the match on, Corbett will be a 3 to 1 favourite, and naturally so. Fitz has whipped all his men. But few have been real good men. The good ones have been naturally outclassed by the Cornishman's abnormal physical proportions. The old bit of wisdom about a good big one being being better than a less big good one by his extra pounds, is one that applies all about life, and ought especially to apply to Corbett and Fitzsimmons fit and in the ring. Here are two comparative measurements of the two men taken when they were in training:

Features.	Corbett.	Fitzimmons.
Age	28	32
Weight	188	168
Height	6 ft 1¼ in	6 ft. 1¼ in.
Reach	29½	29½
Chest	38	39
Thigh	21	20
Calf	14	14
Biceps	14½	13½
Forearm	11½	11½

These statistics show Corbett to be younger, heavier by twenty pounds, taller by an inch, and in fact bigger in almost every way.

Fitzsimmons thus meets his physical superior. There is nothing in the record of either man that shows Corbett to be less clever, quick or courageous than Fitzsimmons. Perhaps, for his weight, Fitzsimmons is the harder hitter of the two, but even this is uncertain. If it were not Corbett's extra size would at least offset it. No wonder Fitzsimmons is considered to have less than one chance in four.

If modern pugilism ever got an event of more interest than this match it cannot be recalled. The men are the premiers of their age, have had wonderful fighting careers, and are better than the average pugilists in all ways. Even though badly balanced the match gets together all that is supreme in modern prize-ring skill and success, and its preliminaries and result will be of deep interest to some 50,000,000 people, of which not one fifth know or care anything about the unclean and uncouth game of fisticuffs as operated for profit.

LOON LAKE LACONICS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mr. Jas. H. Couch is the guest of his brother, Mr. Moses Couch, for the hunting season.

A number of friends are visiting at the residence of J. L. Winters for a few days' hunting.

Mr. H. L. Prouty and family and Mr. H. Graham spent Sunday at Island Bay.

Mr. Albert Woodbeck and a party from Seymour township are in the vicinity enjoying a few days' hunting. Game is reported to be plentiful around here this fall.

Quite a number of our young men left for the north shore on Saturday to work in the lumber woods, among whom we noticed Messrs B. Woods, A. Tanner, H. Doxsee, C. Tanner and others.

Several of our young people attended the party given at Mr. H. S. Prouty's a few nights ago, and spent a pleasant evening to the exhilarating music furnished by Mr. C. B. Hawley's orchestra.

Another pleasant evening was spent at the residence of Mr. Joseph Woodbeck's during the week.

It is with regret that we chronicle the double bereavement of Mr. and Mrs. A. Clapperton, occasioned by the sudden death of their two youngest children. The sorrowing parents have the sympathy of the entire community.

The Rev. Mr. Harding, of Apsley, delivered a lengthy discourse in No. 7 school house on Sunday.

On the afternoon of Oct. 20th, at the residence of Mr. C. S. Prouty, Island Bay, Mr. Wallace H. Elmhirst was married to Miss Mary E. Woods, daughter of Mr. Thos. Woods. Miss Sarah Elmhurst was bridesmaid, and Mr. Chas. Prouty officiated as groomsman. Quite a number of their friends were present and all joined in wishing them many years of that happy life which is eventually before them. We understand they will make their residence in Clanricard.

With regret we hear that Mrs. Jas. Woodbec is on the sick list, owing to a slight accident occurring while out driving with Miss H. Graham, a few days since.

Mr. Thos. Tanner had the carpenters engaged making some repairs to his house last week.

There has been a certain green canoe seen making its way up the lake several times lately, and everybody is wondering what it means.

Miss H. Graham has been engaged as teacher in No. 5 S. S. for another year. She gave excellent satisfaction during the last two terms.

SELWYN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The annnual entertainment given by the Selwyn Methodist Sunday School, on Friday evening, was a success. Our esteemed pastor, Rev. Mr. Clare, efficiently occupied the chair. The superintendent, Mrs. W. C. Manning, the organist, Miss Roseborough, a host in herself, and the choir deserve great praise for the excellent programme provided, the selections being very appropriate and well rendered. The younger members of the school, in their songs, recitations and dialogues, exhibited talents, which rightly used, will ennoble and make useful their lives. The piece of vocal music, kindly given by Miss Udy, of Bridgenorth, was a treat, while the address of our younger pastor, Rev. Mr. Green, was filled with advice, which, from his high standard of living, we know is not mere theory. The speaker of the evening, the Rev. Mr Rae, of Peterborough, through illness was unable to be present, furnished an able substitute in the Rev. Mr. Limbert, of Lakefield, whose words of helpfulness and encouragement we shall long remember. This year, as formerly, the proceeds are to be given to the missionary cause.

Drew on the Sultan.

A large operator and speculator of St. Louis, whose account with one friendly bank had often been temporarily overdrawn, wanted $10,000 once for a certain deal, his balance in bank at the time being less than $100. The cashier suggested that he should draw upon someone not too near to St. Louis. Smith said he did not know whom to draw upon. "Oh, anyone," said the obliging cashier, "as long as the party is far enough away—that will give you time to turn around." Smith drew at sight for $10,000 on the Sultan of Turkey. The draft was duly forwarded by the bank, reaching New York, whence it was sent to a London correspondent. It then came into the hands of the Rothschilds, who forwarded it to their Constantinople branch, where it was duly presented for payment to the Sultan's chamberlain, the latter bringing it to his highness. "Who is this 'John Smith?'" said the Sultan. "Don't know," replied the chamberlain. "Do we owe him anything?" "No," replied the other. "Then I'll not pay it," replied his high mightiness. "One moment, if I might advise," said the astute counselor; "this draft comes through the Rothschilds, with whom we are seeking a two-million loan. Would it be safe, under the circumstances, to dishonor it?" "Pay it," said the Sultan; and it was paid, and no one was more astonished than John Smith, of St. Louis, and the quick-witted cashier.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Deaf and Dumb Mutes Wedded.

A curious wedding took place at Romford Abbey Church, England, recently, both parties being deaf and dumb. A deaf and dumb clergyman was expected to officiate, but he was prevented by illness from attending. This caused a little anxiety to the couple, and a search was made for a lawyer to give advice, so that the contract might be perfectly valid, but one could not be found. However, a clergyman, with the assistance of the bride's brother, who acted as interpreter, proceeded with the ceremony. Prayer books were placed in the hands of the bride and bridegroom, and each made signs by pointing as the passages were read. Then, when responses were required to the questions the parts were submitted in writing, and read and duly signed and witnessed. These documents will be kept in the abbey as mementoes of the wedding.

A Daylight Meteor.

A daylight meteor was seen recently near Ayrshire, Scotland. Its movement was very slow and it shone with a brilliant, intense light, which was concentrated in itself and did not leave a train behind it. It got gradually smaller and smaller, and just before disappearing broke into three or four pear-shaped portions. During its course, although the many head was brilliantly white, the little tail varied in hue, crimson and a rich ultramarine blue being most noticeable.

HAMILTON HAPPENINGS.

The Howell Suicide—Murphy Must Go To Chicago—Hamilton Bridge Co. Assigns.

HAMILTON, Oct. 24.—An inquest into the death of Carson Howell, who shot himself, while resting on his mother's grave was held at Jerseyville when the jury found that the deceased came to his death by a pistol shot fired by his own hand while he was in a state of mental depression caused by financial and domestic troubles.

At the conclusion of the extradition trial of Cornelius F. Murphy, ex-commission merchant of Chicago before Judge Muir, the Judge intimated that he must direct that Murphy be extradited to Chicago to stand trial there on the charges against him.

The Hamilton Bridge Co'y has assigned to C. S. Scott, official assignee. The immediate cause of the assignment was a judgment for $10,009 obtained by A. T. Wood, one of the directors against the Company. A meeting of the creditors will be held on Monday next.

Hon. N. Clarke Wallace will be in Hamilton on Saturday and Monday next to hold a conference with merchants and manufacturers in regard to tariff question on which they may desire to consult him.

VILLIANOUS, IF TRUE.

A Sad, Strange Case of Domestic Trouble Before the Toronto Courts.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—The sensation that was created some time ago by the two unsuccessful attempts of Nathaniel Hutchinson, a machinist of Richmond street west, to have his wife incarcerated in an asylum was revived by legal proceedings that were taken at Osgoode Hall yesterday morning when Mrs. Hutchinson's solicitors began suit against the husband for alimony.

Mrs. Hutchinson's story is that her husband told her that she was to be taken to the asylum, and if she did not go willingly she would be dragged by the hair. After that she determined to break the furniture so that no other woman could enjoy the little home she had made, and after that to kill herself. She says she would have committed suicide had not the sight of her children prevented her.

Sunday School Workers Convene.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 24.—The Sabbath School Association of Ontario opened its twenty-ninth annual convention in the Bridge street Methodist church yesterday. Mr. Jacobs, from Chicago, and Miss Vella, Massachusetts, who are among the best known Sunday school workers in the world will be present. Mr. and Mrs. Blight, from Toronto, will conduct the singing. Messrs. G. Anderson, W. H. Gordon, Rev. J. Bennet, R. J. Graham, G. H. Elliott, Rev. J. Smith and P. Moore were named as the nomination communication. Reports were made from districts, namely, Dufferin, Peel, Halton, Dundas, Prescott, Grenville, Port Hope. Rev. W. Patterson, of Toronto, delivered a fine address on the forces of the twentieth century.

No Carnival at Quebec.

QUEBEC, Oct. 24.—At a meeting of the carnival committee, held at the city hall yesterday, it was decided not to have a carnival this winter, in order to give Ottawa all possible chance for its carnival. The board of directors has been maintained, so as to organize a grand carnival for next year. Preparations will be started early in the spring, so as to secure an unparalleled success.

Stole From James Livingstone, M. P.

NEW HAMBURG, Ont., Oct. 24.—William Layno, the tramp postage stamp vender, was arrested on the G. T. R. track west of Shakespeare by Constable Fraser. He was brought before a justice of the peace here and pleaded guilty of breaking into James Livingstone, M. P.'s office, Baden, and stealing about $6 worth of postage stamps. He was sent to Berlin jail. At first this man was counted as a Keith murder suspect.

Sickles Still In It.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Gen. Sickles has not withdrawn from the Congressional race, as stated early yesterday afternoon. It is the general opinion, however, that he and Mr. Walsh are slated to withdraw in the interests of harmony. F. T. Adams offered on the stock exchanges yesterday to bet $10,000 to $8,000 that Morton would have 25,000 plurality over Hill.

All is in Readiness.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Prof. George Forbes, electrical engineer of the Cataract Construction Company, is here to superintend the placing of dynamos, one of which will be here in a few days. There is nothing to do but to put this dynamo on the bed that is ready for it, connect it with the shaft and turn on the water.

Fire in Collingwood.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. 24.—Another fire broke out yesterday morning in the Toronto House at about two o'clock and nearly destroyed the main buildings. A number of people were sleeping and had difficulty in saving themselves. Most of the furniture was destroyed. Total loss $8,000 insured for $1,350.

Bradford Fall Fair.

BRADFORD, Ont., Oct. 24.—The attendance at the Bradford fall fair, which opened yesterday, was better than ever before on the first day. The exhibit in the Hall is the best ever made in this place and totally eclipses all former efforts. The speeding in the ring attracted a large crowd and gave general satisfaction.

He Was Not Arnold.

ESSEX, Oct. 24.—A suspicious looking character giving his name as Chas. Ennis, of Cincinnati, was arrested here on suspicion of being George Arnold, the man who escaped jail from Whitby after murderously murdering a turnkey last week. Upon investigation it was proven that he was not Arnold.

"Dr." Franke Suicided.

NEW HAMBURG, Ont., Oct. 24.—The body of "Dr." Franke, a medicine peddlar reported to have suddenly disappeared from here, was found in the river yesterday. Coroner Bowlby, of Berlin, was notified. An inquest was held, and a verdict of suicide by drowning was rendered.

The Report Lacks Confirmation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—No news has been received in Washington regarding the reported mobilization of Mexican and Guatemalan troops on the boundary between those countries, although such a movement would not occasion surprise at the respective legations.

St. Louis Out on Bail.

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.—Emmanuel St. Louis, the Curran bridge contractor, was brought up before Judge Dugas yesterday, charged with defrauding the Government. He pleaded not guilty and was remanded. Bail was accepted in $10,000.

HIS NECK IN DANGER

It Looks as if Almeda Chattelle is Jessie Keith's Murderer.

STRONG CASE FOR THE CROWN

Mrs. MacLeod Identifies the Contents of the Valise as Her Property—Prisoner Admits Having the Clothing in His Possession Before the Murder.

LISTOWEL, Oct. 25.—Immediately it became known that the man who had been captured at Erin, and whose description tallied so closely with the description of the man with the valise wanted for the fiendish murder of Jessie Keith in Elma township was coming in on the train from Palmerston the excitement rose to fever heat.

When Chattelle was searched the most important find was a receipt showing that he had purchased recently at St. Mary's a pair of overalls, which may be the cottonade ones discovered near the scene of the murder. The St. Mary's merchant, whose name has not been divulged, was notified by the police last night.

STRATFORD, Oct 25.—There is now no reasonable doubt but that the murderer of Jessie Keith is safe in Stratford jail. For an hour yesterday morning Government Detective Murray, Constable Woods and several witnesses from Listowel and Ailsa Craig were closeted with Crown Attorney Idington in his office.

From there they proceeded directly to the county jail, where Almeda Chattelle is confined. As a result of this conference Chattelle will be arranged on a charge of murder as soon as Police Magistrate O'Loane returns from a shooting expedition in Muskoka.

The all-important black valise and its contents, the white petticoat wrapped about the throat of the murdered girl, the parcel dropped by Chattelle when first arrested, the woman's garments found on his person, the brush and comb, were all identified by Mrs. MacLeod, of Ailsa Craig, as her property. This alone is regarded as sufficient to hang Chattelle, but there are other points that connect him with the crime. The walking stick left near Mrs. MacLeod's house was exhibited and Chattelle identified as its previous owner. The boy who gave it to the murderer also testified.

Even without the identification of the cottonade overalls which has not yet been effected, there is enough to make it a hanging matter.

Mrs. MacLeod arrived from Ailsa Craig at 5 p.m. and after a few hours' rest was taken to the Crown Attorney office, when all the exhibits of the crime were displayed. In detail Mrs. MacLeod identified everything presented to her. She is a thrifty housewife and many of the articles were of her own manufacture. Others she had worn for some time, and she was quite positive about them. The black valise with one end somewhat battered was first shown her and recognized. Two black cashmere skirts, a pair of white woollen stockings, a black bonnet, satin trimmed, with jet and black feathers, were all displayed and identified.

The Crown Attorney reserved his coup de theatre to the last. The little group held its breath while a carefully guarded parcel was untied and the white petticoat with the gory stains of the tender victim was exposed. "It's mine," exclaimed Mrs. MacLeod. "I made it myself, and should know it." There was no doubt about it. The petticoat was a plain white skirt with a deep hem and one tuck. About six inches from the bottom there is a row of deep insertion.

After this and something like a sixth act to the tragedy was the production of the parcel dropped by Chattelle on the railroad track near Erin. The black cashmere basque that it contained, the black brush and brown horn comb were all claimed by Mrs. MacLeod. The girl's black stockings in the valise were not hers. Mrs. MacLeod also identified a walking-stick shown her as one discovered near her house after the theft of the satchel. The house she said had been entered through a cellar window, evidently broken by a stick.

Angus McLean, engineer for Gunn & Co., of Ailsa Craig, then stepped forward. He identified the stick as one he had seen in the possession of Chattelle on the afternoon of October 3rd, the day of the Northern Fair. He discovered Chattelle lying in the long grass about 25 yards from the railroad track and not far from Mrs. MacLeod's residence. He told the tramp to move on, which he did sulkily.

Twelve year old Gordon McEwan, of Ailsa Craig, a bright little fellow, testified that he had given the cane shown to him to a tramp on October 2nd, when he met him near the fair grounds.

"That's the very man I gave it to," said Gordon when he saw Chattelle at the jail.

The visit to the jail still further riveted the chain about Chattelle. Angus McLean recognized him as the suspicious tramp who was basking in the sunshine; Gordon McEwan added his weighty recognition. Robert Morris, of Listowel, saw the prisoner near Britton at 10.45 a.m. on Friday. At that time he carried a valise. When he met him an hour later, and a couple of miles nearer Listowel, he had no portmanteau. Mr. Foley, implement agent, Stratford, recognized his walk, but could not recall his features, as he had not seen the face distinctly. Featherstone Smith was positive that Chattelle was the man seen by him near Listowel on the day of the murder.

Mrs. MacLeod's work was not yet done. The black cashmere jacket worn by Chattelle as an undershirt was likewise identified, as was also the black tamoshanter, the tassel of which was found in the black valise. The drawers did not belong to her.

Under the questioning of the Crown Attorney and Detective Murray, Chattelle gave a very confused story. During the interview he sat cross-legged and quite impassive on a table near the window, overlooking the prison yard. He still stuck to it that he had found the valise between Lucan and St. Mary's. He carried it, he admitted, until Friday night, when he buried it. Where he was that night he didn't know. Of where he buried the satchel he was likewise ignoran'.

There are other important facts known to the Crown. The knife found on the prisoner has a razor-like edge. It has been recently cleaned. But between the hinge of the blade and shaft are some c pperish stain as of dried blood, on which an expert will be asked to pronounce.

LUCAN, Ont., Oct. 25.—Mr. Joseph Hall, farmer, says Almeda Chattelle left his place at 11 o'clock on Sunday morning, the 14th instant, after having worked there a week. The day he arrived he had a black valise. Walker Jell, a brother-in-law of Mr. Hall, opened the valise and saw the woman's skirt and other articles of female apparel therein. Mr. Jell had heard about the stolen valise in Ailso Craig, and, suspecting the prisoner, suggested a trip to Ailsa Craig. The man became alarmed and left the place the following day. He said he was on his way to Toronto from the mines and the clothes belonged to his wife. Both Mr. Hall and Mr. Jell can readily recognise this man.

NEWS FROM HAMILTON.

Proposal to Connect Dundas With the T., H. & B.—An Old Resident Dead.

HAMILTON, Oct. 25.—The Hamilton Bridge Company's works are being carried on under an arrangement with Assignee C. S. Scott, and it is probable that at the creditors' meeting on Monday next arrangements for the carrying on of the business will be made.

B. B. Osler, Q. C., has written to the mayor of Dundas proposing that for a bonus of $35,000 he will convert the Hamilton and Dundas Street Railway into an electric road, with rails and roadbed heavy enough for steam trams, his idea being to run freight trains from the junction with the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo road to Dundas.

A telegram from Buffalo announces the sudden death of ex-Health Inspector Ford of Hamilton. Mr. Ford has been a resident of Hamilton for over forty-five years and was visiting his son in Buffalo.

SAD DEATH IN OTTAWA.

Patrick Tobin, a Well-Known Horseman, Dies From Alcholic Poisoning.

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.—Pat. Tobin, at one time one of the best horseman in the this district, was found dead yesterday morning in Kirby's drug store in this city. Tobin is known to Toronto and Montreal horsemen, having spent most of last summer between these cities. He was about 35 years of age. It is thought he may have been tampering with some of the bottles in the store in search for whisky. An inquest was held and a verdict of alcholic poisoning brought in.

The funeral of the late John Ahern, of Duke street, who met such a tragic death while hunting on the Petewawa last Sunday, took place yesterday afternoon and was very largely attended.

Baptist Convention.

ST. THOMAS, Oct. 25.—At the morning session of the Baptist convention Rev. O. C. S. Wallace, of Toronto, gave an address, "The call of the Grand Ligne to the young Baptists of Ontario and Quebec." A paper was read by Rev. S. J. Farmer, B.A., on "The relation of our educational work to French evangelization." Sunday school work occupied a prominent place in the day's business. The annual report of the Sunday School Committee showed 34,513 scholars on the roll, 4,086 teachers and officers. During the year 1,405 scholars were added to the Church, the total number of scholars members of the Church at the present time being 6,104. A paper was read by Linus Woolverton, M.A., Grimsby, on "Sunday schools as starting points of Baptist enterprises on unoccupied fields." Mr. S. Tapscott, Brantford, read a paper on "Personal works." Messrs. Crossley and Hunter were introduced to the convention and received a very cordial reception. Each spoke briefly and Mr. Crossley sang a solo.

Death of Thos. D. Millar.

INGERSOLL, Oct. 25.—Mr. Thomas D. Millar died yesterday afternoon. Mr. Millar was well known in Oxford county and throughout Canada generally as one of the early pioneers in the cheese trade in which he has made and lost large amounts of money. When the manufacture of cheese was first commenced in Canada Mr. Millar who was at that time largely engaged as a commission merchant in the grain trade, turned his attention more particularly to cheese and was one of the first to introduce upon the English and European markets our Canadian cheese. For the past few years he has been engaged in the manufacture of the now celebrated Millars paragon cheese.

Heavy Failure at Windsor.

WINDSOR, Oct. 25.—Gillman & Barnes, the proprietors of the Des-Chree-Shos-Ka Hotel, have assigned to Robert A. Reynolds, of Windsor. A meeting of the creditors has been called for Friday next. The liabilities including the mortgage on the grounds and the hotel amount to about $84,000. The mortgage is for the sum of $77,000 and is held by Felice M. Paxton, of Detroit. The other creditors are Windsor merchants and their claims amount to about $7,000. All they can realize on is the furniture, and Mrs. Paxton has also a claim on that.

Room for Sunday Schools Up North.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 25.—At the Provincial Sunday School convention yesterday, Mr. A. Day, general secretary, read his annual report. He stated that he had attended 80 conventions and travelled 9,000 miles. Speaking of the spiritual results of the work, he said that there were 20,828 scholars who are known to be members of churches, and of these 4,000 have joined this year. Rev. J. McEwen, normal secretary, in his report directed the attention of the workers to the northwest counties of Ontario, where there was much need of work.

SHE WANTED FREEDOM

Caleb Out of the Way Mrs. Hartley Would Marry Ling.

TRIAL BEGINS AT BRANTFORD

The Prisoner "Talked" to Mrs. Allen on Christmas Day and Made Statements Which Are Now Being Used Against Her—Other Testimony.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 25.—The trial of Maria Hartley for the murder of her husband, Caleb Hartley by poisoning at New Durham on Sunday, May 13, 1894, commenced yesterday before His Honor, Mr. Justice MacMahon. The case promises to be a lengthy one.

The prisoner, who was looking rather pale and nervous, took her seat in the box, and in a clear voice replied: "I am not guilty."

Mr. Lount, Q. C., for the Crown, commenced the statement of the case. He said the Crown would prove that prisoner had three distinct motives for committing the murder, any one of which would be sufficient in itself to convict. There were:

First, The unpleasant marital relations always subsisting between the parties;

Second, The illicit connection between Mrs. Hartley and the young man Henry Ling;

Thirdly, The fact that several insurance policies had been effected, and recently made over in her name.

The statement of Henry Louis Ling that prisoner had given the deceased poison, and that she told him so, would be borne out by circumstances and independent testimony. He believed he would be able to convince the jury that beyond all question the prisoner not only had a motive to kill her husband, but was the only person who had one.

Mrs. Sarah Allen, wife of William Allen, New Durham, was the first witness. She said: "I have known Mr. and Mrs. Hartley thirty years. Mr. and Mrs. Hartley and Fred Hartley were at my place for dinner on Christmas. Mrs. Hartley said if Caleb was out of the way she would marry Ling. She began the conversation by talking about Ling, and I asked her what she wanted to do with Ling when she had a good husband and a grown family. She said that she did not like her husband, and I told her Ling was young for her. She said she could keep him and would use him well. She frequently said she did not like her husband, and said that some years ago. I did not see her again from Christmas until after her husband's death. I know Ling by sight and I saw him between Christmas and the time of Mr. Hartley's death. I have never seen Ling and the prisoner together on the road.

The witness was cross-examined by Mr. Osler, but the learned Q C. failed to shake her testimony.

Daniel Quigg, shoemaker, of New Durham, deposed: "I can't exactly answer the question as to the relations between Mr. and Mrs. Hartley, but at certain times they were not acting as man and wife. For the last year I had very little to do with Mr. Hartley. I have heard Mrs. Hartley speak of her husband, and say that he was lazy, or something to that effect. I saw Mr. Hartley on Thursday morning after May 1 in my shop. I do not know where he had been except what he told. He did not stay over twenty minutes that morning. It seemed that his face was bloated, his eyes were puffed and he had a peculiar color of the skin. I judged from his looks that he was sick, as he shivered once in a while.

Mr. Osler objected to the evidence as to what Mr. Hartley said, and Mr. Lount argued that whatever Mr. Hartley told witness regarding his health was perfectly admissable as evidence. Cases were cited both by the counsel for the prosecution and the defence.

The next witness was Miss Nettie Quigg, daughter of the previous witness. She had spoken frequently to Mrs. Hartley of her unseemly association with the young man named Ling. He seemed to be following her closely wherever she went. He talked rudely to her at times as if he had some hold upon her. When she heard that Mrs. Hartley had gone to Hawley with Ling she was much surprised. The relations between Mr. and Mrs. Hartley were not of a cordial character. Mrs. Hartley disliked her husband and would not allow him to come near her. In her cross-examination the witness stood her ground well, and her testimony was not in any way shaken.

Catherine Woodward, of Hawley, spoke of a clandestine visit that Mrs. Hartley and Ling made to her house, and of the woman sitting on the man's lap and of other unseemly conduct for a married woman. In her cross-examination the witness was convicted of several little discrepancies. She left the stand in a fainting condition.

REVELAOION, NOT EVOLUTION.

Dr. Sexton's Definition of "Christian Ethics."

Tuesday evening the Rev. Dr. Sexton delivered his second and last lecture in the George street Methodist church, his subject being, "Christian Ethics, not an Evolution but a Revelation." The Rev. W. R. Young, B.A., presided, and conducted the opening exercises.

The learned lecturer introduced the subject by referring to the fact that modern evolution had put forward the theory that evolution was not a continued upward motion as had been previously held, but cyclical, and that therefore things would again return to the condition of chaos from which they originally sprang. Even Huxley now held this view, as had been shown in his Romanes lecture, delivered in the University of Oxford, a few months ago. The Doctor said the conclusions at which the Professor has arrived, will, I take it, be a little startling to those believers in Evolution who meet with them for the first time. They are not new, and perhaps are legitimate deductions from the hypothesis of evolution, but anyhow they show the necessity of some other sources of knowledge than those supplied by nature. In the Romanes lecture, the Professor dealt with cyclical evolution and used as an illustration, the well known nursery story 'Jack and the Beanstalk.' The process of nature he described as a mounting upwards for a time and then a turning back, and ultimately landing at the starting point. From very low forms up to the highest in the animal no less than in the vegetable kingdom—the process of life, he informed us, presented the same appearance of cyclical evolution. In the water flowing to the sea and returning to the springs; in the heavenly bodies that wax and wane; in the inexorable sequences of the ages of the life of man; and in the rise, apogee, decline and fall of dynasties, all movement, he maintained, was of a cyclical character. Thus the most distinguishing characteristic of the Kosmos, was its impermanence. In a sense no one will dispute this. It is doubtless the mode of working of the Almighty Worker in the physical universe. The bean has to fight for its existence in much the same way as the animal; and man, although possessed of intellectual powers, to which the struggle is largely transferred, has like any other organism. But it is this very struggle which Huxley attacks, in consequence of its ethical results. The cosmopletic energy working through sentient beings has given rise to pain and suffering. This "hateful product of evolution" increases in quantity and intensity with advancing grades of animal organization until it reaches its highest level in man. The Kosmic process is therefore ethically bad. Now most evolutionists have endeavoured to find a basis for the moral law in nature. Darwin endeavours to trace the whole of the faculties of man, intellectual, social and moral, to the lower animals, and thought they could all be discovered there in an immature and incipient condition. But Huxley discovers that the outcome of evolution is evil, and that one may look in vain for an ethical code in nature. Mill long ago taught the same thing as far as the physical universe is concerned. And so far, no doubt, he was right. From Huxley's point of view man is simply a part of nature, one link in the chain of physical being, and in him, not only intellect but pain and suffering have reached their culminating point. And for this no remedy appears to be forthcoming. No millennial anticipations must be encouraged, for such notions are out of harmony with evolution; and sin and sorrow are permanent factors in the life of man. The Doctor argued that there could not have been an evolution of the moral faculty in man, because no such power was found either in physical nature or in the lower animals. Prof. Drummond had recently endeavoured to show that altruism was to be seen in the lowest form of organic beings, but no scientist would support that view, nor did it accord with fact. The lowest illustration given by Drummond of the division of unicellular organism into two was not an altruistic act, for the organism would die unless such division occurred and therefore the process was self-preservative and consequently selfish. The evolution of motherhood, about which the professor made so much ado, and to which he attached so much importance, would support the position of altruism in the lower animals, for motherhood and all that arose out of it was but a phase in the struggle of life. How were then were the elements of brought into the earth? Only by the struggle for existence, only by the doing of what we must consider evil that good may come. And what terrible cruelties this subtill reach after "motherhood" involved! We have all heard of the (to us) heartless suffering perpetuated by the Hymenoptera, for example, in struggling up to the higher idea of motherhood. Some of us may have seen, most have heard of, the Ichneumon fly, which with a powerful ovipositor alights upon a hapless caterpillar, and piercing its flesh, deposits her eggs within its larval body. Many of us have seen the caterpillar when the hour has come, and the terrible cargo of eggs she has in her body have hatched into larval Ichneumons. Carefully they eat their victim so as not to destroy its vitality, but still they eat and flourish until they are ready to enter the pupal condition. Then they gnaw their way through the skin of the caterpillar, and may be seen by scores, as wriggling "maggots" emerging from the dying caterpillar's body; and subsequently they become inactive pupæ until the imago in in each case emerges, and the young brood goes to foster to a higher point the noble idea of motherhood, by going and doing likewise. Hundreds of instances could be given of how by the fierce cruelty (to our view) of the struggle for existence motherhood secures its ends. There was no right and wrong in nature as we understand the terms. Prof. Drummond's book was of no scientific value. He taught that evolution had been out of focus and that he had put it right. The truth was that he had put it out of focus by reading into it what was not there. That was the supreme fallacy of the book. Professor Huxley had well said in an article in the Fortnightly Review:—

"I hear much of the "ethics of evolution." I apprehend that, in the broadest sense of the term "evolution" there neither is, nor can be, any such thing. The notion that the doctrine of an evolution can furnish a foundation for morals seems to me to be an illusion which has arisen from the unfortunate ambiguity of the term "fittest" in the formula, "survival of the "fittest." We commonly use "fittest" in a good sense, with an understood connotation of "best," and "best" we are apt to take in its ethical sense. But the "fittest" which survives in the struggle for existence maybe, and often is, the ethically worst."

This cuts away at one fell sweep

A VAST AMOUNT OF NONSENSE

which has clustered around this subject, and those who have written about the evolution of this or that relating to moral or spiritual things have had substantially their labour for their pains. It is not there. He who searches there for love and for righteousness will never find it. It is only for him

"Who trusted God was love indeed
And love creation's final law—
Though nature, red in tooth and claw,
With ravine, shrieked against his creed."

The moral nature of man, the lecturer argued, proved a moral governor, a responsibility for one's actions, and a life after death. And here we have the solution of the problem which the icy materialism of Huxley makes no attempt to explain. Common experience is at one with pessimism, that if God be removed and man's immortality taken away, very much of human life is a hideous, purposeless tragedy, and that in too many cases "life is not worth living." And at the sight of this tragedy, materialism shudders, which is all it can do, for the genesis of the system reaches no further. But in the face of all the evil in the universe—and the case would be the same were it ten times as great as it is, the problem cannot be solved.

Every Christian man and woman feels this, whatever the gloomy theories of pessimists may say to the contrary. Whether the facts of nature do or do not, encourage "millennial anticipations," deep down in our souls is the conviction that no evolution will explain the nature and destiny of spirit, nor the process of the law by which the soul of man is governed and controlled. There rises before our view a state to be enjoyed in the hereafter, in which all the wrongs of this world shall be righted, and beside which the tragedy of cyclical evolution with its rivers of blood and tears, will pale into insignificance and be forgotten. Man is not simply a child of earth: his birthplace is here, but his inheritance is yonder. In a world of which agnosticism knows nothing, and evolution cannot attain to, and pessimism in its black despair, derides.

Christianity has given us a perfect moral law. This is no evolution, but a revelation from God to man. Dr, Lyman Abbott, following the evolutionary fashion of the times, has given us a work on "The Evolution of Christianity," but even he does not dare to maintain that the Divine founder of that Religion was an outcome of evolution. In Him there was an admitted break in the so-called universal law. And if in His life, why not in His teaching? The most perfect standard of ethics in the literature of the world, is to be found in the Gospels. The perfection of ethics practically illustrated in a human life is seen in the character of Christ.

Now, if the human race followed Him as closely as His commands enjoin, there surely would be a millenium even upon earth. Man, it is admitted, is as yet far distant from the ethical ideal, but the ideal is there, notwithstanding. The world has seen but one Jesus, but that One is sufficient to show that there is at least no universal law of evolution, whatever materialistic pessimism may say to the contrary.

At the close of the lecture the Dr. answered a great number of questions, as on the previous evening.

A LUCKY MAN.

Laid up for Months by a Severe Form of Kidney Disease—The Simple Cure he used—He's Well Now.

THEDFORD, Oct, 22.—Some men don't know when they are in luck and some do. Albert Maithers, of this place, is one of the lucky ones who knows of his good fortune and tells about it. He says he was laid up and could do no work for months because of kidney disease. When kidney disease has such a hold on a man as that, he is in a serious condition. Mr. Maithers recognized this and used every remedy he could think of, but without getting any help until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes cured him and he is attending to his affairs once more and is as hearty and happy as ever.

In severe, lingering Coughs, all Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, and every disease that can be reached through the blood, it is the only medicine so effective that it can be guaranteed. FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, an have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose topay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

KIDNAPPED A WITNESS.

The Charge Made Again t New York Police Before the L xow Committee.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Counsel Goff startled the Lexow committee when they re-convened yesterday by saying the police had carried into execution a plot to do away with a witness who would give the most sensational testimony yet published. Mr. Goff said: "For the first time I am compelled to ask for an adjournment until 2 o'clock. I told the committee that our star witness, a woman who had paid money to high officials, had been stolen from us at the dead of night. We had her under subpœna and under surveillance in the daytime, but at midnight the police or their agents came in a carriage and stole the woman. I now tell you her name for the first time, Matilda Hermann. The police or their agents hurried her to Canada and then to the large cities of the west. Our detectives got back to the trail and finally ran her down in Chicago. She consented to come east. When the party arrived in Jersey City an outrage was committed. The police of New York got the police of Jersey City to arrest all our party on a charge of kidnapping and trumped up charges designed to detain her. The police of Jersey City even went so far as to try to get the woman to leave our detectives."

The Jersey City story is that the woman was entrapped to come east by a bogus telegram stating that her husband was at Hoboken hospital in a dangerous condition, and that when she arrived there the detectives endeavored to compel her to go to New York against her will. She resisted and a friend engaged counsel. The case came up in the Jersey City police court yesterday, counsel for the Lexow committee insisting that the woman was a fugitive from justice. She was committed to the city prison for 30 days to await extradition proceedings to compel her to return to New York. She has broken down and will likely volunteer to return without proceedings.

SERIOUS STATE OF AFFAIRS.

The U. S. War Department Asked to Protect Indian Territory

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Secretary Smith yesterday transmitted to the War Department for their information in regard to his request that troops be sent to the Indian Territory to suppress the lawlessness which prevails there, the following telegram from Agent Wisdom, at Muskogee. "The Cook gang of outlaws in force is camped at Gibson Station, eight miles from here, on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad. Believe that another hold-up is contemplated. My police force, such as I can get together, is not equal to an emergency, and Col. Crump, at Fort Smith, Ark., writes me that he has not the money to keep marshals in the field for campaign. Affairs are in a desperate condition, commerce impeded, business suspended, the people generally intimidated and private individuals robbed every day and night.

"I renew my recommendation for troops, and earnestly insist that the government, through the proper channels, take the matter in hand and protect its courts and citizens of the United States who are lawful residents in the territory. Licensed traders are especially suffering, and they are here under treaty stipulations. This state of suspense must be broken up, and prompt action is urged to save life and property."

JAPAN NOT SATISFIED.

With the Proposals for Peace—China Willing to Arrange a Settlement.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The Central News says: The mediating powers submitted further and more definite proposals for peace to China and Japan, but Japan rejected them. The Japanese government held that the opening overtures must be made direct at Hiroshima from a quarter formally accredited and empowered to make them. China was ready to conclude an armistice for peace on reasonable conditions.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—A Herald special from Shanghai says: Generals Yeh Chi-Chao and Wei Yu-Kwei, formerly commanders in Corea, have been handed over to the proper board for punishment. They will probably lose their heads. The former is charged with cowardice and with responsibility for the murder of the French missionary, Joseph Eau. General Wei is accused of extortion and cowardice. Other important officials have been arrested, and a complete re-shuffle has taken place throughout the Viceroy's provinces.

The party organization was perfected and all arrangements made as to the final revision of the voters' list.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, and after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

IS COMING!

The Attention of Every Lady and Gentlemen that has THIN HAIR or that is BALD is called to the visit of

PROF. DOREWEND

To PETERBOROUGH, who will be at the GRAND CENTRAL HOTEL, ON Thursday, Nov. 1.

There are indeed very few Ladies or Gentlemen in America but what have heard of the skill of PROF. DOREWEND as a manufacturer of Hair Goods of all styles, and there are very few places on the globe but what one or more of his styles are worn. Those that live closer to his manufacturing place, like all the Ontario cities and towns, are more fortunate than people of United States, Australia or England, and it is because he visits this place once a year, they are able to see his goods before ordering, and having then tried they see the effect his Hair Goods Coverings give to their general appearance, but his business has so rapidly grown in the last few years that he is unable to visit these places so often, for this reason. All who require these Goods should not miss the opportunity given by this visit.

ROBERT HALL.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the BEST makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

The Peterborough Delegates to the S.S. Convention.

In its notes on the Provincial Sabbath School convention now in session in Belleville, the Sun says:—"Miss Kennedy answered on behalf of Peterborough and replied that the county was well organized. They had organized into districts of three townships each. The normal work in the county was in the lead. Miss Kennedy made a capital speech and was roundly applauded." Miss Kennedy has been appointed convenor of the Primary Teachers Conference, and Mr. S. R. Armstrong, chairman of the Secretaries and Librarians.

The Christmas Number.

The December issue of the Delineator, which is called the Christmas Number, is always a notable edition of this favourite magazine, and this year it is full of unusually good things. Many of the contributions have the distinctive flavour of the season, among them being Christmas Cheer, Gifts and Giving, a Plantation Christmas and a Christmas Entertainment. In the Kindergarten Series the subject is Christmas work for the Children, and the Chapters on Venetian Iron Work and Crepe and Tissue Papers also treats of articles suitable for presentation. Barnard College (New York City) is the subject of an able paper by a graduate of '93, and there is a practical and helpful article on Photo-Negative Retouching as an Employment for Women. The initial chapter of a series on the Relations of Mother and Son opens the subject interestingly. The second instalment of The House discusses sensibly the matter of furnishing, and the continuation of What to do in Illness will be of great benefit to every mother. In the popular Tea Table Talks is found gossip about seasonable affairs. There is an article on Fur Rugs and Robes, and the newest books are noticed. New designs are shown in knitting, Netting, Tatting, Crocheting, Lace Making, etc. The subscription price of the Delineator is one dollar a year. Single copies, fifteen cents each. Address orders to Peterborough Bookstore.

For coughs, colds and bronchitis the best and safest remedy is "Madill's Pulmonic Cough Syrup." Each bottle has a positive guarantee attached to it. If it fails to cure, return empty bottle and your money will be refunded.

—The Street Railway Company had their sweeper out for a run over the line yesterday afternoon, to see that it was in good order, and ready for use when the "beautiful" arrives.

—Although it was announced that as the repairs to the Dickson raceway were completed that the electric light service would be all that could be desired last night, such was far from being the case; the light on the contrary was dim and flickering.

—While at work in the Rathbun mill in Campbellford, on Tuesday, Lumen Jordan fell upon the carrier of the "butting" saw, and would have been cut in two had not the sawyer stopped the machine in the nick of time. The saw was within two inches of Jordan when the carrier was stoped.

—The entertainment which takes place in the Y.M.C.A. rooms on Friday evening next, assumes the form of an informal meeting of the directors, and is not a public reception. Invitations have been extended to only a few who are not on the Board, but whose presence is desirable.

—Courts Peterborough and Langton, Canadian Order of Foresters, have made arrangements for the holding of their annual union concert, on the evening of Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 22nd. A meeting of the local branch of the Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers was held last evening in the Sons of England Hall. The chair was occupied by Mr. S. The local organization has now fifteen names on the membership roll and three applications for admittance are under consideration.

Sir Walter Criticised by a Country Villager.

A Campbellford citizen has the presumption in this week's Herald to severely criticize Sir Walter Scott's literary style. In speaking of "Kenilworth," he says: "There is nothing in the book to enrich or strengthen the mind. Nothing there to ennoble or dignify the character. No, but it teems with the nauseating drivellings of drunkards, the sensualities of profligates and the plottings of ruffians. Amy Robsart and her maid, Janet, are the only redeeming features in the book, and hard to find, on account of the mass of corruption one has to wade through in the search for anything good."

Myles Hamilton Married.

A despatch from Hamilton says that on Wednesday afternoon Miss Mary Alice Barker, daughter of Mr. Samuel Barker, was married to Mr. R. Myles Hamilton, of the Bank of Montreal. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents, and only the near relatives of the contracting parties were present. The Rev. Father O'Reilly officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton left for New York last evening. Mr. Hamilton, a son of the late Hon. R. Hamilton, was well known in Peterborough, where his family has lived for many years. He was an employee of the Bank of Montreal and a prominent member of the cricket club. His many friends in town will offer cordial congratulations.

ARRESTED THE WRONG MAN FOR MURDER.

The Tramp Who was Seized at Omemee is Allowed His Freedom.

(Special despatch to the Examiner.)

OMEMEE, Oct. 25th.—The suspected tramp was brought before the Reeve yesterday, but was remanded. Later on in the afternoon a reply came from the Chief of Police of Stratford, stating he was satisfied he had the right man in jail there. On this information Reeve Cornwall released the tramp from the custody of the officers. His captors and others presented him with a sum of money, decked him out with a new hat and suit, and sent him on his way rejoicing.

RIVER AND LAKE RIPLETS.

Feathers, Fur and Fin—Rod, Line and Gun.

The third annual duck supper under the auspices of the Rice Lake Fish and Hunting club, was held last evening at Mr. "Din" Corkery's summer resort, "Lakeview," Harwood, when about forty members relished the favourite dish set before them. After the ducks were disposed of the evening's entertainment opened with a speech from their worthy president, Mr. Harry Lane, Mayor of Harwood, who occupied the chair, with Capt. Tom Dixon to his right. A most enjoyable evening was spent in songs, speeches, toasts, etc., till the early hours of the morning. Mr. Lane was duly re-elected president for the ensuing year, and Sullivan O'Whaley, as captain. The guides remain the same as last year, Mr. White, secretary; "Din" Corkery, treasurer; Capt. "Bill" Johnston, past grand master, retired, but was enrolled as an honorary member. The pleasant gathering came to a close by the rendition of "God Save the Queen."

The piers at Hale's bridge are being repaired, and the steam launch Lillian is engaged in hauling timber for the work. The Lillian must have taken out her licence to do this kind of work very recently, as during the summer she did not have a licensed crew.

The water has been let into the upper portion of the raceway and the roller mills are again in full running order. The water has not yet been turned into the lower portion of the race, and consequently the cable, which crosses the river near the Otonabee bridge, is not in use.

Extensive improvements are in progress at Healy's Falls in addition to what was done there last year. Four new piers have been built on the north side of the dam, two for allowing logs to pass through and the other two for removing the stoplogs to let off the water. The work is under the supervision of Mr. J. W. Dinwoodie, and some eight or ten men men are employed thereon.

A COMPANY OF BARNSTORMERS

It Plays to Poor Houses and no Wonder —A Farce but not A Farce.

"Rip Van Winkle" was put on the boards at Bradburn's Opera House by the Baird Company last night. It was a farce, though not intended to be such by the playwright, but such a company of barnstormers would make a farce out of any play.

Baird himself took the part of "Rip," and it was a truly wonderful portrayal of that historical character which was presented. The Dutch accent would come out strong at times, and then again the audience would be inclined to think that "Rip" must have had Irish blood in his veins, as his brogue would make one's hair fairly curl. Baird himself is supposed to be the star of the company and if such breaks were made by a leading character, it can be easily imagined what the rest of the company is like.

The troupe caters to the pleasure of the peanut gallery and that portion of the Opera House was well filled, while there was not a half dozen of the front seats occupied.

The Company has played to poor houses all week and no wonder. First-class companies coming here cannot expect to receive patronage if they are preceded by such a combination as is now occupying the boards of the Opera House.

The troupe is registered at the Cavanagh House.

WITNESSES HARD TO SECURE.

One Skips to Bowmanville and the Other at Toronto.

An hotelkeeper was assessed forty dollars and costs this morning at the police court, for selling liquor during prohibited hours. The police were put to no inconsiderable trouble in summoning the witnesses. One of them named Edward Edwards "lit out" for Bowmanville after being served. He was located there and brought back.

Another witness, one Milburn, went to Toronto, but was served with a summons there. He afterwards wrote the magistrate to the effect that he couldn't come unless his railway fare was forwarded to him. The magistrate advised him to come or he would have him placed under arrest in Toronto.

The trial was almost concluded this morning when Milburn walked into the police court. The chief had already asked for a warrant for his arrest, and the magistrate remarked to him that he had just saved his bacon. For being so dilatory Milburn forfeited his witness fees.

A HEARTLESS DESERTION.

A Father Turns His Back on His Seven Little Children.

Rev. J. C. Davidson had a sad case to deal with yesterday, when his attention was called to the needs of seven little children, the oldest of whom had not attained the age of twelve years.

The mother of these poor little things is seriously ill in the hospital and their father heartlessly deserted them the other day, and left Peterborough without warning.

The names in question are withheld, as the mother is a most respectable woman, and thus the worthless brute, who deserted his helpless offspring, escapes the just retribution of the scorn of his fellowmen.

The children are now being carefully looked after and an endeavour is being made to induce the Children's Protective Society to take up the case and make further provision for the little ones.

CHILDREN BEING BROUGHT UP UNDER IMMORAL INFLUENCES

Under the Present Conditions They Will Develop Into Prostitutes and Criminals.

Mr. J. Hampden Burnham, secretary of the local society for the protection of children, has started out on a crusade against the parents of little ones, whose mode of living is detrimental to the development of morality in their offspring.

This morning, the secretary was around at police headquarters and obtained the names of seven women, who led immoral and intemperate lives and whose children were daily brought into contact with the scenes of a most revolting character. There are twenty-five little children in all, whose names are now in the hands of the secretary and an effort will be made to place them beyond the reach of the pernicious influences which now surround them.

The names of those children were gathered to gather in ten or fifteen minutes and although there are twenty-five of them on the list, the half has not been told—in fact it is known that there are fully enough children in town, whose parentage it is impossible to ascertain, to feed the local branch of the Barnardo Home here, without importing the English waifs and strays.

A call will soon be made upon the charitably disposed citizens for contributions to aid in carrying on the work of rescue in the town, and the corporation will also be asked to assume its due share of the expense, as enacted by statute.

A committee composed of representatives from the different charities in town would do well to confer with the officers of the Children's Protective Society, when a plan of the campaign, which is to be carried on, could be mapped out and the responsibility and work shared up in proportion.

A good suggestion has been proposed to the effect that a fund be raised to assist in this work of reclamation by the selling of tickets for a lecture on the subject, which might be held in one of the churches.

A short talk with the police force on the subject is most convincing of the fact that something must be done and done immediately to prevent those children from growing up into prostitutes and criminals. Many of them have attained the age of 15 or 16 years and are already developing marvellous propensities in these lines. Action quick and prompt is necessary to meet the emergency, and such action the Society for the Protection of Children proposes to take.

The Children's Enemy.

Scrofula often shows itself in early life and is characterized by swellings, abscesses, hip disease, etc. Consumption is scrofula of the lungs. In this class of disease Scott's Emulsion is unquestionably the most reliable medicine.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Tellford Celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of Their Wedding Day—A Notable Gathering of Descendants.

On Saturday last Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Tellford, Albert street, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Such a celebration had been in contemplation for some time, the guests to include friends and acquaintances, but owing to recent deaths in the family—that of a granddaughter, Ethel Foster, it was decided to include in the list of invited guests only the members of the family residing in the vicinity.

On the 20th day of October, 1844, Mr. Thos. Tellford was united in marriage at Leitholm, Beerwickshire, Scotland, to Jane, second daughter of James Ingles, whose forefathers came from the north of Scotland. This union was blessed with nine children—three sons and six daughters, three of whom are now dead; with 27 grandchildren, some of whom are passed away, one of whom was born in Rochester the very night of the golden wedding festivities, and with four great grandchildren.

The anniversary celebration was a very pleasant occasion. During the evening Mr. W. H. Foord on behalf and in the name of those of the family present as well as absent, presented Mrs. Tellford with a beautiful gold ring and brooch, and Mr. Tellford with an elegant gold stem-winding watch. These gifts were accompanied with many and warm wishes for a life of happiness and comfort. The recipients were, as might have been expected, deeply moved and highly gratified at the evidence of love and veneration represented by the beautiful presents. Mr. Tellford, on behalf of Mrs. Tellford and himself, gratefully and suitably acknowledged them with the remark that looking on them from time to time would bring to their remembrance the pleasant occasion on which they were received, and carry back their minds to 1844, the precursor of the present gathering, and hoped that the remaining days of their declining years would be as prosperous, comfortable and happy as those of the half century that was closed with their golden wedding anniversary.

Not only the members of the family, but the hosts of warm and admiring friends whom Mr. and Mrs. Tellford have gathered about them during the past half century, will heartily join in congratulations to the venerable couple, and the heartiest wishes that the remainder of their lives may be so peaceful and happy that there will be little change in passing to the peace and joys of a higher life.

THE OUTFALL SEWER DIFFICULTY.

The outfall sewer matter is in a serious state of muddle, and the financial, as well as the sanitary, interests of the people of the town are in a like state of peril. But the situation is not so serious but the exercise of a little hard common sense and forbearance, on the part of both parties to the unfortunate dispute may not lead to a harmonious adjustment without the interests of either side suffering to any appreciable degree. It is not probable that either the town of Peterborough or the township of North Monaghan is taking a decided stand on the question for the purpose of gaining an advantage at the expense of another for the more sake of carrying a point. The town is aiming at promoting the sanitary interests of the citizens; the township is quite within its rights in seeking to protect the interests of the residents of the township. The trouble has arisen from making a bad beginning—by carrying things to issue without sufficient consideration, by the exercise of too little of the spirit of conciliation; by deciding upon a course without due consideration of the obstacles standing in the way of its execution; by too ready use of the machinery of the law. It is supremely foolish for two persons who might settle a slight misunderstanding by the exercise of a little common sense, a little fairness, and a little mutual readiness to yield a point, to put themselves in the clutches of the law, from which escape is only possible after long delay, and by a very great ransom. If the two parties now at loggerheads were to get together (in the meantime having sent their respective lawyers to the happy hunting grounds a few days) and would talk the matter over like sensible men, anxious to do what is right and fair surely some compromise could be brought about by which the town would be saved the loss of three or four thousand dollars already expended, and by which the interests of the township would not be affected injuriously. It is to be hoped that an effort will be made to arrive at a common sense solution of the difficulty. Common sense is much cheaper and more satisfactory in the end than common law. The man that gains his point at law, though he wins, generally loses; the lawyers are the sole beneficiaries, and the clients the sole losers.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY FOR PETERBOROUGH.

The Curling Stone Manufactory to be Located Here.

Andrew Kay & Co., curling stone manufacturers, of Haugh, Mauchline, Scotland, have decided to locate a branch of the industry in Peterborough, and to that end have secured from the Auburn Woollen Mills Company the commodious building just north of the mill used by them at Auburn.

Mr. J. Wyllie is representing the company in America, and states that the lease of the building in question was drawn up and signed yesterday, and that the machinery will be in place by the first of November. The manufactory will not have a sufficient output to stock the market this year and the firm will import the stones for this season sales, from the main factory in Scotland. Expert hands will be brought out to conduct the manufacture of the stones, which have to be ground mathematically correct in adjustment and exactly equal in weight to be of any use.

This new Peterborough industry will make a specialty of re-modelling and sharpening old stones which have been in use.

Mr. Wyllie states that all the Canadian granite he has hitherto tested has been of too soft a quality to be used in the manufacture of curling stones, but a quarry may possibly be found somewhere in the Dominion, the yield of which would be suitable for the purpose. For the present, all the granite used will be imported direct from Scotland.

COURTING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

An Ashburnham Swain is Taken Home by His Mamma.

A highly respected citizen of Ashburnham North, who is the proud father of a fully developed nineteen year old daughter (the joy and sunshine of her father's home) was much annoyed last night, when a usually friendly call was made a scene of trouble.

For some time past, a loving swain has been very attentive to this attractive daughter and last night, was wending his happy way towards the home containing the object of his affections, when, to his great surprise, he found another older angel present, in the person of his beloved and highly respected mother, who, suspecting his intention and knowing his inexperience and youth, strongly asserted her parental authority, and ordered the love-sick swain to return with all speed to the parental roof.

So prosaic an ending to what was evidently developing into a romantic attachment has awakened quite an interest in the bosom of the villagers and a scheme is on foot to outwit the old lady.

That Joyful Feeling

With the exhilarating sense of renewed health and strength and internal cleanliness, which follows the use of Syrup of Figs, is unknown to the few who have not progressed beyond the old time medicines and the cheap substitutes sometimes offered but never accepted by the well informed.

Piano Tuning.

Mr. G Gumpricht is in town. Orders may be left at Messrs Taylor & Macdonald's or at the Peterborough Bookstore.

For stomach and liver trouble, costiveness or biliousness, there is nothing better than "Madill's Stomach and Liver Pills."

Very Artistic.

A. Clegg is showing a line of fine gilt brass tables with polished oak tops, decidedly the finest of the sort ever offered in Peterborough, see his window. Also a great variety of other fancy parlor tables in choice woods, and an artistic line of highly finished antique oak chairs, with cobler seats of embossed leather, and a larger line of floor rockers at greatly reduced prices, in fact we have so many new things that we have no space this week to enumerate them. Our stock is complete in every line. A. CLEGG, 427 George street.

Look Out For Cold Weather

But ride inside of the Electric Lighted and Steam Heated Vestibule Apartment trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway and you will be as warm, comfortable and cheerful as in your own library or boudoir. To travel between Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis, or between Chicago, Omaha and Sioux City, in these luxuriously appointed trains, is a supreme satisfaction; and, as the somewhat ancient advertisement used to read, "for further particulars, see small bills," small bills (and large ones, too) will be accepted for passage and sleeping car tickets. For detailed information address A. J. Taylor, Canadian Passenger Agent' Toronto, Ont.

GEO. F. MARTER IS LEADER.

AN ADVISORY COMMITTEE TO ASSIST HIM APPOINTED.

Will the Conservative Party Carry on the Fight or allow the Patrons to do so?—That is the Question.

(Toronto News.)

It was eleven o'clock, Tuesday night, when the Conservative caucus got through the first part of its business, that of selecting a new leader. The caucus resumed Wednesday morning. The only plank so far laid down is one of secrecy. Each member is pledged not to divulge anything that takes place. It has leaked out however, that the public are not missing a great deal by not having the discussions reported.

Wednesday morning, an advisory committee and two whips were chosen, but what the rest of the business was the members pretended they could not tell. At the same time their business is generally talked of around the city,

They are not discussing policy, but tactics. That is what is prolonging the caucus. Part of those present want to "play second fiddle" to the patrons and thereby embarrass the government. The others prefer to fight as a party.

Of the twenty-five Conservative members only Savage and Beatty are absent. With Major Hiscott, the P. P. A. member, for Lincoln, in attendance the total is 24.

The Change from Girlhood to Womanhood — is fraught with dangers. At this period the young woman is especially sensitive, and many nervous troubles, which continue through life, have their origin at this time. If there be pain, headache, and nervous disturbances, or the general health not good, the judicious use of medicine should be employed. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best tonic and nervine at this time. The best bodily condition results from its use. It's a remedy specially indicated for those delicate weaknesses and derangements that afflict womenkind at one period or another.

For all women, at all times of life, in all cases of peculiar nature, the "Prescription" is the safe agent that builds up, strengthens, and cures.

In catarrhal inflammation, in chronic disorders and displacements common to women, it is guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money is refunded.

A great many medicines "relieve" Catarrh in the Head. That means that it's driven from the head into the throat and lungs. But, by its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy perfectly and permanently cures.

WAS IT SUICIDE?

A Homeless Cur Who Probably Accepted Ingersoll's Reasoning.

He was a homeless, mangy cur, who would probably have wagged his tail at any name. A boy came down the street and made a strike at him with a stick. The dog drew back into the doorway of an apartment house, and stood there thinking it over. He sniffed the air weakly and found in it no suggestion of food. Then, with a little whine, he nursed his wounds. A man came out of the door and finding a scraggy-looking cur blocking his way kicked him to one side and walked up town. The dog picked himself up. Perhaps he would have better luck next time, so he just loafed around. He attempted to tag behind a passer-by as if he belonged and just as he was regaining his self-respect the man turned around and said: "Get out, you cur." The dog stopped short. He watched the man until he turned down a side street. Then the dog walked back to his corner, still hopping. When a young woman with her escort passed him he was a wise dog, and he got up a little appealing bark. The young woman bent over and said: "Why, you poor, lonesome little dog." And when she patted him on the head his stubby little tail wagged hard and his eyes brightened. This was the sympathy he had been looking for. He fell in behind and followed his newly acquired friends to an apartment-house half a dozen blocks up the street. Several times the woman turned around and addressed a remark to him, and she called him "Doggie" because she hadn't known him long enough to give him a name. She probably would attend to that after she had fed him. As his two friends entered the apartment-house they evidently forgot him, for the door was closed in his face. They would remember him when he barked, so he made a noise. Then he whined a little and waited.

An open car was coming down grade at a rapid pace and a party of picnickers in it were singing. The dog walked out to the curb and watched the well-lighted car approach. Possibly the lights and the noise dazed him as he was crossing the track. As the car bowled by there was a wild kiyi under the horse's hoofs and the wheels rolled over something. The conductor went back to investigate. "Only a dog," he said, as he rang to go ahead, "and he's dead for fair. What I don't understand is why, with the whole street free, he should permit himself to be run over."

Jamaica Belles on Their Way to Church.

In pours the black portion of the congregation. It is composed for the most part of women. They are gorgeously arrayed in silks and cottons of the most bewildering brilliancy, with golden beehive-shaped ornaments in the ears and twists of gold about their necks, and all are beaming and smiling with the utmost complacency and self satisfaction.

With a great many of them the first duty is to take off their boots or shoes. Small wonder, for half of them are in the habit of trudging twenty or thirty miles a day, barefooted to and from market, and the other half, if they do not use their feet so hardly, at any rate never confine them. Poor, or wanting in proper pride indeed, must be that woman who cannot raise a pair of boots or shoes for Sunday wear. It means agony, you may conceive, to keep pinched up in stiff leather a pair of feet used to free, untrammelled movement, but it has to be borne—for a few minutes. It is managed thus:

On the road to church a halt is made at about 200 yards' distance for the purpose of putting on the boots or shoes, which have been hitherto held in the hands. Church is then hobbled into and the boots and shoes taken off, to be again put on as the service draws to a close. Church is then hobbled out of, and at a respectable distance from it the instruments of torture are again got rid of, not to be put on again for a week.

Curious Chinese Coins.

A curious feature of Chinese coins, the nail-mark, appears to have originated in an accident very characteristic of China. In the time of Queen Wentek a model in wax of a proposed coin was brought for her majesty's inspection. In taking hold of it she left on it the impression of one nail, and the impression has in consequence been a marked characteristic of Chinese coins for hundreds of years.

They're Drinking More.

It is a subject for grave consideration by the American people that the use of alcoholic liquors is increasing in that country. In the year 1883 the consumption of distilled spirits was 1.46 gallons per capita; in 1893 it had increased to 1.51 gallons. The consumption of beer per capita in 1883 was 10.27 gallons, which had increased to 16.08 gallons in 1893.

Pure blood is absolutely necessary in order to enjoy perfect health. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and strengthens the system.

PETER'S MISTAKE.

He Really Lost Money on That $24 Investment.

History tells us that 268 years ago, or in 1626, Peter Minuit bought Manhattan Island from the Indians, and paid for it $24 in merchandise.

It has usually been thought that Peter took advantage of the ignorance of the untutored savage, and made an excellent bargain for himself.

No doubt but that Peter thought it was a good trade, particularly when he considered the value of lots after the streets would be laid out, Central Park improved, Brooklyn Bridge built, and the island had a population of 2,000,000; for Peter was a shrewd real estate speculator, and looked a long way ahead with a correct, prophetic eye.

Notwithstanding all of Peter's shrewdness and foresight he made the mistake of his life, and lost millions of dollars by his purchase. He didn't stop to figure interest.

Since 1626 the rate of interest in this country, where money has always been in demand, has ranged from six per cent up to highway robbery. It will be conservative to say that eight per cent is a fair average.

Now, if Peter had loaned his $24 at eight per cent compound interest, from then until this date, what would its value be compared with the value of Manhattan Island.

At 8 per cent. compound interest money will double once in about nine years. Now, there have been twenty-nine times nine years, and seven years more, since Peter made his purchase. Then, if he had loaned his $24 he would have had nearly $400,000 at the end of the first 100 years, and more than gold dollars at the close of the second century, while in 1894 his principal of $24 would have grown to be $20,000,000,000—the value of Manhattan Island many times over.

So, in fact the Indians got the best of the bargain, and no doubt they chuckled over the situation as they walked down through Baxter street with the $24 dollars worth of merchandise on their arms.—New York World.

Only a Summer Resort Tyro.

The youth in white flannel suit, russet shoes, albino pink shirt and pancake hat was doing his first time at a summer resort hotel, and he had as his companion something very similar in his makeup, but of three or four season's experience of summer resorts. In a burst of confidence, after the first week of it, the new fellow called the veteran aside.

"I say, Tom," he said, blushing much and whispering low, "if I tell you something will you keep dead still about it?"

"Sure; what is it?" and the blaze youth was almost interested.

"Swear you won't say anything?"

"Of course I swear. Now what is the great secret?"

"Well, old fellow"—this with many blushes and much hesitency—"I'm engaged."

"No; you don't say so?" and the veteran smiled.

"Yes; I'm engaged," he nodded cheerily. "To how many?"

"How many?" gasped the new one. "One, of course; how many did you think, pray?"

The veteran pulled himself together.

"That's so," he said; "excuse me; I forgot that you were only an amateur."—The Fireside Journal.

A Brantford Compositor has Diabetes—He Drops 40 Pounds in Weight in a Short Time—How He Was Cured.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 15.—Thos Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier in this city, has seen some ups and downs in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr. Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six boxes worked a complete cure. Mr. Hazelhurst is to-day better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

S. P. SMITH, of Towanda, Pa., whose constitution was completely broken down, is cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He writes:

"For eight years, I was, most of the time, a great sufferer from constipation, kidney trouble, and indigestion, so that my constitution seemed to be completely broken down. I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and took nearly seven bottles, with such excellent results that my stomach, bowels, and kidneys are in perfect condition, and, in all their functions, as regular as clock-work. At the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, my weight was only 129 pounds; I now can boast of 159 pounds, and was never in so good health. If you could see me before and after using, you would want me for a traveling advertisement. I believe this preparation of Sarsaparilla to be the best in the market to-day."

EDITOR FROM HAWAII.

SOME OF THE QUEER EXPERIENCES OF W. S. SMITH'S CAREER.

He Conducted a Paper in the Domain of "Queen Lil," and Found Journalism Not a Bed of Roses—Some of the Things He Has to Tell of Other Experiences.

Walter G. Smith, the young editor who made such a stir in Hawaii in his conduct of the Star, which he founded and used fearlessly in his attacks on Hawaiian royalty and its supporters, returned recently to his former home, Sherwood. His old friends greeted him enthusiastically, and have been listening eagerly to the narratives he has told of the many exciting episodes in Hawaii during the time of suspense which the American government inflicted upon the residents there. Mr. Smith has also brought home some amusing anecdotes.

The system of the jail management in the islands is peculiar. It is the custom there to rent out the prisoners to citizens as laborers at so much a day. Every one who pretends to any social standing in Honolulu has a telephone in his house, and a conversation over it like this is said to be of frequent occurrence:

"Is this the jail?"

"Yes."

"Well, won't you please send up a murderer to the house to day? That burglar you sent up yesterday was not satisfactory."

The prisoners are required to return to the jail before 6 o'clock every night. Mr. Smith is said to have asked the keeper what he did when the prisoners failed to return.

"What do I do?" said the keeper in surprise at such a question. "Why, sir, I lock 'em out!"

It will be remembered that Mr. Smith was threatened with assassination by Paramour Wilson because Smith dared to give expression to Wilson's scandalous relations with the royal house. Upon receipt of the news to expect death Smith went out on the street armed, and exposed himself purposely to meet his antagonist. The other man didn't shoot, but Smith was none the less ready for emergencies.

It turns out, however, that it wasn't Smith's first experience of this kind in newspaper life. Before Smith went to Hawaii he edited a newspaper in San Diego, Cal. There was a tugboat captain there who came from Smith's native place, Sherwood. One day the editor found in a paper sent to him from his old home an extract from a letter that the tugboat captain had sent home, and which, because of the glowing account it gave of the writer's success, got into print as an instance of what push would do in the far west. The tugboat captain referred to himself as the captain of "a large steamer," and so exaggerated his position in life that he appeared to be one of the magnates of the town. Smith, in a spirit of fun, reprinted the article without comment.

Soon after its publication a sound of heavy feet was heard rushing up the stairs to the editorial rooms of the paper. The excited tugboat captain dashed in and inquired for Editor Smith. He hadn't come down yet, the boy said.

"Well, you tell him," said the captain, "that I shall be here to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock to shoot him dead. I give him warning."

Smith received the message, and has acknowledged since that he did not like it. Still it would not do to show the white feather. He procured two large revolvers, had them cocked and hidden under a newspaper on his desk that had been thrown down carelessly, as it seemed, and tried to show no concern when on the following day the lookout reported that the angry captain was headed for the office exactly on time. He burst into Smith's office, and the latter's right hand stole under the newspaper and grasped one of the cocked revolvers. With a tremendous amount of profanity the captain shouted:

"What did you mean by printing that thing about me!"

"You wrote it, didn't you?" asked Smith, as his hand stole under the paper and grasped the second revolver, and both hands began to tip up the muzzles for instant use, the editor at the same time trying to conceal his trepidation.

"Yes, I wrote it, but what the blankety, blankety blank did you mean by printing it?"

"If I choose to reprint such an article," said Smith, the points of the revolvers coming up still more and his hands shaking a little more, "I have a right to do so."

"You have, have you?"

"Yes I have."

"Well, do you know what I am going to do?" asked the furious captain.

"No. I don't," said Smith, prepared now to shoot and kill if his trembling hands would permit him to hit the mark.

"Well, I am going to go down stairs and stop my paper."—New York Sun.

A Remarkable Event

An event which has been the talk of the town for some weeks is the cure of Mr. Edward White, whose sufferings from Salt Rheum (Eczema) were well known. Mr. White's statement is as follows:

For 12 years previous to the last few months I have been a sufferer of the worst kind from Salt Rheum. I tried twelve different doctors, besides many patent medicines but received no benefit, but gradually became worse. Last January I was advised to try B. B. B. by the postmaster here. I soon perceived a decided change for the better, and it only took six bottles to make a complete cure.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

THREE RUNNING SORES

PHYSICIANS FAILED

BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but without success. I was told three Running Sores on my [illegible] could not be healed while I used B. B. B., which I did and they became completely healed, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Caticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the [illegible] became dry and formed [illegible] dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. ART IN IRISH CABINS.

BEAUTIFUL WORK OF PEASANTS IN THE GREEN ISLE.

Just Coming Into Notice—Embroideries, Wood Carving and Earthenware—The Porcelain of Belleek—Frail and Beautiful Wares Produced by Skilled Hands.

In these days of drought—art drought—in the season between the going out and coming in of artists, one turns any place for rare things, and that is how it came about that out of the depths of the Irish Store, on Wabash avenue, says the Chicago Times, there was raked up the other day some of the rarest bits of wood carving, embroidery, and Belleek porcelain in the city.

The carving was of course of bogwood, that wood which soaks in the bogs until it is black as ebony and twice as beautiful. It was in all odd shapes, and the articles were both ornamental and useful.

Owls and other birds of the night looked with ill omened eyes out of the case in which they stood, and tall candlesticks told eerie tales of Irish homes and Irish bogies. On them were carved the great wolf-dogs—the dogs of Ireland long since passed away, save in the traditions of the people.

Fanciful trays and boxes, tiny vases and paper cutters, everything to which the wood carver turns his attention, were there; and all the work of the peasants of Ireland. Beautiful to look upon, and yet something one must approach with saddened heart, because each carved leaf and scroll, each tiny feather of bird, each hair of the gaunt wolf-dog, tells the story of a gaunter wolf which ever stands at the Irish peasant's door.

And so with the embroidery. In every stitch it was what we call high art, and yet Mrs. White, whose heart and soul is with Lady Aberdeen in her work, says: "Each stitch, each drawn thread there, tells a story to me of hunger and privations. My country women work these things in peasant homes, where never a ray of hope enters, unless—unless it is the hope of death."

And looking at them through Mrs. White's eyes one could no longer see the rare embroideries as one looks at those turned out by machines, but each bit of linen seemed stamped with the individuality of her whose fingers had beautified it. Upon each leaf and flower some woman's tears had dropped, and with the stitches some woman's heart strings had been woven in the cloth. There were visions of homes of which we cannot conceive, earthen floors and peat fires; of hungry women and wailing children; of men grown desperate with suffering.

But over all and through it all art seems to have held sway—the art of the needle and ofttimes the pocket knife. Painters and sculptors will probably not be inclined to accept this.

To them art means only the covering of canvas with paint, or the cutting of stone, or moulding of plaster into form, but the layman accepts more. Perhaps it needed the rare embroideries of Japan to open our eyes to the fact that needlework may encroach upon the realm of art, but having once been opened they will never be closed.

And so it is that among the artists the Irish peasant, man or woman, is not all unworthy to stand. With the needle and with the knife they work, as they have worked for generations, but no longer without recognition.

As for Irish porcelain, that is different. There is no need to plead its cause. For the matter of twenty years or more Americans have been proud to own a piece of Belleek porcelain. It is manufactured in Belleek, Lough Erne, Fermanagh County, at the only porcelain works Ireland can boast.

The ware is peculiarly beautiful. The glaze is iridescent, of a lustrous silvery appearance. It is translucent and is like an eggshell in thinness. It is rarely made in conventional patterns, the designs usually possessing all the charm of originality. A favorite shape is that of a shell, and when made in that form it is hard to detect it from a beautiful sea shell, so like the pearly lining is the glazed surface. France and England both try to duplicate the Belleek ware, but have to substitute an artificial metallic glaze to produce the luster of mother-of-pearl.

Cheap Artificial Teeth.

Inasmuch as real teeth are so easily lost it is a comfort to know that artificial ones cost only 15 to 18 cents each at the manufacturer's. One maker in New York sells 8,000,000 teeth every year. They are porcelain, composed chiefly of kaolin. The enamel is put on with metallic oxides, the process being so delicate that no two teeth are exactly alike in coloring. After being finished thousands of them are taken together and matched in shades. There are fifty different shades, corresponding to variations in the coloring of natural teeth. Defects are often made in false teeth so as to render them more deceptive to the eye. The best plates are of rubber. Celluloid is the prettiest material for the purpose, but it does not resist the acids of the mouth.—Providence Journal.

LACROSSE.

The hopes of those interested in having the Shamrock-Capital tie played off here have been raised high by the fact that no answer has yet been received from either club. This goes far to show that the offer made for the game is receiving consideration at the hands of both teams.

THE WHEEL.

Buffalo, Oct. 24.—John S. Johnson this afternoon rode a mile in the unparalleled time of 1.35 2-5, almost 14 seconds faster than any single rider has ever covered the distance in the world, 6 seconds faster than any tandem has ever negotiated the distance, and one-tenth second faster than the world's record for running horses, 1.35¼, made by Salvator on a straight track at Monmouth Park, Aug. 28, 1890. The discrepancy between the running horse record and the fastest bicycle record has been a bitter thought for the cycle racing men for several years, and innumerable attempts have been made in both this country and in England to reach the figures set by the great Salvator, but hitherto all efforts have been of no avail. Johnson never budged from his position at the rear of the quadruplet, and when he crossed the finish line his front wheel was lapped on the rear wheel of the big machine. As the record-breakers and pace making quartette crossed the tape the features of the men were absolutely indistinguishable. All that could be heard and seen was a roar, a flash of variegated colours and a cloud of dust. Electrical timing arrangements were provided and each quarter was checked at both start and finish, so that there can be no doubt of the accuracy of the performance. The five riders dashed over the tape with the report of the pistol, Johnston lapping on the quad. They were going at a terrific clip. The first quarter was covered in 21 2-5 seconds, crowding closely the best record for a thoroughbred horse for the same distance. This was on the down-grade quarter. In the second quarter, which was up hill, they went the distance in 25 2-5 seconds, making the half in 46 4-5, four-fifths of a second slower than the half-mile record held by the California filly Geraldine. When they struck the level course Johnston urged the quadmen to do their best, and they made the third quarter in just 25 seconds. Callahan and Seavey on the quadruplet showed signs of distress at the unheard of pace, and were inclined to slow up a trifle, but words of encouragement from Johnston caused them to rally, and from the third quarter to the coveted goal they went very fast, beating the time for the second and three-quarters. The time for the three-quarters of a mile was 2-45 seconds slower than the three quarters made by Domino last fall. The pace in the stretch was wonderfully fast, and when the quad men had crossed the line, Johnston was a short foot behind the rear wheel and riding as if he had been out for an exercise heat. The official time for the mile was 1.35 2-5. Several club riders made the time 1.35 flat. Johnson said after dismounting that he finished well within the limit of his powers, and felt confident that he can do a mile in 1.30, and will make the effort over the same course to-morrow afternoon. The quad. team was made up of C. H. Callahan, first; W. A. Seavey, second; Patrick O'Connor, third, and W. A. Rhodes fourth. The starter was T. J. Sayles and the judges at the finish were W. A. Stark, F. Bryan and P. Van Velsor.

Farmer Accidentally Killed

LANARK, Ont., Oct. 25.—Yesterday afternoon, between 1 and 2 o'clock, as Mr. Thomas Francis, a farmer about two miles from Lanark village, was drawing out manure, the whiffle-trees came off the waggon, and he being standing the sudden stop caused him to fall forward, his head striking the waggon tongue, killing him instantly. He was about 69 years of age and very highly respected.

Fatal Fire in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—Hotel de Normandie, 14 St. Gabriel, was gutted by fire at 1.30 this morning. The fire broke out in the kitchen, and the guests were rescued by firemen by way of ladders. Twenty people were taken out in a half unconscious condition. A man named Rouen was taken to Notre Dame hospital, but his injuries are such that he cannot live. He was badly burned.

Seargeant Is Satisfied.

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—Mr. Seargeant, general manager of the Grand Trunk, in an interview expresses himself as satisfied with the results shown in the Grand Trunk report just issued in London, and expresses the opinion that the prospects for railway traffic are becoming brighter.

Nine Cases of Smallpox at Windsor.

WINDSOR, Oct. 25.—Yesterday's report of the smallpox situation says that six members of the Reaume family, living on the Tecumseh road six miles from Windsor are down with the disease. This makes a total of nine new cases within the past week.

Jim Root.

John Hay's verses reciting the heroism of Jim Bludso, who held the nozzle of his burning ship agin the bank till the last galoot was ashore, immortalized an imaginary hero, but the story of Engineer Root's race for the lives of his passengers on the relief train sent out from St. Paul to rescue the people fleeing from the forest fires in Minnesota is from real life. The dispatches have told the graphic story of how the fire came in every window of his cab, and three times his clothes were ablaze. Had he abandoned the throttle of his engine, hundreds of lives would have been sacrificed, but he stood at his post urging his engine on and saving his passengers. Small wonder that the praises of Engineer Root are on everybody's tongue!

WILL LIVE TWO DAYS

Possibly the Czar of Russia Can Last Three Weeks.

AN OPERATION GIVES RELIEF

Grand Duke Michael Declared Heir Apparent After the Accession of Nicholas in Consequence of Grand Duke George's Serious Illness.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—A despatch to the Figaro sent from Odessa at midnight last night says the Czar's death is imminent. The drowsiness which is frequently apparent just before the end has set in. The death of Grand Duke George, the second son of the Czar, according to the Gazette, is a question of a few days. A despatch received here from Livadia by a government official says that the death of the Czar is expected in a few hours. There is growing anxiety in French government circles.

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—The Yalta correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger says: "Prof. Leyden's system of feeding has done much to support the Czar's strength. The patient is fed at 7 and 11 in the morning, 4 in the afternoon and 9 in the evening. It is reported that a prominent court officer at St. Petersburg has received from Livadia the following despatch: 'It is not expected that the death of the Czar will occur within the next forty-eight hours, and it is probable that his Majesty's life will be prolonged for a much longer time."

LONDON, Oct. 25.—A medical correspondent telegraphed from Livadia yesterday saying that the Czar had been much relieved by the puncture of his legs, which is reducing the oedma. Preparations are being made for the operation of thoracentesis in order to relieve the effusion into the thoracic cavity, which will doubtless relieve the distressed breathing of the patient and restore the action of his heart. But, says this correspondent in conclusion, there is little or no improvement in his malady.

The Moscow correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette telegraphs that the drowsiness with which the Czar has been affected is increasing, and it is almost impossible for his Majesty to keep awake except when he is attacked by the nervous spasm which frequently seize him. Nevertheless he is able to take and retain more food. The wedding of the Czarewith and Princess Alix depends entirely upon the condition of his Majesty.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 25.—An imperial decree issued yesterday declares Grand Duke Michael, third son of the Czar heir apparent to the throne after the accession of Grand Duke Nicholas, the present heir apparent, Grand Duke George, the Czar's second son, in consequence of the condition of his health has renounced his rights of succession.

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Koelnische Zeitung says it is rumored that the Czar's physicians have hopes that he will live two or three weeks, and consequently have favored postponing the wedding.

Would Have Killed 100 Men.

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y., Oct. 25.—For some time past there has been bad blood between Pat Reilly and Frank Murray, two of a gang of 100 laborers engaged building a sewer near here. Last night, after the men had retired to the shanty where they live, Reilly went outside and a few minutes after was discovered in a fiendish plot to dynamite the house and blow the whole gang into eternity, in order to be revenged on one man. He had 18 pounds of dynamite under the sill of the house. He was arrested.

Married a Prince.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—The religious ceremonies of the marriage of Miss Susan Tucker Whittier, daughter of Gen. Whittier, of New York, to Prince Beloersky, son of the Czars aide-de-camp, took place yesterday. The first ceremony according to the rights of the Greek church was performed in the Russian church in the Rue Daru and the second in the church of the Holy Trinity according to protestant rites.

Anarchists Leaving London.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Numbers of leading English and foreign anarchists are vacating their haunts in London, and the majority are proceeding singly to America. The reason for this migration is the incessant harassing they have been subjected to on account of the vigilance of the police. Mowbray, the socialist leader, will shortly return to the United States.

Malay Chiefs Surrender.

MADRID, Oct. 25.—A despatch from the Governor-General of the Phillippine Islands says 1,000 men of the force sent to subdue the Malays on the Island of Mindanao are building fortifications on the left bank of the River Agut. Three of the most powerful of the chiefs against whom the force was sent have surrendered.

THE RULING MARKETS.

TORONTO, Oct. 25, 1894.

At East Buffalo of the 33 1-2 cars on sale 9 cars were Canadas, most of which were sold, the market closing weak; good to choice Canadas, $3.75 to $4.

At Chicago wheat showed a further tendency to weakness and closed 1-4c lower than yesterday. Corn followed wheat, showing a net loss of 1-4 to 3-8c on the day's business. Oats were decidedly weak and closed 3-8 to 1-2c under yesterday. Provisions were lower.

The sentiment on the London stock market disclosed a very small account. Business was dull, but the tone generally good. Americans were flat early, but closed better. South American stocks were particularly strong. The chances of increased activity in stocks is apparently poor, but no material set-back is anticipated. Forty lacs of Indian council drafts were sold at 13 3-8. Paris exchange is low enough to take gold from here.

The complete inactivity of the New York stock market during the last few days fairly reflects, as the stock market is apt to do, conditions of outside trade. Enterprise generally is at a standstill and shows little present sign of moving. In the main this is logical enough. The reaction from August's advance in activity and prices has indeed spent itself, but there is no fresh propelling force, nor is any such influences plainly in sight until the new tariff shall have had a fair chance, with next year's opening, to exert its own good influence. It is always dangerous to say what will not happen among possibilities, but the present outlook for the next two months is one of general dulness. What passing influence the election results will have is naturally a matter of conjecture. The general market hardly moved yesterday from the opening to the close.

Superior Quality Carpets.

With all the rage for cheapness the demand is growing for the better article. "It's Fair's Way." Time is a certain tester of fads and fallacies. In the production of Carpets we've something that'll stand the test of time. A taking feature, too, is the rich, deep colouring of these carpets—a colouring that wears, whether the carpet be in drawing room, parlour or dining room. We may give you the hint that these rich, deep colourings are rapidly becoming the fashionable vogue.

Ask to see a line of these Carpets with handsome Borders to match.

UMBRELLAS RECOVERED.

Old 'Wayback, when he was "seein' the sights," discovered that sign in Fair's window. He hesitated a moment and then went in. Said he:

"Say, I want yew to recover my umbrella."

"All right," replied the clerk; "where is it?

Old Wayback looked at him in astonishment and drawled out:

"If I knew that I'd recover her myself."

LING TELLS HIS STORY

Mrs. Hartley Confessed Having Poisoned Her Husband.

SHE GAVE HIM ROUGH ON RATS

The Chief Witness Says the Prisoner Told Him She Never Expected Her Husband to Return From Hamilton Alive—A Strong Case for the Crown.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 26.—At the Hartley murderer trial yesterday James Doherty, jr., testified to having been asked by Mrs. Hartley to bring her from Norwich ten cents' worth of strychnine. This was about a year ago last April or May. Rufus Hannan being sworn said: I live in Hawtrey and about two weeks after Christmas saw Mrs. Hartley with Ling go up to the third floor of the American Hotel, Brantford. In twenty minutes they left the American and went to another hotel, where a Miss Quigg, a friend of Mrs. Hartley's was staying. Luther Hussey lives next to Ling and saw Mrs. Hartley and Ling enter O'Brien's bush on April 22. Merrill Allen, of New Durham, testified to suspicious friendship on the part of Mrs. Hartley and Ling. His evidence was directly incriminating.

Mrs. Woodward, who was carried out the previous evening in a fainting condition, was cross-examined by Mr. Osler. The cross-examination had not gone far when it became apparent she was again in a fainting condition. Mr. Osler then said he would release her from further cross-examination. Frank Allan said he saw Caleb Hartley on the Wednesday before he died. He had bloodshot eyes and looked bad. He said to witness he felt ill. Next day he appeared worse and complained of pains in his stomach and vomiting. He got gradually worse and died on the Sunday. Mrs. Harley did not seem to think the case a serious one.

Frank Allan,, New Durham, said he knew Caleb Hartley. He saw him on May 3rd near the cheesefactory. He was going to the doctors. His face was flushed and eyes were bloodshot. He told him he had vomited five or six times that day. "I board near Hartley's and called often to see the deceased," said Allen. "I saw him Saturday night before he died. I know Mrs. Hartley and Ling. I never saw them together.

Isaac Haight, farmer of New Durham, gave evidence as to Hartley's illness. Mrs. Hartley told witness that somebody must have given Hartley a big dose when he was away in Hamilton. Hartley joined the Home Circle about seven years ago. Mrs. Hartley wanted the deceased to join the A. O. U. Workmen. She said the insurance should be made payable to her as her son was provided for in his grandfather's will.

Louis Ling, the principal witness, then took the stand. He gave an account of the different places where he had been working for some time previous to his first going to work for Caleb Hartley. Witness first worked two weeks for Caleb Hartley and boarded at Jacob Goulds. He first became acquainted with Mrs. Hartley in the store about eighteen months previous to Caleb Hartley's death. He went to Hartley's store with George Hall and Harry Walker.

He saw Mrs. Hartley and remained till ten o'clock. He went again on Thursday or Friday night of the same week about 9 o'clock and left between 12 and 1. The others left about 10. "Mrs. Hartley slapped me on the shoulder," said Ling, "and said, 'Henry, don't go home yet; I want to see you.'" She then took me in the house. There was no light in the house. She sat down beside me on the lounge and put her arms around me. Somebody came. She put me in a bedroom. When they left she took me in the bedroom with her. She partly undressed and we went to bed. I had improper relations with her. I left between 12 and 1. I next saw her the first part of the next week. I had promised to come the following night when I left.

I again had improper relations with her at her own house. Three weeks before Christmas I went to Brantford with her and tried to get a room in a hotel there, but was refused. I again had improper relations with her in O'Brien's woods, near Hawtry.

Continuing the witness said deceased vomited on Thursday and Friday. "I was hitching up the horse to get ice for Caleb at his request, when Mrs. Hartley came out and said: 'I want to tell something and want you never to tell as long as you live.' I would not promise, but she said: 'Thursday Caleb went to Hamilton. I gave him a big dose of rough on rats and the reason I never sent the rig for him was I never expected him to come back alive.'

"I said: 'For God's sake, Maria, did you do such a trick as that?' She only laughed. She said: 'The insurance is what I want and what I am going to have.' I said: 'If I had known you were going to do such a trick as that I would never have come to work here.' Nor would any one else. She laughed and said she had intended to do it for three years and kept the rough on rats in the house for that purpose."

In the cross-examination by Mr. Osler the witness became mixed and could not tell exactly where he had lived since moving from Hamilton twelve or thirteen years ago, and in a different number of ways contradicted himself. He had sworn, at the inquest and preliminary examination, that he was at Norwich on Friday, whereas he swore in court that it was Harley. He said that he confessed to Rev. Mr. East before the funeral, another time after the funeral, and at a third examination three weeks after the funeral.

MURRAY ON THE TRAIL

Tracking Chatelle's Movements Before the Murder.

HE WAS SEEN IN STRATFORD

At that Time He Was Carrying the Black Valise—Started off in the Direction of Listowel—A Lead Pencil in the Case.

STRATFORD, Oct. 26.—In the Keith murder no further arrests are being made, and the authorities are now tracing Chatelle's itinerary up to the time of the murder. From Monday, 15th, up to Friday night his route in Perth county has been accurately followed. On Monday he was in Stratford and had his dinner at Farmer McCaffrey's, about a mile from town. His supper he took at the house of Donald Ross, Front street, Stratford. In the evening in company with a black valise and a stout cudgel he went through Queen's park, when he was noticed by Park Superintendent Downs and Engineer Clark of the waterworks. Chatelle struck northwards on the Listowel track. On Wednesday night he appeared in Ellice swamp, when two laborers, Yorke and Lamb, were draining some waste land for a Mrs Hammett. He assisted in building some stump fires and was in return given his supper. On Thursday he had his evening meal at Farmer Towers, between Milbank and Milverton.

Just now the authorities are interested in a red cedar lead pencil that was found on Chatelle. It has a rubber end with no ferule and is uncut. It is thought that Jessie Keith may have purchased it in Listowel on the morning of the murder.

LISTOWEL, Oct. 26.—With the later developments the happenings of the fatal Friday afternoon when the murderer was alone with his victim, become plain. It would seem that Chattelle met Jessie on her way home and struck her down. He then dragged her across the ploughed field to the bush, where he attempted to assault her. Her struggle to preserve her honor was successful, although it cost her her life. The evidence of the medical witnesses at the adjourned inquest Friday night will prove that the girl died a virgin. Maddened by the resistance of his victim, the assassin cut her throat, then stripped her and completed his horrible butchery. He then concealed the body and clothes. Before hiding the valise he removed his overalls, and, taking from the satchel a pair of trousers he had purchased in St. Mary's, donned them, leaving the overalls in the valise.

SEEKING THE TRAITOR.

A Spy in the Camp of the Buffalo A. P. A. Societies.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 26.—Yesterday's issue of the Catholic Union devoted two whole pages to an expose of the A. P. A. The author, who entered the camp as a spy, succeeded in taking notes of what was said and done without detection.

He writes: "Friend Beeson, who, by the way, is an old cavalry officer, arose and said: 'If there is a traitor in this council to-night I will find him.' He asked for a sword and it was given to him by the sergeant-at-arms. Then he asked for two volunteers to assist him. Friends Frick and Albro volunteered and he passed me out into the ante-room. He asked eight men to come out. I was one of the men who went out. Frick asked me to strip to the waist.

"All of a sudden I heard the stamping of feet and the swish of the sword as it came close to me and through a paper. Then it was drawn back again. I asked if that was all and he said yes. I then made way for the next worthy Amorean.

Followed Him for Years.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Joseph Fex, a shoemaker of 395 Wythe avenue, Brooklyn, was paroled by Justice Walsh in Adams street court yesterday pending examination on a charge of abandoning his wife. Fex was arrested yesterday morning, after eluding his wife for nearly four years, during which she says she has pursued him to various places in Canada and finally to Brooklyn. Mrs. Fex lives in Brockville, Ont. On August 16 Police Inspector MacKellar of Brooklyn received a letter from Lawyer D. J. O'Brien, of Brockville, asking for information concerning Fex, detectives located him at 395 Wythe avenue. Inspector MacKellar notified Lawyer O'Brien of the fact. The hearing was adjourned.

McKinley's New York Campaign.

BUFFALO, Oct. 26.—Hon. Wm. McKinley, Governor of Ohio, author of the lately defunct tariff bill and probable candidate for president two years hence, began yesterday his effort to spoil the chances of David B. Hill as a Democratic probability in the presidential race of 1896. Governor McKinley opened at Dunkirk, N.Y., last night and addressed three meetings in this city, in all cases confining himself almost exclusively to the tariff issue. His most noteworthy utterance was: "Every dollar's worth of goods purchased outside the United States means the loss of a dollar in wages to the American workingman."

TO DIE TOGETHER.

Because of Financial Difficulties a Newly-Married Couple Attempt Suicide.

WATERTOWN, N.Y., Oct. 26.—James Pierce, aged 27, and wife came to this city from Ontario a few days ago and registered at the Harris hotel. Because of financial difficulties they decided to die together. He administered chloroform in an overdose to his wife and then took poison himself. Pierce is dead. Mrs. Pierce will recover. The couple were married three weeks ago at Kingston, Canada. He was a native of Bristol, England.

Police Collide with Soldiers.

KINGSTON, Oct. 26.—A dance which took place last night at a house on Bay street was largely patronized by soldiers belonging to "A" Battery and their female friends. In consequence of complaints the police were compelled to break up the party, and for a time there threatened to be a serious collision. One soldier who distinguished himself in abusing the police was, after much difficulty, brought to the lock-up and appeared before police magistrate yesterday morning. The case was adjourned.

BLAMES HIS PHYSICIAN

The Czar's Doctor Charged with Lack of Professional Skill.

DIDN'T UNDERSTAND THE CASE

The Emperor is No Better—One Correspondent Says It is Believed That He is Dying Already—Preparing for a Wedding and a Funeral.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Despatches from St. Petersburg say there is a general feeling against Prof. Zacharin who is held responsible through his mistaken diagnosis of the Czars malady for much of his suffering and the probable fatal termination of his illness. The professor is charged with negligence and lack of professional skill.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—A despatch from St. Petersburg says that the Czar gasped for breath for four hours last night without cessation. He complained of sharp pains in the legs. The swelling has now reached the thighs. The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily News says that the official bulletins do not represent the gravity of the Czar's condition. The temporary relief afforded by tapping, he adds, means nothing. It is the general opinion that his Majesty is already dying. It is known that his unconsciousness lasted several hours.

A despatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Yalu says that the state carriages, trappings, etc., to be used on the occasion of the marriage of the Czarewitch and Princess Alix, together with the regiments necessary to an adequate military display have arrived at Livadia. It is also stated that the mourning coaches, garments of woe, etc., to be used in the event of the Czar's death arrived at the same time.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—A despatch from St. Petersburg to the Cologne Gazette says that the Czar heard the intimation of his physicians that his case was hopeless with great bravery. The opinion is freely expressed that should the Czar die it will be because the proper treatment of his case was not begun in time. It is said that his condition yesterday varied between drowsiness and comparative cheerfulness. He passed an hour alone with the Czarewitch and during the interview dictated an affectionate farewell message to Russia which upon his death will be issued to the public. It is said that he is very grateful to the Russian people for their free expressions of sympathy.

It is reported that when he was given to understand that his case was hopeless he remarked: "It is sad that a man of my years should have to die, though personally I do not cling overmuch to life. If God still deems my life of use to my dear country he will make me well."

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The Czar's physicians issued a bulletin at 8 o'clock last evening saying: "During the day neither somnolence nor spasmodic symptoms have been observed. The patient's appetite is satisfactory. The oedma has not increased."

CLEVER FEMALE SPY.

Japanese Officials Told Her Many Important Military Secrets.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 26.—Chief among the advices received by the Empress of Japan is news of the arrest at Hiroshima of a female spy who gives her name as Otain. She has been using her wiles with effect among Japanese officials and had several of them at her beck and call, with the result that she was piling up a magnificent load of information for Li-Hung-Chang, of whose extensive household, it appears, she was a member. She is beautiful and accomplished, and as she spoke Japanese fluently was admirably fitted for the work of which she was assigned. Her accent betrayed her Chinese birth. The officers who had been paying for her smiles with military secrets will pay the penalty of their rashness.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The Japanese legation have no confirmation of the report that the Japanese army under Field Marshal Count Oyama has landed near Port Arthur, but the report is credited nevertheless.

The Bavarians Are Satisfied.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—The principal ministers of the Federal States of Germany met in Berlin yesterday to discuss imperial measures for combatting the elements of revolution. Chancellor von Caprivi presided. The representatives of Bavaria and Saxony opposed the proposed measures. One of the Bavarian ministers declared that Bavaria's own laws regarding political societies were absolutely sufficient for her own needs, and therefore Bavaria would object to any bill aiming at imperial control. The speaker instanced the recent dissolving of two Bavarian trade unions to show the effect of the Bavarian laws. The other southern ministers evinced great confidence in the Chancellor's conception of the situation.

The Socialists' Convention.

FRANKFORT, Oct. 26.—Herr Stadthagen's motion empowering Socialists to support the provincial government on condition that such support would not imply acquiescence in the existing social system or confidence in the government, was carried by a vote of 164 to 64. Herr Schoenlanck opened the Agrarian question in the afternoon session. He said the peasants must be won over to the Socialists or they would fall a prey to the anti-Semities and the social attitude toward the Agrarians had hitherto been wrong.

The Collision Was Not Serious.

SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 26.—The Paris landed all her passengers here in safety, and beyond a slight damage to her forward rails she was uninjured and will sail for New York on Saturday on time. A number of the passengers were seen previous to their departure for London and on the train, and they joined in saying that the shock of the collision was so light that they did not know of it until the next day.

To Mark the Frontier in Melilla.

TANGIER, Oct. 26.—The Sultan has ordered Muley Amin to go to Melilla with a force of 700 infantry, 700 cavalry and 40 guns, in order to mark out the Spanish and Moorish frontier, the accomplishment of which, in accordance with the agreement with Spain and Morocco, has hitherto been prevented by the Riff tribesmen.

Daily Examiner.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1894.

CHUCKING money into the water is a favourite way of wasting public funds on the part of the Dominion Government. Millions lie at the bottom of graving docks, canals, locks, etc., and another million has been dumped into the Galops Rapids, a short distance below Prescott. The money sunk in making the new channel in the Galops Rapids is now about a million dollars, and the Minister of Railways and Canals officially stated that the channel was not completed according to the contract, and that he required a depth of seventeen feet. Navigators refuse to use this expensive channel, as they say it is not safe, and continue to use the old channel through the rapids. Gilbert Bros., Montreal, contractors, sued the Government for extras, and Wednesday morning the Exchequer Court gave judgment for the Gilberts for $150,000, and interest from April, 1891, or $170,000 in all. This useless hole in the St. Lawrence has now cost seven times the estimated expense, and altogether, about a million dollars. Is it any wonder that Finance Minister Foster has to go a-borrowing to England?

MR MARTER, of Muskoka, has been elected leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature. "Who is Mr. Marter?" is a natural enough question. Mr. Marter is a political product of the wilds of Muskoka. He was first returned to the Legislative Assembly by the District of Muskoka at the general election in 1886. He was then a leading merchant of Gravenhurst, and had been Reeve of that town and Councillor of Waterford. He was re-elected at the general election of 1890. And at the last general election, having removed to Toronto, he successfully contested the north riding of that city. He has been, since his first election, among the most active workers on the Conservative side. Mr. Marter is a son of the late Dr. Peter Marter, of Brantford. He is comfortably past his fiftieth year and is hale and vigorous, with many years of active life and work still before him, and he has his work cut out for him in his new position. He has two whips and an advisory committee to help him, and he will need their help.

MR. MARTER is elected leader of a party which believes that the Dominion Government is not responsible for the loss of two hundred thousand dollars on the Lachine bridges built under its control. Yet Mr. Marter wants to make the Ontarion Government responsible for every egg consumed in government institutions. Mr. Marter has won his spurs by a valiant assault on catsup and pickles, but he'll have a practical idea of a "pickle" before he's through with his present job.

THE Dominion Government feel that the time between now and the general election is comparatively short, and have determined to hold meetings in various parts of the country to try and neutralize the effect of the Liberal wave now moving over the country. Meetings are being arranged in Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Most of the politicians spoken to as to the probable date of the general elections fix upon next summer.

MR. Dalton McCarthy, speaking at Walkerton, on Thursday, declared his opinion that the Mackenzie government was not responsible for the hard times that existed prior to 1874-78. Yet it was, the Brantford Expositor writes, by playing a trick that Sir John Macdonald and his associates were able to hoodwink the electors, and again be re-elected to positions that they had so terribly graced prior to the fall of 1873.

THE friends of Temperance were greatly elated when Hon. Mr. Foster, who had been advocating prohibition for $10 a night, was made a Cabinet Minister. It took Mr. Foster about ten days to forget the cause he had espoused in "a moment of weakness." Now, Mr. Marter was a prohibitionist when a private member of the Legislature.

THE Criminal Code Provides a penalty of $50 for dealers who sell pistols or air guns, or ammunition for the same, to persons under sixteen years of age. Dealers who sell such articles to anyone, without making a record of the purchaser's name and some mark by which the weapon can be identified, are liable to a fine of $25.

TORONTO and Hamilton, with a million acres of lake at their doors, are advocating aqueducts—one from Georgian Bay and the other from Lake Erie. Is it any wonder that Mr. Bowell is trying to work up trade with Australia? Why shouldn't Peterborough tap Burleigh Falls by an aqueduct?

IT costs $50,000 annually to maintain Rideau Hall, and $225,000 for each revision of an unnecessary Federal voters' list—the provincial lists ready made are more comprehensive and would answer just as well.

MAYOR Essery, of London, has been nominated to contest the vacancy, caused by the resignation of Mr. Meredith, in London, with Mr. T. S. Hobbs, the Liberal candidate.

MR. MARTER, the new leader of the Opposition, need have no fear of corns. There is plenty of room for his feet in Mr. Meredith's shoes.

OUR good friend, the Empire, has not fixed a date lately for a special meeting of the Legislature.

Just as Good

Perhaps; but if just as good as Putnam's, is that not a very high recommendation for the original and best corn cure? Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Refuse to accept any of the dangerous sore producing substitutes offered by greedy dealers who make larger profit and disregard the interests of consumers. Safe, painless, certain.

Its Dangerous Ground

that you stand on—with a cough or a cold, and your blood impure. Out of just these conditions comes Consumption.

You must do something. In the earlier stages of Consumption, and in all the conditions that lead to it, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a certain remedy. This scrofulous affection of the lungs, like every other form of Scrofula, can be cured by it. In severe, lingering Coughs, all Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, and every disease that can be reached through the blood, it is the only medicine so effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure you have your money back. Nervous prostration and debility are conquered by it.

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam cures coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:
"For a number of years I have been troubled with a general tired feeling, shortness of breath, pain in the back, and constipation. I could get only little rest at night on account of the pain and had no appetite whatever. I was that tired in my limbs that I gave out before half the day was gone. I tried a great number of medicines but did not get any permanent relief from any source until, upon recommendation of a friend, I purchased a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which made me feel better at once. I have continued its use, having taken three bottles, and

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, anhave no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

WILL THEY MOVE IT?

Question of Transferring the Meteorological Service to Ottawa Not Discussed.

OTTAWA, Oct. 26.—Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper was asked as to the truth of the rumor that the Meteorological office was to be removed from Toronto to Ottawa. "You can say," replied the Minister of Marine, "that I have not done anything at all in the matter." "So that it is not to be removed?" "Nothing has been done in the matter; it has not been been discussed."

Mr. Wallace Nesbitt, Q. C., Toronto, has an engagement with Sir John Thompson at his office here to discuss the Truskey murder case. Mr. Nesbitt defended the prisoner.

Among the matters which the Premier of British Columbia will discuss with the Federal Government is a proposal to bring tuberculosis under the contagious diseases act so that it may be the more effectually stamped out on the Pacific coast where it is rather prevalent.

Messrs. Bush Vinning and Fred Vinning, of Plantagenet, have, they claim, struck gold near Shoal Lake. They surveyed and took up over 1,000 acres of land, and they claim it to be of the richest kind. Next to them is a claim of Messrs. Jerry Robinson, late of Ottawa. Maeser and Campbell and an American syndicate are said to have offered them $35,000 for a half interest in their claim. The claim is within three miles of river navigation and already five crushing mills have been contracted to be delivered before the first of next July. A company will be floated to work the mine.

A despatch received in the city yesterday from Esquimaux Point, on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, states that Captain (Gatling Gun) Howard is safe.

Hon. T. M. Daly entertained Northwest and Manitoba delegates to dinner last night in the Rideau Club. They had an interview with the members of the Government yesterday in the Privy Council Chamber. It is reported that the Hudson Bay railway was discussed, with a view as to its construction, but the delegates are reticent as to their business.

MAY BE A MURDER.

Mysterious Disappearance of a Rich Resident of Windsor.

WINDSOR, Oct. 26.—The abrupt and mysterious disappearance of John Owens, who has been living at the International hotel, Windsor, has caused much concern among his friends. Those who knew that he always carried between $50 and $100 with him fear that he has met foul play. He is about seventy years of age and disappeared Tuesday, having paid his board a few weeks in advance. The police have since been looking for him. The night he disappeared he was seen in the company of a man who is suspected of being a Chicago crook. Owens had a bank book showing that he had $10,000 in Detroit, and the police think that the bunco steerer has induced him to draw his money from the bank and then made away with him. Mr. Owens has lived in the hotel for about six months and has no relatives in this part of the country.

DESERTED AT CLEVELAND.

Mrs. Sclaw Searching for Her Runaway Husband at London.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 26.—A pleasant-looking woman of medium height is in town in search of her husband who, she claims, has deserted her. She has with her two children. Her story is that she came from Cleveland, Ohio, that her faithless spouse long ago ceased to contribute to her support and that for six weeks has eluded her. Hearing that he was at London she came here, but found he had left and was supposed to be in Woodstock. She gives her name as Sclaw. Her husband was in the city last week canvassing the town with a line of note paper, etc. The indignant wife tells a pitiful story of her neglect, and charges her husband with dividing his affections with a London girl.

Two of the Gang Caught.

FORT ERIE, Ont., Oct. 26.—On the 23d inst. a party of five tramps attacked an Arabian peddler about two miles west of this village and robbed him of something over $100 in cash beside the goods he carried. After robbing him the tramps tied him to a tree and left him, while four of them made for Uncle Sam's domain. On the 25th John L. Hubard was arrested in Stevensville and released, then afterwards re-arrested by Chief Young and Mains of Niagara Falls and brought to this place for examination. He was taken to Welland there to await trial. Another one of the party by the name of Frank Spencer was arrested as he came off the Buffalo ferry boat by Officer Metcalf of this place, given an examination before Squire Treble and committed for trial at Welland.

Raised the Price of Coal.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—The coal agents at their meeting yesterday advanced prices 25 cents a ton for stove coal and 15 cents a ton for all other sizes. The new schedule for November delivery is $4 a ton for stove, $3.75 for egg and chestnut and $3.60 for grate. This should dispose of the stories current of the dissolution of the so-called anthracite coal combination.

Christian Workers' Convention.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 26.—A district convention of the International Association of Christian Workers commenced its session in the Central Presbyterian Church in this city last evening. Brief addresses were made. The convention will continue for six days, and many prominent Christian workers will take part in it.

Diphtheria in Illinois.

STURGIS, Ky., Oct. 27.—Diphtheria is raging in Illinois, opposite Caseyville, Ky., and coffins can hardly be furnished fast enough to bury the death. Forty deaths have occured within the week. Among the few recoveries noted, the victims have been left blind or paralyzed.

A LUCKY MAN.

Laid up for Months by a Severe Form of Kidney Disease—The Simple Cure he used—He's Well Now.

THEDFORD, Oct, 22.—Some men don't know when they are in luck and some do. Albert Malthers, of this place, is one of the lucky ones who knows of his good fortune and tells about it. He says he was laid up and could do no work for months because of kidney disease. When kidney disease has such a hold on a man as that, he is in a serious condition. Mr. Malthers recognized this and used every remedy he could think of, but without getting any help until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes cured him and he is attending to his affairs once more and is as hearty and happy as ever.

One Man Died.

MONTREAL, Oct. 26.—August Petit, the chef of the Hotel Normandie, perished in the fire yesterday morning. His room was in the rear of the building and he was overcome before he could escape. He was discovered on his knees beside his bed in an attitude of prayer. He had made a brave struggle for life, but it was of no avail. The poor man's footprints could plainly be seen where his feet rested on the floor, the space surrounding them being black with smoke. The body was taken to Notre Dame Hospital, where doctors worked for hours upon it. There was a spark of life, but not enough to rekindle and he finally expired.

The End is Near.

MONTREAL, Oct. 26.—Dr. E. P. Lachapelle, medical adviser of Mr. Mercier, said yesterday that there was but little change in his condition, except that he was still weaker. He did not sleep any on Wednesday night, but he is perfectly conscious and able to recognize all who go near him. He has not had any crisis since Monday, but should one present itself it may be the last. If there is no crisis he may last some days more, but all realize that the end is near at hand.

Snow in the East.

QUEBEC, Oct. 26.—News received from the Lower St. Lawrence is to the effect that several points on the north and south shores are already covered with snow. Several schooners are reported lost during the last storm of eight days ago.

The Baring Liquidation.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The Governors of the Bank of England have issued circulars announcing an extension of the term of the Baring liquidation until November 18, 1895, in accordance with the powers granted in 1893.

Will Visit Samoa.

AUCKLAND, N.Z., Oct. 26.—It is announced that either Premier Dodson or Minister Ward will visit Samoa in January with reference to the proposal of New Zealand to assume control of the islands.

Riot in Newark.

NEWARK, Oct. 26.—A mob of incensed Poles and Russian Jews, discarged hatters, surrounded the non-union hat manufactory of J. L. Kreidel this morning threatening death to Kreidel and his nephew. This message was sent to Kreidel: "Join the union or die in 24 hours."

THE RULING MARKETS.

TORONTO, Oct. 26, 1894.

On the street 500 bushels of wheat sold at 53c for white, 51c for red and 50 1-2 for goose; 4,000 of barley at 42c to 47c, and 800 of oats at 31c to 32c. Prices at outside railway points were unchanged. Wheat was freely offered at 49c. Canadian barley in Oswego is steady, with Canadian at 61c to 65c.

The tone of the London stock markets is still improving, but almost nothing is doing. South Americans were firmer on a further deal in the Argentine securities held by the Bank of England for the Baring estate. Americans were irregular.

At East Buffalo all told there were but 15 cars on sale, but that was more than enough, and what Canada dealers can be thinking of to ship choice fat lambs here to sell at $3.75 to $3.90, with the very best at $4 per cwt., duty included, is more than even commission men can understand. The run has been too heavy and should be restricted until colder weather sets in.

A decided interruption to the New York stock market apathy came in the shape of a break in prices for the coal stocks. The decline was more sensational than any which has overtaken this group during many months, and the anthracite properties were affected without exception. The selling, however, was not continuous and the low prices were scored as a rule in the opening half hour.

When a doctor considers it necessary to prescribe sarsaparilla, he simply orders a bottle of Ayer's, knowing full well that he will obtain thereby a surer and purer preparation than any other which the druggist can furnish. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the Superior Medicine.

Another Voice From Smith.

SMITH, July 7, 1892.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, and after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

ROBERT HALL.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the BEST makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

Death of Mr. Edward English.

We are sorry to have to chronicle the removal by death of another of Asphodel's old land-marks, in the person of Mr. Edward English, who departed this life on Wednesday evening, on lot 15, Con. 4, his home. Mr. English was born in the County of Tiperary, Ireland, in the year 1822. He came to Canada in '47 and settled on the farm where he died. Mr. English had the experience of an inexperienced person, in clearing up and making a home in the back-woods. The indomitable Irish courage knew no surrender, but what he did not know by practical experience, he learned in the school of adversity. In the year of 1858, he married Mary O'Donnell, who, with seven children, four boys and three girls, mourn his loss. Mr. English was an honest industrious man and succeeded in not only making a comfortable home for himself and family but leaves them provided for. We know what it is to pass through sudden bereavement and assure the sorrowing widow, children and friends they have the deepest sympathy of the whole community.—Hastings Star.

He Saw the Point.

One of the most frequent excuses offered in lieu of a contract to the advertising solicitor is something after this style : "Well, you see, our house is a very old one, founded many years ago, and we blew our horn all that was necessary at that time. We advertised then extensively, and now that we have become established and everybody knows us we think money spent in advertising would be a needless expenditure." An advertising man who had listened to some such talk not long ago said in reply : "I would like to ask you if you pay much attention to politics?" "Yes, to a certain extent," was the response. "Well, do you not consider the election of a governor in the State of New York an event of national importance, or at least of national interest?" Receiving an affirmative reply, he asked : "Can you readily recall to your mind the contestants in the race for the governorship in this State, say twenty-five years ago?" The inquired-of studied a moment and said he would have to give it up. Twenty-five years ago he could have answered the question at once, but in the constant change of events and issues the names of the contestants had gone from his memory. He saw the point. —Inland Printer.

THAT OUTFALL SEWER.

Will the Township Inaugurate the Filling in Process?

Although the township has had bills posted up advertising for fifty men to commence work to-morrow morning on filling in the new sewer, the town authorities still think that no action will be taken.

A number of citizens, however, are inclined to the belief that Monaghan will be as good as its word, and so there will be a crowd down at the sewer at seven o'clock in the morning to watch the proceedings.

Mr. Edmison, counsel for the township, thinks that if conciliatory measures were adopted by the town that Monaghan would come half way, and would not object to the building of the sewer on the condition that at the end of ten years it would be closed up if the township found itself being injured thereby.

The filling in of the sewer will benefit no one, while the harm which may result would be infinite, involving great expense, as such action would immediately bring on a lawsuit.

LATER.

[The town to-day obtained an interim injunction restraining the township from filling in or interfering with the portion of the sewer works already constructed.

Dublin Porter.

H. Calcutt, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—I was recommended to use your Dublin Porter last July, as I was affected with weakness and debility. I am happy to say that I gained 19 lbs. in seven (7) weeks. Mr. C. N. Brown can testify as I was weighed on his scales.

His Skull Was Almost Punctured.

The earthly career of Mr. George Giroux, of the Trent Valley Canal offices, was nearly cut short, this morning, when he received a stunning blow on the head by running into a water pipe, which projects from the rear of the Central school building. Mr. Geroux was taking a short cut between the building and the woodpile, and in dodging his head around a projecting stick of wood, he found the pipe just in the same place where he found it last summer, when he unexpectedly encountered it. The wound inflicted is a nasty one, the skull being almost punctured and Mr. Giroux had to be taken into the building and the wound washed before he could proceed on his way to the office.

The "Georgia Magnet" Fake.

Annie Abbott, the "Georgia Magnet," according to actor J. Walter Kennedy, is not much in the wonder line after all. Kennedy delivered an impromptu lecture in the Grand Union this morning on what he termed the Abbott fakes, and referred to her treatment of him in New York, and her refusal to meet him on the stage or privately while they were both in Montreal, and his consequent challenge in that city, with a deposit of $250 as a guarantee. Under Kennedy's direction, most of the Abbott feats which excite the wonder of the Georgia Magnet's audiences were duplicated.—Montreal Exchange. Mr. R. M. Roy, of Peterborough, openly expressed the opinion that the "Georgia Magnet" when here was simply a big fake and offered to duplicate almost any of her feats.

Died in Marquette, Michigan.

Last night Mr. J. M. Donovan, grocer, corner Charlotte and Park streets, was informed bo telegram of the death at Marquette, Michigan, on Wednesday night at 6 o'clock, of his brother, Thomas Donovan, who was well known in Peterborough, from which he went to the United States some six or seven years ago. There are no particulars as to the cause of his death, though Mr. Martin, the inspector of the British Empire Assurance Company, with which deceased carried a policy of $1,000 is taking the most active measures to ascertain the cause of death, so that in accordance with the practice of the company he may pay over the $1,000 the moment proof of death is forthcoming. The deceased was about 32 years of age. The body is expected to arrive in town some time to-morrow, and accompanying it will perhaps be particulars of the nature of the illness and death of Mr. Donovan.

A Runaway's Mad Career Down George Street.

A runaway horse attached to a cart careered wildly down George street this morning, and pedestrians hastily sought convenient doorways until the galloping steed passed by. The street was quickly thronged in the rear of the horse, for as soon as he flashed by a store the clerks cleared the counters and flocked out into the roadway in order to see the climax of the runaway's mad race. The majority however were disappointed as the horse ran on down to Charlotte street where it turned and crossed the market square and tore up Water street to Hunter where it wheeled at the corner and ran into the Morgan House yard, where a wheel was taken off by the hub catching on a post. This was the only damage received by either horse or rig. Mr. James Patterson is the owner of the outfit.

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—Additional local matter on eighth page.

—Hiawatha Encampment meets this evening.

—The Lindsay council has decided to levy market fees hereafter.

—The Tudhope carriage works have decided to stay in Orillia. They were apparently unable to induce any other town to purchase their establishment with a bonus.

—A team of horses were so badly frightened by an approaching trolley on Charlotte street last night, that they bolted up on the sidewalk just in front of the rink. No damage was done.

—G. T. R. Detective Hanna, who was connected with the ferreting out of the recent charges brought against the main line conductors, came up to Peterborough from Belleville, on the early morning train.

—A bed of broken stone and gravel is being placed in the depression on both sides of George street between Hunter and Simcoe. The water did not run off the street easily and in consequence the ditch will be filled.

—If everybody knew everything, and particularly their own want, there would be no need of advertising. But the fact is that nine-tenths of the people do not know they really want a new thing until they see it advertised.

—Who hath wormy dried apples; who hath fly soiled ginghams: who hath calicos made "befo de war:" who hath stale baking powder without end? He that knoweth not the way of the printer. The man who advertiseth not.—Exchange.

—Several car loads of excellent stone from the Longford quarries passed through on the G. T. R., to-day for Fraserville for the Wallace Point bridge, which the Central Bridge Works Co. is erecting. The blocks were huge in dimensions and of good grain.

—Little nine year old Sadie Waram, daughter of Mr. Richard Waram, jr., succumbed last night to an attack of scarlet fever from which she has only been suffering for the past few days. The child was a bright little girl and a great favourite amongst her playmates.

—The Simpson hunting party of Lindsay, are having great luck out at Concession Lake. On Tuesday they sent up no less than six fine deer for shipment to Toronto friends, besides two fine quarters for Lindsay friends. They report royal sport and a good time generally.

—The man who only devotes a week to the advertisement of a new thing, and then rails because he did not get good returns, is like the boy who studied with a lawyer for two days and then came home and said, "The law ain't what it's cracked cracked up to be. I'm sorry I learned it.

—Rev. J. C. Davidson has objected to the EXAMINER's use of his name in connection with the case of desertion, which was mentioned in last evening's issue, and which came only causually under his notice. Others, he states, have taken a greater interest in the matter than himself.

—Some Rice Lake Indians were in Mr. John Craig's store the othar day making some purchases, and upon leaving the premises forgot their dog and left it asleep under one of the tables. The collie presently awoke and missing his master took a flying leap through the plate glass in the door.

—There are several ways to run a newspaper, but I must say the best way is told in the following :—A Western editor once invited correspondence as to the best way to conduct his paper, and the man who hit the nail squarely replied anonymously, on a postal card : "Run it as you d——d please."—Pease's Anoka Uunion.

—The police should look after a tramp who is making Peterborough his headquarters at present. He sells tracts which purport to contain an account of his life, and his modus operandi seems to be to scare defenseless females into purchasing this literature. If they do not scare quickly they are treated to a flood of profanity; such at least was the experience of a Murray street young lady last night.

—Mr. Fred. Warner of Hastings purchased a fine cow at Mr. Jaynes' sale on Thursday. On his way home the cow stumbled, and in falling caught her horn in a little rise of ground and broke her neck. Mr. Warner seems to be unfortunate. Only a few years ago his horses took fright near the Norwood Woollen Mills and ran into the millpond and were drowned.

—It is not generally known that the Coboconk section of the G. T. R. has been thoroughly ballasted and the regulation steel rails supplemented in place of the old Nipissing rails, and in so far as road bed is now concerned, speed equal to a Chicago flyer can be indulged in. It is thought that a reduction of nearly one hour will soon be made in the time allowance between Lindsay and Coboconk.

—A supposed burglar resolved into a hilarious drunk, who had lost his way and drifted into a hen house in the north end, last night. A telephone message summoned the police and the man was put in the lock up. The magistrate remarked that although the circumstances were suspicious, he would only impose a fine of two dollars and costs, yet if the prisoner ever compromised himself again in a like manner it go hard with him.

—A well-known lawyer gives the following as the rights on the public highways in towns and cities : The streets belong to teams, and vehicles and pedestrians have no more business upon them than the teams would have upon the walks. The crossings at the street corners belong to pedestrians, who have right of way there by law, and against teams. Many drivers ignore the law, and dash over the crossings, endangering the lives of the pedestrians, without thinking they are violating the law. No vehicle or horse can within the law be driven rapidly over the crossing, nor can the driver obstruct the crossing.

IT WAS NOT TRUE.

To the Editor of the Examiner :

DEAR SIR,—Noticing in your valuable paper last night under the heading "River Riplets" an item wherein it was stated that the steamer Lillian, which is owned by me, and her unlicensed crew had towed some lumber from town for use on Hale's bridge. Now, Mr. Editor, this is not true, as my boat was not built to tow lumber nor will she, for she is quite able to support herself without having to come down to towing lumber. I am inclined to believe that your correspondent must have been some near-sighted coon who ought to have had his "specks" on, or else a hanger-on around one of the boats on the river, the owners of which are jealous of me because. I choose to take a few friends down the river for a few days' fun. You would hear nothing about it if the party had gone down on one of the regular boats. This last supposition I believe to be the correct one. Thanking you Mr. Editor for your space. I remain respectfully yours,

JOHN CARVETH.

THE AIR IS REDOLENT OF TRAGEDY.

Murderous Threats Made and the Author Allowed to be at Large.

—. —— is in rather a bad way. His wife has left him and he has brooded so much over this and over the fact that she is residing with another man, that a naturally excitable temperament has been worked up to fever heat, and the man is afraid of himself—afraid of what he might do in case he met the woman and afraid of what might result if he is left to himself.

Last night he went into the police station and related his troubles and his fears in so graphic a manner that he was promptly placed behind the bars, and kept out of mischief for one night anyway. This morning a charge of drunkenness was preferred against him and he pleaded guilty lest a worst evil might befall him. The magistrate imposed a fine of two dollars and costs, and allowed the man to go; but the night in the cells did not appear to have cooled his brain any and to day he is again walking around complaining bitterly of his lot and uttering vague threats of the mischief he may get into unless he leaves town.

In case ——— carries out the murderous threats, in which he is indulging, all the blame cannot be thrown upon him, as the local department of justice is in full possession of the facts of the case, but appear strangely negligent in making provisions to defeat the man's evident intentions.

The man with whom his wife is living is the husband of this man's sister, but the latter does not reside with him. The affair altogether is a strangely mixed up one.

BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL INTERESTS.

At the great Baptist Convention held in St. Thomas, the fourth annual report of the Sunday School Committee showed 356 Sunday Schools reported this year against 357 last year, out of a total apparent number of 410 this year against 407 last. There were 34,513 scholars, an increase of 1,903 over 1893. The average attendance had increased from 23,140 to 23,981 in all, about 70 per cent. of the number enrolled. Teachers and officers numbered 4,088, against 3,930 in 1893. The attendance at Bible class was 5,505, an increase of 307. Six thousand one hundred and four scholars are now members of the church; 3,405 were added by baptism from the Sunday school during the year. The contributions from the children for the year were $17,070, an increase of $854 over 1893, of which $2,168 went to home missions, 2,005 to foreign missions, and $13,477, or nearly 84 per cent. of the whole, was expended upon the schools themselves.

COURT LANGTON GIVES AN ENJOYABLE CONCERT.

An Attractive Programme Rendered by Local Talent.

Bro. A. L. Rundle occupied the chair last evening at a concert given in the spacious lodge room of Court Langton, Canadian Order of Foresters, for the benefit of the funds of the lodge.

The following programme was presented:

Bro. McKenzie ..... vocal solo
Bro. S. Smithson ..... reading
Mr. W. J. Squires ..... vocal solo
Mr. P. Butcher ..... comic song
Miss Long ..... vocal solo
Misses Belleghem ..... vocal duet
Mess s. Squires, McKenzie, Hiller and Gray .. [vocal quartette
A. Reynolds ..... comic song
Messrs. Butcher, Hiller and Reynolds .... vocal [trio
P. Owens ..... piano solo

Wholton's orchestra which was present, rendered a number of appropriate selections during the evening, which were greatly enjoyed, as was every number on the programme. The humorous selections of Messrs. Reynolds and Butcher were very taking, and the "Song of the Soldier," and "Farewell," by the quartette were given in excellent taste.

At the conclusion of the programme an informal hop was held, and for a couple of hours about three score of those who were present tripped it merrily to music furnished by Wholton's orchestra.

Court Langton is to be congratulated for presenting so attractive a programme.

BEFORE THE COUNTY MAGISTRATE.

One Case is Enlarged and the Other Adjourned.

As all the witnesses in the "cruelty to animals" case were not available, this morning, County Magistrate Edmison enlarge the case until Monday morning.

In the arson case, the prosecution did not materialize. County Crown Attorney Wood was around, but as he understood Mr. E. B. Stone was looking after the evidence for the private prosecutor, he had not acquainted himself with the facts of the case. Mr. Stone, it is said, is out of town and altogether it looks as though the case would fall through. To give the prosecution another chance of filing an appearance, the case was adjourned until this afternoon, when the defendant will be dismissed if no one appears against him.

Also a great variety of other fancy parlor tables in choice woods, and an artistic line of highly finished antique oak chairs, with cobler seats of embossed leather, and a larger line of floor rockers at greatly reduced prices, in fact we have so many new things that we have no space this week to enumerate them. PUT UP —in glass vials, hermetically sealed, and always fresh—is the way Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets come. When you take pills it's an important point to have them small—provided they have equal strength and efficacy. You'll find what you want in these little liver pills of Dr. Pierce. They're put up in a better way, and they act in a better way, than the huge old-fashioned pills. What you want when you're "all out of sorts"—grumpy, thick-headed and take a gloomy view of life, is these Pellets to clear up your system and start your liver into healthful action. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, are prevented, relieved, and cured. They're the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

JOHN BULL IN AFRICA.

The Crafty Old Gentleman Now Owns About 1,400,000 Square Miles.

The latest acquisition of African territory gives Great Britain an unbroken line across the length of Africa from the Mediterranean and the Nile to the extreme point of the continent. In all, this territory, held in various ways, from Cape Colony up to the "occupation" of Egypt, is in extent about 1,400,000 square miles, and has a population of 30,000,000. In the Nile Valley it includes incomparably the best of North Africa. In Uganda it holds the key to the lakes of central Africa, nearly as large as our own lake system. The new treaty gives it the high land west of Lake Tanganyika, considerably higher and healthier than the eastern, in German hands. The new conquests of the British South Africa Company add the great table lands of the interior of subtropical Africa, in much of which white men live. Lastly, there is Cape Colony, the only vital European settlement in all Africa. As it stands, this great highway holds two-thirds of all of Africa in which Europeans can live and carry on efficient administration. It has the most fertile tract in the continent in Egypt, its healthiest in Cape Town, its greatest gold mines and the only region from which tropical Africa can be controlled. Still more important is its relation to African water courses. A steamer can start at Alexandria and run, when the mahdi's successor is cleared away, to a point on Albert Edward Nyanza, 125 miles from Lake Tanganyika. This runs to within seventy miles of Lake Nyassa. From this lake the Shire River, broken at Murchison Falls, descends to the Zambesi and the Indian Ocean. From a navigable point on the Congo it is less than 100 miles to Lake Tanganyika. The Aruwimi runs as near the Nile. It is possible to start at the mouth of the Zambesi and reach the mouth of the Congo or Nile with less than 200 miles of land to travel, and the key and centre to this great system is now in English hands.

How to Live a Century.

First, live as much at possible out of doors, never letting a day pass without spending at least three or four hours in the open air.

Second, keep all the powers of mind and body occupied in congenial work. The muscles should be developed and the mind kept active.

Third, avoid excesses of all kinds, whether of food, drink or of whatever nature they may be. Be moderate in all things.

Fourth, never despair. Be cheerful at all times. Never give way to anger. Never let the trials of one day pass over to the next.

The period from fifty to seventy-five should not be passed in idleness or abandonment of all work. Here is where a great many men fail. They resign all care and interest in worldly affairs and rest of body and mind begins. They throw up their business and retire to private life, which in too many cases proves to be a suicidal policy.

During the next period—the period from seventy-five to one hundred years, while powers of life are at their lowest ebb—one cannot be too careful about catching cold. Bronchitis is a most prolific cause of death in the aged. During this last period rest should be in abundance.

Anybody who can follow these directions ought to live to be one hundred years old at least. There is always this comfort, however; if we cannot live up to our ideas always, we can at least, try our best to do so, and the steady effort will be bringing us constantly nearer them.

ENGLAND'S POLICY.

Rosebery States the Government's Position in the Oriental War.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Lord Rosebery made an important speech at Sheffield last evening. He would, he said, state in general terms the Government's policy in regard to China and Japan. It was impossible to regard with indifference a possible sudden destruction of the central government of China, a government already none too strong. Its destruction would involve appaling danger to every Christian in the Chinese empire and overflow of dangerous and barbarous elements on to every adjoining part of the world, involving the gravest possible catastrophe to Asiatic civilization.

After the first Japanese victory the British Government had learned from a very high and most convincing source that China was willing to concede honorable terms, materially exceeding Japanese demands when the war was entered upon and such as Japan could certainly accept without lessening her prestige or advantage. The ministry felt that they could not absolutely "pocket" these and they did not found great hopes upon overtures, but they thought it was their duty to sound countries of Europe and the United States to ascertain whether in their opinion there was any possibility of China and Japan coming to terms on the basis indicated. The reception of Great Britain's approaches was remarkably favorable. The European powers seemed to feel that a common calamity overhung them, but one or two judged that the time had not arrived when conditions could with advantage be submitted to the combatants. Personally, he was rather inclined to concur with the latter. It might be asked why he had consulted the powers at all, why he had not acted alone. He would reply that in a great catastrophe of this kind the more powers there were engaged in efforts toward peace, so much the better was the prospect of their attaining their object. He believed that whenever it was possible every British foreign minister should obtain a concert of the powers in important international affairs, and in such a case as the present the foreign minister would have been culpable if he had not sought a concert of the powers. Moreover, in the jealous condition of affairs the war had produced it would have been impossible for Great Britain to attempt to act as bottle-holder without incurring the suspicion of the other powers and all interested in the East.

IT BREAKS UP HOMES.

Peculiar Result of a Pennsylvania Divines Teachings.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 26.—The preaching of Rev. Dr. W. J. McCrory, pastor of the Free Presbyterian church, of Rochester, Pa., has created a sensation throughout the Beaver valley His recent discourses urging the application of the biblical laws concerning unequal marriages has caused trouble in several homes and may lead to divorce proceedings.

He based his statements on a portion of the verse of the sixth chapter of the second Epistle to the Corinthians which reads: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness and what communion hath light with darkness." These utterances were literally accepted. A dozen or more engagements between young people have been unceremoniously severed while at least three instances women who have been for some time married and are mothers of families have also accepted the doctrine and declined to further continue the marital relations.

A PRINTER'S ILLS.

A Brantford Compositor has Diabetes—He Drops 40 Pounds in Weight in a Short Time—How He Was Cured.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 15.—Thos Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier in this city, has seen some ups and downs in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr. Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six boxes worked a complete cure. Mr. Hazelhurst is to-day better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

S. P. SMITH, of Towanda, Pa., whose constitution was completely broken down, is cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He writes:

"For eight years, I was, most of the time, a great sufferer from constipation, kidney trouble, and indigestion, so that my constitution seemed to be completely broken down. I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and took nearly seven bottles, with such excellent results that my stomach, bowels, and kidneys are in perfect condition, and, in all their functions, as regular as clock-work. At the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, my weight was only 129 pounds; I now can brag of 159 pounds, and was never in so good health. If you could see me before and after using, you would want me for a traveling advertisement. I believe this preparation of Sarsaparilla to be the best in the market to-day."

A NOCTURNE.

The moonlight falls upon thy hair
And turns its gold to molten silver,
It shines across thy nutting eyes
And sets their shining orbs aquiver.

We hear the music from afar,
The dancers yet are lightly tripping,
While fast the hours on wings of bliss
Toward the morn are swiftly slipping.

We've left the crush and glaring lights,
The hot perfume of withered flowers,
And found a cool, secluded spot
Amidst the garden's moonlit bowers.

I sit beside thee, yet far away
Thy heart is in another's keeping,
I hush the words of love I feel
Lest thou shouldst know my inward weeping.

The music sounds a sobbing waltz,
An echo of my heart's sad sorrow,
I gaze within thine eyes once more,
For I must leave thee on the morrow.

Thou'lt wed the one thou lovest best,
While I become a hopeless rover,
The music's hushed, the dance is done,
Good night—a sigh, and all is over.

The moonlight falls upon thy hair
And turns its gold to molten silver,
It shines on thee, but ah, on me
The shadows fall, to rest forever.

THE FUSSY MAN.

He Does More Than He Thinks to Spoil a Home.

If there is one thing a real womanly woman despises more than another it is a fussy man. She can never overlook effeminate qualities in the other sex; yet there are certain little qualities of character make-up not essentially masculine that go such a long way toward making her lot a happier one. The helpful man need not be a Miss Nancy by any means because he sees to putting away his clothes instead of leaving them strewn about for the wife to gather up. He is not one whit less manly because he does not throw cigar ashes on the floor, but puts them in the place allotted for such debris.

Some lords of creation, spoiled from boyhood by mothers and sisters who waited on them hand and foot, do not realize the amount of unnecessary work they cause their wives by habits of negligence so easily conquered if only they would think a little.

Very few men realize what a well-kept, pleasant home means to a wife. They cannot understand the genuine affection women have for chairs and tables, and that a scratch on one or a stain on the other is a real wound to their feelings. Of course men appreciate a perfect ensemble, but so few help their wives to keep up this high standard. Comfort suggests putting up the feet on the window sill—up they go; result, paint spoiled and woodwork marred—wife naturally vexed. Comfort suggests leaning back in a spindle-legged chair with head resting on delicately-tinted wall paper. The only wonder in this case is that the result is not far more disastrous than it usually is, and that the ease-loving gentleman does not get a much-deserved tumble. In a dozen ways a man unwittingly adds to his wife's labors, while a tiny bit of thought, which means no diminution of his personal comfort, would so materially augment hers. Easy-going husbands, who seldom think, begin to think now.—Philadelphia Times.

Dulcin and Dogs.

Dulcin, or sucrol, a new sweetening agent, which is said to be from 200 to 250 times as sweet as sugar, was first produced by J. Berlinerblau. Structurally it must be described as para-phenacetol carbamid. It is an aromatic uric acid derivative related to phenacetin. It is a white powder which melts at 173 degrees C. to 174 degrees C., and is soluble in about 800 parts of water at 15 degrees C., fifty parts of boiling water, and twenty-five parts of a cold 90 per cent. solution of alcohol. These particulars are taken from a contribution by Professor Kobert, of Dorpat, to the Centralblatt fur Innere Medicin. Particulars as to its physiological effects are also given. Dogs seems comparatively senseless to Dulcin, dying with such evidences of blood destruction as icterus, while rabbits appear to be quite impervious to its influence. Professor Kobert relates his own experience with the drug in the case of cats. These animals reveal no evidence of blood destruction, but seem to die with symptoms of cerebral paralysis; this is also the manner of death of frogs subjected to subcutaneous injections of dulcin. These are, of course, the extreme effects of poisonous doses. In the relatively small doses necessary for sweetening the food of diabetic patients and the obese, Professor Kobert considers the agent harmless, and mentions a case in which eight grammes were taken daily for three weeks with impunity. The Lancet says it is quite evident, however, from the physiological experiences related that care is necessary in the use of this article.

The oldest armchair in the world, it is reputed, is the throne once used by Queen Hatafu, who flourished in Egypt 1600 B. C. It is so hardened with age as to appear to be made of black marble.

There is no better medicine for family use than Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Their sugar-coating makes them easy and even agreeable to take, and as they contain no calomel or other injurious drug, they are perfectly safe for patients of any age.

A Remarkable Event.

An event which has been the talk of the town for some weeks is the cure of Mr. Edward White, whose sufferings from Salt Rheum (Eczema) were well known. Mr. White's statement is as follows:

For 12 years previous to the last few months I have been a sufferer of the worst kind from Salt Rheum. I tried twelve different doctors, besides many patent medicines but received no benefit, but gradually became worse. Last January I was advised to try B. B. B. by the postmaster here. I soon perceived a decided change for the better, and it only took six bottles to make a complete cure.

Mr. J. B. Bowser, Merchant; Mr. Jas. W. Boyer, Manufacturer, and Mr. Thos. W. Letson, J. P., can certify to the truth of the above statement.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumorous form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause from Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

THREE RUNNING SORES
PHYSICIANS FAILED
BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION
UNENDURABLE ITCHING
Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B.B.B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

GREATEST OF WARRIORS

INCIDENTS IN THE LIFE OF THE FIRST NAPOLEON.

The Famine in Paris—Some of the "Tramplers'" Sayings—His Scheme to Fly to America After Waterloo—A Yankee Who Was to Help Him.

After the thirteenth Vandemaire, when Napoleon Bonaparte was really in the position of dictator of Paris, he had to contend against a famine that made public distribution of bread necessary. Naturally the scarcity of food was liable to become a serious element in the politics of the time. It was essential to look carefully to the state of feeling in the mob, which had so often proved itself capable of overthrowing an administration. Napoleon was walking along the street with a pair of his staff one morning after the distribution of bread had been insufficient, and tumultuous scenes were occurring in front of the doors of the bakers. As the officers passed the crowd jeered at them. One woman, monstrously big and fat, made herself conspicuous by wild gesticulation. "All that crowd of epaulet wearers are making a laughing stock of us!" she exclaimed bitterly. "If they can eat and grow fat it's all the same to them if poor people are starving."

Napoleon stopped and interrupted her. "My good woman," he said, "look me over carefully and tell me which of us two is the fatter just now."

Napoleon at that time was as thin as a rail. He says himself: "I was like a sheet of parchment." The crowd took in the situation at once and broke into laughter and cheers. The story was told all over Paris, and had a very appreciable influence in calming the irritation of the populace.

Early in April, 1797, the people of Austria demanded peace with France. Negotiations were begun in the vicinity of Leoben. Bonaparte, in an interview with the Austrian plenipotentiaries, said to them: "Your government has sent against me four armies without generals and this time a general without an army." In the treaty which the Austrian commissioners projected the first article stipulated that the Emperor of Austria thereby recognized the French republic. "Erase it!" exclaimed Napoleon. "The existence of the republic is as plain as the sun. This article is only fit for the blind. We are our own masters, and shall establish any government we prefer. If one day the French people," he continued, "should wish to create a monarchy, the emperor might object that he had recognized a republic." The preliminaries were soon settled, Napoleon signing for France, thus placing himself on an equal footing with the emperor of Austria. The formal treaty known as Campo Formio was signed in October, 1797, Austria fulfilling the pledges she had already given. The Austrian plenipotentiary protested against the distribution of the provinces beyond the Adige. Napoleon was angered at this and seizing a vase dashed it to the ground, exclaiming: "If it is not so arranged I will break your monarchy as I have broken this vase!" This argument of force, as demonstrated to the diplomat, was convincing, and the treaty was signed.

In the early days of the century S. P. Wilder, a prominent Boston business man, established himself comfortably in Paris. Through his business, political, and religious relations, he was soon widely known and his house became a rendezvous for such men as Baron de Stael and Lafayette. Talleyrand, too, was an occasional comer. He was in Paris during all the vicissitudes of the empire. He saw the emperor's sun rise at Austerlitz and set at Waterloo. On the dissolution of the empire his personal knowledge of Napoleon and his observations of the material prosperity of the land led him to take a lively interest in the fate of the unthroned monarch and propose plans for his escape.

Meanwhile, on an occasional trip to this country, Mr. Wilder had married and purchased an ideal pastoral home in Bolton village, thirty miles west of Boston.

Here it was Mr. Wilder offered the fugitive Napoleon a home. Strange reversion of circumstances! It was but five short years before that Mr. Wilder had represented our government at the emperor's marriage with Maria Louisa, the emperor's guest at the Tuileries.

In July of that tremendous year, 1815, Mr. Wilder had merchant vessels lying off the French coast. Napoleon had abdicated and was at Malmaison, considering what yet might be done. Nothing could be done. He determined to leave the France "he had loved so well." He would fly to the United States. Various schemes were suggested, most of which are recorded in history; and history tells us they failed because it was deemed impossible to elude the British cruisers.

Mr. Wilder, however, conceived that he, well known and respected as an American merchant, and controlling the ships laden under his direction, could avoid this difficulty. He communicated his plans to the emperor. The emperor was to be conducted to the coast disguised as Mr. Wilder's valet, for whom Mr. Wilder had already a passport. Arrived at the coast the gentleman and his valet would embark on an American merchantman. This ship was to be supplied with a huge cask, placed so as to be plainly visible from the deck. This cask was to have false compartments near the end, from which water was constantly to drip. Napoleon was to be smuggled under this and to stay there till the vessel stood well out to sea beyond the reach of the English-men-of war.

On reaching the New England shore the emperor, still in disguise, was to accompany Mr. Wilder to his lovely homestead at Bolton. Here he was to remain incognito for six months, wandering around the antique porticos and embowered lanes, exclaiming (we presume): "Vanity of vanities! All is vanity, saith the preacher." But it remained for other hills to echo that voice.

This plan Napoleon seriously considered and declared it feasible, but finally declined, saying he would not desert his faithful friends who had clung to him through prosperity and adversity.

DEDICATORY SERVICES IN HAVELOCK.

ROYAL LODGE. I. O. O. F.

Ceremonies Attendant on the Occupancy of the New Apartments—Speeches by Prominent Members of the Order—A Concert and Supper—Many Visitors Present.

The new Oddfellow's Hall in Dr. Jeff's block, Havelock, was dedicated yesterday, and many members of the order from Peterborough went down for the occasion.

These beautiful apartments which have recently been acquired by the branch of the order which is located in the village, are four in number and have been most handsomely fitted up. The dedicatory functions were conducted by Grand Master P.G.M. Jolliffe, of Campbellford, assisted by Grand Marshal, P. G. Bro. R. J. Stewart; Grand Warden, P.G. Bro. E. Greer; Grand Chaplain, Bro. J. Knox; Grand Herald's, P. G's. Cowie, Morrow and Johnston, and V. G. Bro. Jos. McClelland.

The proceedings were both interesting and impressive and were attended by many Havelock people.

The Rev. Mr. Jolliffe gave an eloquent oration, descriptive of the order, its objects and its aims.

In the evening a grand concert was given by Royal Lodge, which was largely attended.

Mr. Johnson of Peterborough, ably discharged the duties of chairman. Rev. Dr. McClelland and Rev. Mr. Williams made short and interesting speeches, and the following programme was rendered:—

Opening ode	choir
Chorus
Piano solo	Prof. Davies, Norwood
Solo, 'The Pilgrim's Father'	Rev. C. H. Coon
Club swinging	W. H. Bundy, Claremont
Solo, 'The Exile's Lament'	Miss Pengelly
Piano solo	Prof. Davies
Solo, 'Drifting with the Tide'	Miss Johnson
Solo, 'Anchored'	Mr. Webber, Norwood
Addresses	Rev. Messrs. McClelland, Coon and Williams
Address	Past Grand Master, Rev. Bro. T.W. Jolliffe

Before Bro. Jolliffe's address, the ladies of Havelock made a presentation of the following address, accompanied by a handsome Bible to the Lodge:

To the N. G. Officers and Members of Royal Lodge, No. 280, I.O.O.F.:

The wives of the Oddfellows of this village desire to congratulate you on the completion and dedication of your new hall. We hope that with increased facilities for doing your work that you may be encouraged in that work by a deeper interest in Oddfellowship as well as by a larger accession to your membership. As women we feel a lively interest in the order, as it stands out prominently as the friend of our sex. When the bread winner of the family has been laid aside the payment of weekly benefits has helped in no small degree to lessen the anxiety of wives and mothers as to the matter of daily bread. The kindly visits of the sick committee in times of affliction has helped to make the burden lighter. We wish to show our appreciation of your work so that you may still be encouraged to persevere. We are glad to know that a lodge is not lawfully opened unless a copy of the Word of God lies upon the altar. We, therefore, ask your acceptance of this Bible for the use of the lodge, and sincerely trust that each and all may profit by the instruction herein contained. To each of us it should be the guide of our life, directing all our thoughts, words and deeds, inspiring us to live so that when life is done, we may find a home in that city of which God is the glory and the light.

MRS. CURTIS, Chairman,
MRS. BURNETT, Secretary.

At the conclusion of the rendition of the programme, a most elaborate supper was served, which was greatly enjoyed by the 300 guests, who participated.

Altogether the dedicatory functions connected with the occupancy of their new rooms by the members of Royal Lodge will long be remembered, with pleasure, by the villagers and the many visitors, who participated in the ceremonies.

The local brethren who had charge of the arrangements are to be largely credited with the smoothness with which the programme in all respects was carried out.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

LACROSSE.

Mr. Ed. Brown has just received word from the Capital Lacrosse club of Ottawa, announcing their determination not to play off the tie game this year. The Shamrocks have not as yet been heard from. It is difficult of comorehension to understand why Peterborough should have been asked to make an offer for the match if there was not any intention of playing it.

THE TURF.

A well-known horseman was heard to remark the other day that "you can't just always tell what horse is going to trot," and pointed out that Judge Daly, by Phil Rysdyk, is now reported to be going very fast. When Mr. J. J. Daly disposed of his stock of horses after quitting the hotel business in Lindsay, this gelding was sold for $90, if our memory serves us right, to Mr. Richard Spratt, who in turn sold him to Peterborough parties. It will thus be seen that our wise men have arrived at the opinion that there was no "go" in the Judge. Since then he has developed into a great road horse, and his value and reputation have alike gone up, and we are credibly informed that one day last week, five watches were held on him and he made a mile on the Peterborough track in 2.30½. In addition to this it is claimed for him that he is the handsomest roadster in that town.—Lindsay Watchman. The gelding in question is not Judge Daly, but Harry B. It is owned by Mr. Harry LeBrun and covered the mile as stated in 2.30½.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Plans and Specifications May be Consulted on Monday.

The Toronto Empire's Ottawa correspondent writes that journal as follows: "Plans and specifications for the Trent Canal work may be consulted at the department here, or at the superintending engineer's office, Peterborough, on and after Monday next. The advertisement calling for tenders is out. Offers will be received at the department until November 17th, for the construction of about 5½ miles of canal on the Simcoe and Balsam Lake division, and also for the construction of about 3¼ miles on the Peterborough and Lakefield division. An accepted bank cheque for $7,500 must accompany the tender for each division."

Protect your Horses.

Don't allow your valuable horses to go without a waterproof cover during the cold wet days of the fall. Be good to them, provide them with one of Kingscotte's strictly waterproof covers, costing only a dollar or two. If you are shipping and receiving goods that are liable to damage from wet, Kingscotte's black oiled canvas waterproof covers "fills the bill,"—nothing better or cheaper. They have no tar in their composition, being an oil preparation, which keeps them soft and pliable. Awnings taken down and stored in a careful and agreeable manner. HUSTLING HAVELOCK.

From Our Own Correspondent

The Presbyterian dinner, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 22nd, was a grand success, among, if not the best, ever held. The capacious tables, in the basement of the church, were filled again and again with eager and hungry guests, many of whom came a long distance. After the dinner was over, an adjournment was made to the body of the church, where an interesting programme was gone through. The chair was occupied by the pastor of the church, Rev. A. M. McClelland, D. C. L. Very nice music was rendered by the choir. A duet by Misses Watson and Carey was well rendered. A trio by Miss Lumsden, Mrs. McClelland and Miss Pengelly was much admired. Mr. Gould and son with guitar and mouth organ accompaniment, were greeted with deserved applause. Mr. Alex. Rose gave a very fine recitation and Mrs. Rose, a reading which was well received. Speeches were given by the following reverend gentlemen, viz., Messrs. Somerville, of Norwood; Peak, Methodist, of South Dummer; Coon, (Methodist) and William, (Episcopal) of Havelock, and Thompson, of Hastings. The speeches were all exceedingly good and were appreciated by the large audience.

The funeral of young Mr. Pacey took place yesterday, and was very large. The Rev. Mr. William preached the funeral sermon.

Mr. Blake in the Graveyard City.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.—At the Academy of Music last night Hon. Edward Blake addressed a large and enthusiastic audience upon the subject of home rule for Ireland. Mr. Blake's address was delivered under the auspices of the Philadelphia council of the Irish National Federation of America. The address in itself was a masterpiece of eloquence, and Mr. Blake was frequently interrupted by the enthusiastic cheering of his auditors, whose sympathy with the cause he represented was shown in a practical manner by the liberal contributions that were given at the close of the meeting.

Republican War Cry.

BUFFALO, Oct. 26.—The Evening News in a political editorial yesterday evening, said: The free lumber clause is rapidly driving the business away from this city and the neighboring city of Tonawanda to Canada. Canadian workmen will find employment while American workmen will remain idle. Already one lumber mill at Tonawanda has been stripped of its machinery, which has been sent to Canada.

Valuable Find of Zinc and Lead.

NEW LISBON, Oct. 26.—A few days ago while Newton Johnson & Co. were sinking an oil well in Union Township, Carroll County, the drill passed through a vein of lead several feet in thickness, 45 feet below the surface. Directly beneath the lead was found a vein of zinc 14 feet thick. It is said that the lead assays 85 per cent and the zinc 40 per cent.

The Crew Saved.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The crew of the Danish schooner Helene, who were supposed to have perished by the explosion of the vessel's cargo of gunpowder in the North Sea, arrived at Leith yesterday in the Helene's boats.

International Rating Rule.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—At a meeting of the Yacht Racing Association yesterday it was decided not to attempt to establish an international rating rule. It was resolved to amend the existing rules, and a committee of ten was appointed to recommend what amendment is desirable, and to take steps to have such amendment adopted.

Seven Years Without a Birthday.

A Scottish clergyman who died thirty years ago—Mr. Leishman, of Kinross—used to tell that he once lived seven years without a birthday. The statement puzzled most who heard it. They could see that if he had been born on the 29th of February he would have no birthday except in a leap year. But leap year comes once in four years, and this accounts for a gap of three years old. Their first thought would, therefore, naturally be that the old man, who, in fact, was fond of a harmless jest, was somehow jesting about the years. There was, however, no joke or trick in his assertion.

At the present time there can be very few, if there be any, who have this tale to tell of themselves, for one who can tell it must have been born on the 29th day of February at least ninety-eight years ago. But a similar line of missing dates is now soon to return; and, indeed, there are, no doubt, some readers who will have only one birthday to celebrate for nearly twenty years to come.

The solution of the puzzle is to be found in the fact, which does not appear to be widely known, that the year 1800 was not a leap year, and 1900 will not be. The February of 1892 had twenty-nine days, but in all the seven years intervening between 1896 and 1904, as well as in the three between 1893 and 1896, that month will have only twenty-eight.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A CRISIS IN GERMANY

Chancellor Von Caprivi and Count Zuelenburg Resign.

DOES IT MEAN A NEW POLICY

Caprivi Called a Council of the Federal Ministers Without Notifying the Emperor and This May Have Something to Do with the Change.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—The report that Chancellor von Caprivi has handed his resignation to the Emperor is confirmed. Count Zuelenburg, president of the Ministerial Council, has also resigned. Dr. Miquel, Prussian Finance Minister, has been appointed President of the Council. Prince von Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst, Governor of Alsace-Lorraine, was offered the Chancellorship, but declined. Before offering the Chancellorship to Prince Hohenlohe, Emperor William consulted with the envoys from Bavaria, Wurtemburg, Saxony and Baden. It is reported that Prince Hohenlohe declined the office owing to his age. The Emperor has summoned Gen. Count Waldersee, the political soldier, who was conspicuous in the final intrigues against Bismarck. The general inference is that he intends to make him Caprivi's successor. Should Waldersee become Chancellor the office of Prussian Premier would be given him shortly, and thus the division of the two posts which was effected at the time of the school bill crisis would be ended. There is a rumor that Gen. Bronsart von Schellendorf is a candidate for the Prussian Premiership and the Chancellorship. Either of these generals would be acceptable to the Conservatives, who have become totally estranged from the Government under the Caprivi regime.

One of the Chancellor's last acts before offering his resignation was to notify the Reichsbank that the decree prohibiting advances on Russian stocks had been cancelled, as no longer necessary on either economic or political grounds. The Emperor had arranged to leave Potsdam to hunt in the neighborhood of Blankenburg, but he gave up the trip in view of the disruption of his Cabinet.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Morning Post's Berlin correspondent says: Everybody with a sense of fair play denounces the despicable intrigue of the Agrarian and Bismarckian reactionist groups against Count von Caprivi. The socialists will rejoice because the dread of them, although they did not raise a finger, has been sufficient to plunge the empire into a crisis."

The Daily News correspondent in Berlin says of Caprivi's fall: It is not known whether the Chancellor previously informed his Majesty of his intention to convoke the federal ministers; if not, the reason of his fall is clear. It was an Imperial reprimand. At home the removal of Caprivi must arouse the greatest apprehensions in German Liberal quarters. Although a thorough Conservative, he was not a man of force. He disliked extremes. As matters stand his dismissal can only be regarded as a sign that the Emperor is determined to adopt Eulenburg's scheme against Socialism. A conflict of a dangerous character therefore appears on the horizon, the consequences of which are simply incalculable. The acceptance of Eulenburg's resignation does not exclude the possibility of his being appointed Chancellor, which, however, is improbable. Caprivi will start in a few days for Geneve.

An Unknown Steamer Sinks.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Captain of the German bark Rebecca which arrived at Cardiff yesterday reports that at 3 o'clock yesterday morning when off Ilfracombe on the Bristol channel she sighted a large steamer flying signals of distress. Soon afterwards she went down headforemost. The crew could be seen running about on her deck and their cries for help could be heard distinctly. The Rebecca could do nothing to save them as he was running under bare poles before a furious gale. The name of the steamer is unknown.

The Election in London.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The writ for the election in London has been issued. Nomination is fixed for November 13, the polling for Tuesday, November 20. Sheriff Cameron will act as returning officer. The Board of Registration will consist of the two local judges, the police magistrate and Mr. Shanley, the local Master of the High Court. The candidates are Mr. T. S. Hobbs, Liberal, and Mayor Essery, Conservative.

Muley Amin's Victory.

TANGIER, Oct. 27.—The Riff tribesmen at Melilla have been crushingly defeated by the Sultan's forces under Muley Amin, who was sent with 700 cavalry and 700 infantry and four guns, to mark out the Spanish and Moorish frontier, the accomplishment of which has hitherto been prevented by the Riffians.

CROWN'S CASE CLOSED

Evidence For the Prosecution in the Hartley Case All In.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY TAKEN

Dr. Haight Says Deceased Had a "Tobacco" Heart—Death Resulted From Poisoning He Claims—Prof. Ellis' Statement—What Constable Allen Heard.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 27.—The third day of the Hartley murder trial opened with the continuation of the cross-examination of Louis Henry Ling by Mr. Osler.

Ling (to Mr. Osler)—I know Wm. Caven, driver of the mail wagon. When he passed the Hartley residence on the Wednesday before Hartley's death, he stopped and asked me how Caleb was. I did not tell him that he was much worse since I gave him the medicine.

I told Mr. Best, the Baptist minister in New Durham, that I was induced to go to her house by Mrs. Hartley.

I don't remember asking Bishop what they were going to do about this thing. I will not swear that on that occasion I did or did not say "—— —— you Maria. If you can't tell what is straight I will."

I can't say how often improper intimacy took place between the prisoner and myself, but it was as often as I went to her house. Such relations existed over a period of nine months, the last occasion being about three weeks before Hartley's death.

I never gave Hartley his medicine, but I gave him an egg nog on the Friday and Saturday before his death.

I went to Dr. Haight's for the medicine and saw it prepared. I have seen prisoner give the powders in rhubarb to the deceased, but never saw it mixed. My first intimacy with the prisoner was on the second night I knew her.

I did not consent to secrecy before the prisoner told me about poisoning the deceased. She said that she substituted "rough on rats" for the powders which Dr. Haight ordered.

Dr. Haight being sworn deposed: I knew Caleb Hartley before being called in to see him professionally and for some time before that he seemed to be in good health. He visited me in my office on the 3rd of May and asked me to prescribe for him. He complained of vomiting, pains in the stomach and general indisposition. His countenance was suffered and slightly bloated; his eyelids were puffed and his eyes blood-shot. I prescribed for the effect of alcoholic excess. I had heard reports that he was drinking hard and the deceased told me that while going to Hamilton on the previous Tuesday he was seized with violent illness at Harley station, which continued with vomiting during his trip to Hamilton and while he stayed there. He was drinking freely during the day.

On the 3rd I found his pulse of low tension and bounding, that is tremulous and very full. The pulse beats were about 90 a minute; his tongue was foul and his bowels loose.

I called on him the next day and found him lying down but feeling about the same as on the day before. I made an examination of his physical condition and found his lungs normal but his his abdomen tender in the vicinity of the stomach. There was a pulsation of the heart caused by tobacco, for he had what is known as tobacco heart. There was visible pulsation in the large arteries and in the aorta.

Cross-examined by Mr. Osler, Dr. Haight said that deceased had a tobacco heart, caused by over-smoking. Witness did not see the jar washed in which the stomach of deceased was sent to Toronto. It was washed but not in his presence. He did not know if there was any arsenic around and if there was he would not swear that it was impossible for it accidentally to get into the jar. It might have got there. He found that the heart of deceased was affected by his tobacco habit. He found a decadence of the tissue. There was, however, no more than what would have been expected in a man of his age.

On re-examination by Mr. Lount witness said that he had no doubt of the existence of arsenic in the system and he was also quite satisfied that death resulted from poisoning. He thought that two grains were enough to cause death.

Dr. Hill, of Norwich, followed, and corroborated his follow-physician's evidence. The physical condition of deceased was always fairly good.

Dr. Ellis, public analyst, Toronto, describing the analysis, said; "On the basis of what I examined there would be a grain or more in the whole body. The conclusion arrived at was that there must have been more taken. Apart from an analysis the symptoms pointed to arsenical poisonic.

Dr. McCurdy, of Norwich, examined Caleb Hartley for entrance to the Workmen. He found an affection of the heart from excessive use of tobacco. Otherwise the deceased was in perfect health. It was the witness' opinion that deceased died of arsenical poisoning. Dr. Griffin and Dr. Harris, Brantford, Dr. Johnson, Toronto, followed in similar evidence to the other doctors.

Wm. Allan, constable, went to Hartley's next day after deceased returned from Hamilton. Mrs. Hartley told him Caleb had gone to Hamilton, and she did not expect him to come home alive as he had heart trouble. While he was there Ling made Caleb an egg nog, putting in some unknown mixture. The following Sunday he found Caleb very bad. He was bleeding at the nose, which continued till he died. Friday I told Mrs. Hartley the doctor wanted me to stay with Caleb. When Ling was out Mrs. Hartley started talking about Ling. Ling came in suddenly and said, 'Maria, shut your head, it is no wonder folks are talking about us. It is your own fault.' She seemed annoyed at the expression when Ling put his arms around her and hugged and kissed her which quieted her ruffled feelings. When Caleb was dead Mrs. Hartley went into the room and looking on the face of her dead husband said, 'My, I believe some one has given him a dose.' After I left the stomach in Toronto for the analysis Mrs. Hartley then enquired how they would find out if there was poison in it. I replied that I did not know and said if she did it she would know, and if Ling did it he would know. She then said, 'If you don't tell on Henry I will give you anything in the store.'

The evidence for the Crown is all in. The case will probably occupy a portion of next week.

CONFESSED HIS GUILT

Almeda Chattelle Admits He is the Murderer of Jessie Keith.

CARES NOT FOR THE RESULT

"Hang or Shoot Me or Cut Me to Pieces," He Said—The Inquest and Preliminary Examination at Listowel—Prisoner Threatened With Violence.

LISTOWEL, Oct. 27.—The train arriving here yesterday from Stratford carried Almeda Chattelle. Crowds thronged the way to the station. By a ruse of the authorities, however, a hack was employed and met the train where the railway crosses the road some distance from town. A crowd assembled at the jail on arrival of the hack carrying the prisoner, and as he was being hurried into the cell cries of "Hang him!" "Lynch him!" and similar expressions were heard, and for a time there appeared indications of trouble, but the officers of the law succeeded in placing the prisoner securely in the cell of the jail.

The adjourned inquest was then proceeded with. The prisoner occupied a seat at the right of the coroner, and was dressed the same as on Tuesday when he was brought on the platform at the depot here. The proceedings commenced by an examination by the jury of the articles in the valise, and also those found on the prisoner when arrested.

After hearing all the evidence the coroner's jury handed in a verdict of wilful murder against the prisoner, Almede Chattelle. The evidence given was very conclusive. Constable McCarthy was first called. He recognized the articles found on the prisoner as those he was entrusted with on Tuesday last when prisoner was handed over to him by Constable Travis. Constable Robert Woods produced the celebrated black valise and parcel containing the murdered girls clothing.

Mr. Wm. Maynard identified the blue jacket stolen from his clothes line, also the black stockings marked "N," and a towel and other articles found in the valise or in the tramps possession.

Mrs. Isabella McLeod identified the articles as before at Stratford. At this point the prisoner was made to exhibit the ladies' black cashmere jacket which he was wearing when captured. This also the witness declared to be her property.

Mr. William Rodgers, St. Marys, identified the pants but not the prisoner. Donald Ross, engine driver; Bertram Teskey, St. Marys; William McCaffrey, Ellic; John Zimmerman, Gadshill; Reuben Yorke, Alf Poole, William Lambe, Fannie Mornington, Miss Theresa Loney, near Peffer station; John Jones, Mornington, all testified to having seen prisoner.

Miss Carrie Lantz, near Listowel, testified to having given prisoner a lunch on the day of the murder. He afterwards went in the direction of the railroad track and distant from the scene of the murder less than a mile.

Thomas Johnston, residing at the same place as the last witness, also testified that from where he met the prisoner a man walking an ordinary pace could reach the scene of the tragedy in about 25 minutes.

Robert Morris, of this town, saw the prisoner in two different places on the day the murder was committed. The last time ten minutes walk from the place.

Dr. Rutherford said the cause of death was due to loss of blood from the cut in throat, and detailed a technical description of the condition of the body when found.

Mrs. Keith, mother of the murdered girl, identified the blood-stained garments and a purse shown her, and said that they were Jessie's.

A number of other witnesses were called and their evidence taken, some of them having seen the prisoner before and others after the murder. The evidence taken as a whole was very complete and left no doubt as to the criminality of the prisoner. The route he went has been indicated by the witnesses nearly the whole distance from Ailsa Craig to Listowel, thence to Cataract.

The prisoner was next arraigned before a magistrates' court, consisting of Police Magistrate Teehune and Mayor Featherstone. Much of the evidence taken by the coroner's jury was gone over. The magistrate charged him under the section in the revised statutes which gives the prisoner an opportunity to make a statement, and warned him that anything he might say might be used against him. He replied that he was guilty and had nothing else to say. Then he was removed to the cell, where he was stripped and his clothing examined. Many blood stains were found on his drawers.

While being searched he repeatedly said he did not care how soon he was put out of the world.

"Let them cut me to pieces, or hang, or shoot me," he remarked. "They have proved I did it. What is the good of delaying matters. The sooner they get it over and done with the better."

At 10.15 a hack was in waiting at the jail door and a restless mob was clamoring outside for the prisoner. A number of constables were on hand and the prisoner was suddenly rushed through and into the hack. A large rock followed in dangerous proximity and narrowly escaped hitting persons in the crowd. He was driven off at full speed to the station, followed by a turbulent crowd. At the station the train was not yet in and the prisoner was taken into the depot, where he remained closely guarded until its arrival.

The crowd here was very demonstrative and seemed dangerous. All sorts of cries and threats were made, such as "Lynch him," "Hang him," "Use the rope," "Throw him under the train," etc. The officers ran him down the platform, followed by the crowd, and at the car steps a determined effort was made to get him. There was no organized leader, but a few men the worse of liquor called for volunteers to follow them into the car and take him. In the scramble Constable McCarthy drew his revolver and Chief McCarthy, of Stratford, narrowly escaped falling under the car. For ten minutes the train remained, during which many inflammatory threats were made by the crowd. Finally, at 10.40 the train pulled out, followed by wild and derisive cries from the mob.

Chattelle will remain in Stratford jail until the spring assizes.

A CRISIS IN GERMANY

Chancellor Von Caprivi and Count Zuenlenburg Resign.

DOES IT MEAN A NEW POLICY

Caprivi Called a Council of the Federal Ministers Without Notifying the Emperor and This May Have Something to Do with the Change.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—The report that Chancellor von Caprivi has handed his resignation to the Emperor is confirmed. Count Zuenlenburg, president of the Ministerial Council, has also resigned. Dr. Miquel, Prussian Finance Minister, has been appointed President of the Council. Prince von Hohenlohe-Shillingsfurst, Governor of Alsace-Lorraine, was offered the Chancellorship, but declined. Before offering the Chancellorship to Prince Hohenlohe, Emperor William consulted with the envoys from Bavaria, Wurtemburg, Saxony and Baden. It is reported that Prince Hohenlohe declined the office owing to his age. The Emperor has summoned Gen. Count Waldersee, the political soldier, who was conspicuous in the final intrigues against Bismarck, The general inference is he intends to make him Caprivi's successor. Should Waldersee become [illegible] that the office of Prussian Premier will be given him shortly, and the Chancellor of the two posts would be [illegible]mier would be time of the [illegible] thus the division ended. The [illegible]ich was effected at the start over the [illegible]chool bill crisis would be the [illegible]ere is a rumor that Gen. Bronsart Schellendorf is a candidate for Prussian Premiership and the Chancellorship. Either of these generals would be acceptable to the Conservatives, who have become totally estranged from the Government under the Caprivi regime.

One of the Chancellor's last acts before offering his resignation was to notify the Reichsbank that the decree prohibiting advances on Russian stocks had been cancelled, as no longer necessary on either economic or political grounds. The Emperor had arranged to leave Potsdam to hunt in the neighborhood of Blankenburg, but he gave up the trip in view of the disruption of his Cabinet.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Morning Post's Berlin correspondent says: Everybody with a sense of fair play denounces the despicable intrigue of the Agrarian and Bismarckian reactionist [illegible] against Count von Caprivi. The socialists will rejoice because the dread of them, although they did not raise a finger, has been sufficient to plunge the empire into a crisis."

The Daily News correspondent in Berlin says of Caprivi's fall: It is not known whether the Chancellor previously informed his Majesty of his intention to convoke the federal ministers; if not, the reason of his fall is clear. It was an Imperial reprimand. At home the removal of Caprivi must arouse the greatest apprehensions in German Liberal quarters. Although a thorough Conservative, he was not a man of force. He disliked extremes. As matters stand his dismissal can only be regarded as a sign that the Emperor is determined to adopt Eulenburg's scheme against Socialism. A conflict of a dangerous character therefore appears on the horizon, the consequences of which are simply incalculable. The acceptance of Eulenburg's resignation does not exclude the possibility of his being appointed Chancellor, which, however, is improbable. Caprivi will start in a few days for Geneva.

An Unknown Steamer Sinks.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Captain of the German bark Rebecca which arrived at Cardiff yesterday reports that at 3 o'clock yesterday morning when off Ilfracombe on the Bristol channel she sighted a large steamer flying signals of distress. Soon afterwards she went down headforemost. The crew could be seen running about on her deck and their cries for help could be heard distinctly. The Rebecca could do nothing to save them as he was running under bare poles before a furious gale. The name of the steamer is unknown.

The Election in London.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The writ for the election in London has been issued. Nomination is fixed for November 13, the polling for Tuesday, November 20. Sheriff Cameron will act as returning officer. The Board of Registration will consist of the two local judges, the police magistrate and Mr. Shanley, the local Master of the High Court. The candidates are Mr. T. S. Hobbs, Liberal, and Mayor Essery, Conservative.

Muley Amin's Victory.

TANGIER, Oct. 27.—The Riff tribesmen at Melilla have been crushingly defeated by the Sultan's forces under Muley Amin, who was sent with 700 cavalry and 700 infantry and four guns, to mark out the Spanish and Moorish frontier, the accomplishment of which has hitherto been prevented by the Riffians.

CROWN'S CASE CLOSED

Evidence For the Prosecution in the Hartley Case All In.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY TAKEN

Dr. Haight Says Deceased Had a "Tobacco" Heart—Death Resulted From Poisoning He Claims—Prof. Ellis' Statement—What Constable Allen Heard.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 27.—The third day of the Hartley murder trial opened with the continuation of the cross examination of Louis Henry Ling by Mr. Osler.

Ling (to Mr Osler)—I know Wm. Caven, driver of the mail wagon. When he passed the Hartley residence on the Wednesday before Hartley's death, he stopped and asked me how Caleb was. I did not tell him that he was much worse since I gave him the medicine.

I told Mr. Best, the Baptist minister in New Durham, that I was induced to go to her house by Mrs. Hartley.

I don't remember asking Bishop what they were going to do about this thing. I will not swear that on that occasion I did or did not say "—— —— you Maria. If you can't tell what is straight I will."

I can't say how often improper intimacy took place between the prisoner and myself, but it was as often as I went to her house. Such relations existed over a period of nine months, the last occasion being about three weeks before Hartley's death.

I never gave Hartley his medicine. I gave him an egg nog on the [illegible] Saturday before his death.

I went to Dr. Haight's [illegible]e, but and saw it prepared. [illegible]riday and give the powder[illegible] ceased, but [illegible] for the medicine intimacy [illegible] I have seen prisoner secon[illegible] in rhubarb to the dever saw it mixed. My first [illegible] with the prisoner was on the [illegible] night I knew her.

[illegible] did not consent to secrecy before the prisoner told me about poisoning the deceased. She said that she substituted "rough on rats" for the powders which Dr. Haight ordered.

Dr. Haight being sworn deposed: I knew Caleb Hartley before being called in to see him professionally and for some time before that he seemed to be in good health. He visited me in my office on the 3rd of May and asked me to prescribe for him. He complained of vomiting, pains in the stomach and general indisposition. His countenance was suffered and slightly bloated; his eyelids were puffed and his eyes blood-shot. I prescribed for the effect of alcoholic excess. I had heard reports that he was drinking hard and the deceased told me that while going to Hamilton on the previous Tuesday he was seized with violent illness at Harley station, which continued with vomiting during his trip to Hamilton and while he stayed there. He was drinking freely during the day.

On the 3rd I found his pulse of low tension and bounding, that is tremulous and very full. The pulse beats were about 90 a minute; his tongue was foul and his bowels loose.

I called on him the next day and found him lying down but feeling about the same as on the day before. I made an examination of his physical condition and found his lungs normal but his his abdomen tender in the vicinity of the stomach. There was a pulsation of the heart caused by tobacco, for he had what is known as tobacco heart. There was visible pulsation in the large arteries and in the aorta.

Cross-examined by Mr. Osler, Dr. Haight said that deceased had a tobacco heart, caused by over-smoking. Witness did not see the jar washed in which the stomach of deceased was sent to Toronto. It was washed but not in his presence. He did not know if there was any arsenic around and if there was he would not swear that it was impossible for it accidentally to get into the jar. It might have got there. He found that the heart of deceased was affected by his tobacco habit. He found a decadence of the tissue. There was, however, no more than what would have been expected in a man of his age.

On re-examination by Mr. Lount witness said that he had no doubt of the existence of arsenic in the system and he was also quite satisfied that death resulted from poisoning. He thought that two grains were enough to cause death.

Dr. Hill, of Norwich, followed, and corroborated his follow-physician's evidence. The physical condition of deceased was always fairly good.

Dr. Ellis, public analyst, Toronto, describing the analysis, said; "On the basis of what I examined there would be a grain or more in the whole body. The conclusion arrived at was that there must have been more taken. Apart from an analysis the symptoms pointed to arsenical poisoning.

Dr. McCurdy, of Norwich, examined Caleb Hartley for entrance to the Workmen. He found an affection of the heart from excessive use of tobacco. Otherwise the deceased was in perfect health. It was the witness' opinion that deceased died of arsenical poisoning. Dr. Griffin and Dr. Harris, Brantford, Dr. Johnson, Toronto, followed in similar evidence to the other doctors.

Wm. Allan, constable, went to Hartley's next day after deceased returned from Hamilton. Mrs. Hartley told him Caleb had gone to Hamilton, and she did not expect him to come home alive as he had heart trouble. While he was there Ling made Caleb an egg nog, putting in some unknown mixture. The following Sunday he found Caleb very bad. He was bleeding at the nose, which continued till he died. Friday I told Mrs. Hartley the doctor wanted me to stay with Caleb. When Ling was out Mrs. Hartley started talking about Ling. Ling came in suddenly and said, 'Maria, shut your head, it is no wonder folks are talking about us. It is your own fault.' She seemed annoyed at the expression when Ling put his arms around her and hugged and kissed her which quieted her ruffled feelings. When Caleb was dead Mrs. Hartley went into the room and looking on the face of her dead husband said, 'My, I believe some one has given him a dose.' After I left the stomach in Toronto for the analysis Mrs. Hartley then enquired how they would find out if there was poison in it. I replied that I did not know and said if she did it she would know, and if Ling did it he would know. She then said, 'If you don't tell on Henry I will give you anything in the store.'

The evidence for the Crown is all in. The case will probably occupy a portion of next week.

CONFESSED HIS GUILT

Almeda Chatrelle Admits He is the Murderer of Jessie Keith.

CARES NOT FOR THE RESULT

"Hang or Shoot Me or Cut Me to Pieces," He Said—The Inquest and Preliminary Examination at Listowel—Prisoner Threatened With Violence.

LISTOWEL, Oct. 27.—The train arriving here yesterday from Stratford carried Almeda Chatrelle. Crowds thronged the way to the station. By a ruse of the authorities, however, a hack was employed and met the train where the railway crosses the road some distance from town. A crowd assembled at the jail on arrival of the hack carrying the prisoner, and as he was being hurried into the cell grim of "Hang him!" "Lynch him!" and similar expressions were heard, and for a time there appeared indications of trouble, but the officers of the law succeeded in placing the prisoner securely in the cell of the [illegible]

The adjourned inquest was [illegible] ceeded with. The prisoner [illegible] at the right of the coroner [illegible] fail. and the same as on T[illegible]noon pro- brought on the pla[illegible]mpied a seat The proceedin[illegible], and was dressation by [illegible]unday when he was taken, [illegible]orm at the depot here. [illegible] commenced by an examination of the jury of the articles in the [illegible]d also those found on the prisoner when arrested.

After hearing all the evidence the coroner's jury handed in a verdict of wilful murder against the prisoner, Almeda Chatrelle. The evidence given was very conclusive. Constable McCarthy was first called. He recognized the articles found on the prisoner as those he was entrusted with on Tuesday last when prisoner was handed over to him by Constable Travis. Constable Robert Woods produced the celebrated black valise and parcel containing the murdered girls clothing.

Mr. Wm. Maynard identified the blue jacket stolen from his clothesline, also the black stockings marked "N," and a towel and other articles found in the valise or in the tramps possession.

Mrs. Isabella McLeod identified the articles as before at Stratford. At this point the prisoner was made to exhibit the ladies' black cashmere jacket which he was wearing when captured. This also the witness declared to be her property.

Mr. William Rodgers, St. Marys, identified the pants but not the prisoner. Donald Ross, engine driver; Bertram Teskey, St. Marys; William McCaffrey, Ellis; John Zimmerman, Gaishill; Reuben Yorke, Alf Poole, William Lambe, Fannie Mornington, Miss Theresa Loney, near Peffer station; John Jones, Mornington, all testified to having seen prisoner.

Miss Carrie Lantz, near Listowel, testified to having given prisoner a lunch on the day of the murder. He afterwards went in the direction of the railroad track and distant from the scene of the murder less than a mile.

Thomas Johnston, residing at the same place as the last witness, also testified that from where he met the prisoner a man walking an ordinary pace could reach the scene of the tragedy in about 25 minutes.

Robert Morris, of this town, saw the prisoner in two different places on the day the murder was committed. The last time ten minutes walk from the place.

Dr. Rutherford said the cause of death was due to loss of blood from the cut in throat, and detailed a technical description of the condition of the body when found.

Mrs. Keith, mother of the murdered girl, identified the blood-stained garments and a purse shown her, and said that they were Jessie's.

A number of other witnesses were called and their evidence taken, some of them having seen the prisoner before and others after the murder. The evidence taken as a whole was very complete and left no doubt as to the criminality of the prisoner. The route he went has been indicated by the witnesses nearly the whole distance from Ailsa Craig to Listowel, thence to Cataract.

The prisoner was next arraigned before a magistrates' court, consisting of Police Magistrate Toshune and Mayor Featherstone. Much of the evidence taken by the coroner's jury was gone over. The magistrate charged him under the section in the revised statutes which gives the prisoner an opportunity to make a statement, and warned him that anything he might say might be used against him. He replied that he was guilty and had nothing else to say. Then he was removed to the cell, where he was stripped and his clothing examined. Many blood stains were found on his drawers.

While being searched he repeatedly said he did not care how soon he was put out of the world.

"Let them cut me to pieces, or hang, or shoot me," he remarked. "They have proved I did it. What is the good of delaying matters. The sooner they get it over and done with the better."

At 10.15 a hack was in waiting at the jail door and a restless mob was clamoring outside for the prisoner. A number of constables were on hand and the prisoner was suddenly rushed through and into the hack. A large rock followed in dangerous proximity and narrowly escaped hitting persons in the crowd. He was driven off at full speed to the station, followed by a turbulent crowd. At the station the train was not yet in and the prisoner was taken into the depot, where he remained closely guarded until its arrival.

The crowd here was very demonstrative and seemed dangerous. All sorts of cries and threats were made, such as "Lynch him," "Hang him," "Use the rope," "Throw him under the train," etc. The officers ran him down the platform, followed by the crowd, and at the car steps a determined effort was made to get him. There was no organized leader, but a few men the worse of liquor called for volunteers to follow them into the car and take him. In the scramble Constable McCarthy drew his revolver and Chief McCarthy, of Stratford, narrowly escaped falling under the car. For ten minutes the train remained, during which many inflammatory threats were made by the crowd. Finally, at 10.40 the train pulled out, followed by wild and derisive cries from the mob.

Chatrelle will remain in Stratford jail until the spring assizes.

HOW THE TARIFF WEIGHS.

The most rabid Canadian protectionist has no good word to say of the McKinley tariff—it is too outrageous. Yet the McKinley tariff was not very much more drastic than our own "protective" Canadian tariff. The total importation of the United States in 1893 amounted to $844,454,000 and the duties collected thereon were $193,373,000. That gives an average rate of 23.49 per cent. In the same year the duties collected on imports into Canada represented an average of not less than 17.38 per cent. From 1887 to 1890 inclusive the average Canadian rate of duty was over 21 per cent. Thus it is seen that the Canadian tariff is only less than two and a half per cent. lower than the unspeakable McKinley tariff. Looking at the tariff in another way, will reveal the fact that the Canadian tariff is even more burdensome on Canadians than the McKinley millstone was upon the Americans. It must be remembered that the United States produce a larger proportion of the goods consumed by the people than Canadians do, and that, therefore the per capita weight of taxation is greater on Canada than on the United States. Under the McKinley tariff the duties per head of population is, or was, under the Canadian tariff of 1893 woman and child paid $5.00. du... that there is any need of $3.00; ...ada? Are the Canadian every man, ...ay taxes for their Does it seem ...lavishly that tariff reform in Ca... ...of the taxpeople delighted to ... ...e minrulers to squander so ... ...t is even the millions screwed out ... payer is not enough, but the finan... lister has to go a borrowing. And that not all. The taxes mentioned go into the treasury. There is an additional tax that goes into the pocket of the protected manufacturer, and comes out of the people's pockets in the shape of higher prices which a protective tariff permits being imposed. If the people like this state of things they have it in their power to continue it. If they like high taxation the present government will give them their fancy.

THE cable despatches tell us that after the Bank of Montreal had issued the prospectus concerning the proposed new Canadian loan, Mr. Foster deigned to state to the London press that the loan was needed to meet the floating maturing debt, part of which bears five per cent. interest, and to deepen and enlarge the canals of the country. So far as the latter statement is concerned Mr. Foster, says the Ottawa Free Press, has to reconcile it with his assurance in the budget speech that the country had got to the end of its expenditures for public works.

THE Toronto Globe asks if the people are to be told "that $143,000 may be paid out of a department in excess of estimates and no blame can be laid at the door of the head of that department?" The theory of ministerial responsibility has been ably defined by the Globe, but this question seems to put the case in a nutshell, URIAH Wilson, M. P., of Napanee, and Jas. H, Metcalfe, M. P., of Kingston, started, on Thursday, on an electioneering tour through Amherst Island, Lennox county. This is significant of an approaching election.

THE writ for London, ordering an election to fill the seat in the Local Legislature made vacant by the elevation of Mr. Meredith to the bench, fixes November 13 for nomination day, and November 20 for polling.

TROUBLE AT HOME.

Use Only the Reliable Diamond Dyes.

It is well known that that the ladies of Canada often experience trials and tribulations in the household management. These small but irritating troubles can be avoided if a little care and common sense is exercised. Women who go on suffering these little miseries have themselves to blame, as they suffer through their own carlessness and inexperience. To-day, one great source of annoyance in the household is the use of poor imitation dyes for domestic dyeing. In some sections of our land, the ladies have lifted up their voice against them in a way which cannot be misunderstood. These imitation dyes have caused not only great loss of material and money, but anger and heartache as well. All these domestic trials and tribulations are avoided when Diamond Dyes are used. By their use work is well and quickly done; results are always grand, and the colours are brilliant and lasting. Ladies who have used Diamond Dyes for the last ten years know their great worth and possibilities. Avoid all imitation dyes, and always insist upon getting Diamond Dyes from your druggist or dealer.

SMITH, July 7, 1892.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, And after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

SOME CORRESPONDENCE WHICH HAS BEEN FORWARDED.

Will Monaghan Meet This Conciliatory Attitude Half Way?

By the following letters which have been forwarded by Messrs Edwards & Murray, town solicitors, to Messrs. Edmison & Dickson, who are acting for the township of Monaghan, it would appear that the town is making every effort towards a peaceable solution of the sewer difficulty. It remains to be seen just how their advances will be met by the township authorities.

PETERBOROUGH, Oct. 22nd, 1894.

Messrs. Edmison & Dixon, Barristers, Peterborough.

MONAGHAN V. PETERBOROUGH.

DEAR SIRS,—The efforts made last week with your concurrence to bring about an amicable arrangement under which the brickwork should be completed as far as the ground had been opened without prejudice to the position of either side, having fallen through, we are anxious to have the arbitration proceeded with without delay. As you have not taken out the order referring the matter back to the Arbitrators under Judge McMahon's judgment, we have instructed our agents to see that the order is taken out. We shall look to you to assist us in expediting the hearing before the Arbitrators.

As the injunction served restrains the town, corporation, their servants, workmen, or agents from working at or upon the sewer, or from in any way interfering with, the highway or the use thereof, we are instructed to inform you that the town is ready and willing to effectually protect and guard the excavation made, by a proper railing and otherwise, pending the disposal of the matter by the Arbitrators on the reference back to them; and this being done, to indemnify the Township against damages or costs that may be incurred by the latter in any action or proceeding arising out of, or resulting from, the existence of the excavation; assuming in short the defence of any such action if any should be brought; the road being made fully fit for travel, if it is not now so fit.

We also protest against the Township filling in, or otherwise interfering with the work, pending the Arbitration, or endeavouring to force the contractor to do so. If the Town shall not be found entitled to build the sewer then the excavation will of course be filled up and the road restored to its original condition.

We put it to you that, without arguing the legal position as to which we may fairly differ, what we now propose to you is a reasonable solution of the difficulty that exists, owing to our being stopped in the work while the excavation is open, and offers to the Township a full protection against any accident happening, and a full indemnity against loss. This being so any action of the Township towards closing the excavation can only be due to a desire to do unnecessary injury to the contractor or to the town, and to provoke further litigation, and any loss which the Town may thereby sustain, the Township will be held answerable for.

Yours Truly,
(Sgd.) EDWARDS & MURRAY.

We are informed that the Contractor has a man on guard in the day time and red lights displayed at night, as is usual in making excavations.

If you deem this sufficient then we assume that we need not say anything more about it. If you require a railing to be erected where the excavation is now exposed, we are told that the contractor is prepared to put it up and if he do not do so, the town will do it.

Please let us hear from you to-day.

Yours truly,

PETERBOROUGH, Oct 25th, 1894.

Messrs. Edmison & Dixon, Barristers, Peterborough:

RE MONAGHAN V PETERBOROUGH ARBITRATION.

DEAR SIRS.—We have again to request that you will give an answer to our letter of the 22nd. We are anxious to proceed with the arbitration without delay, and we are desirous of having a reasonable understanding with you about the excavation pending this arbitration, so that any accident or any difficulty may be avoided. We should be glad if you could expedite the issue of the order under Judge McMahon's decision given now over ten days ago. And that no time may be lost in getting on with the arbitration, we now give you notice that we shall be ready to go on with it any day next week, and if you cannot be ready next week we shall expect you to be ready at all events by Monday, the 5th of November. That will give you ten days to prepare.

We hear it stated that the pathmaster is advertising for men to fill in the excavation. Is this done by your direction or that of the township council? If not, we trust you will see to it that no unnecessary conflict is precipitated by the unreasonable and improper act of a township official.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) EDWARDS & MURRAY.

You must do something. In the earlier stages of Consumption, and in all the conditions that lead to it, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a certain remedy. In severe, lingering Coughs, all Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, and every disease that can be reached through the blood, it is the only medicine so effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure you have your money back. Nervous prostration and debility are conquered by it.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought ...ought to be paid. So he began they ... against individual members at law ... of the assessbers to enforce payme... ments against them; the court ... decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

HE WAS A PRISONER

Thirty-five Years of Suffering.

Experienced Many Sad Failures and Disappointments.

A Strong Hand Brings Deliverance.

Paine's Celery Compound Releases and Cures.

Few men or women made captives and prisoners by dyspepsia, have ever suffered so much pain and agony as fell to the lot of Mr. Ambrose Budd, of Shanty Bay, near Barrie, Ont.

Thirty years in the toils of cruel disease, meeting with failures and disappointments from medicines that promised to cure, but which proved utterly worthless, is worse in some respects than being confined in a walled dungeon.

AMBROSE BUDD.

Mr. Budd's efforts to escape from suffering and sickness were all in vain until he laid hold of that mighty and powerful deliveror, Paine's Celery Compound. His escape from death and his complete cure, is known to hundreds in his district, and has give Paine's Celery Compound a name and reputation as a true life-giver, that will never fade from the memory. Mr. Budd has communicated the facts of his case for publication; he says:—

"For the benefit of sufferers I gladly give my experience with Paine's Celery Compound. After suffering from dyspepsia for thirty-five years, and meeting with many failures with other medicines, I decided to use Paine's Celery Compound, having heard of so many wonderful cures effected by it. The Compound, after I used it for a time, produced miraculous results, and banished my troubles.

"From a condition of helplessness—being unable to sleep or eat—I now feel well and strong. I am astonished at the results, as my trouble was an old and chronic one. I have recommended Paine's Celery Compound to some of my neighbours, and in every case it has given satisfaction. I will always strongly recommend its use when I have an opportunity."

THEDFORD, Oct, 22.—Some men don't know when they are in luck and some do. Albert Maithers, of this place, is one of the lucky ones who knows of his good fortune and tells about it. He says he was laid up and could do no work, for months because of kidney disease. When kidney disease has such a hold on a man as that, he is in a serious condition. Mr. Maithers recognised this and used every remedy he could think of, but without getting any help until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes cured him and he is attending to his affairs once more and is as hearty and happy as ever.

THOUGHTS

Suggested While Attending the Golden Wedding of My Brother, Thomas Telford, Esq., Albert Street, Peterborough, Oct. 20th, 1894.

My dear brother and dear sister, it yields pleasure and delight,
To meet once more in joyfulness within your home to-night.
My old heart beats with youthful zeal, bound by the family cord,
While seated here with you and yours around the social board.
What means this gathering? your quiet home
but seldom sounds with mirth,
It cannot be a marriage feast, a death wake or a birth,—
Not one of these brought me, because my inviting card did show
It was to stamp the knot with gold formed fifty years ago.

Can it be fifty years to-night? how very short it seems,
When I look back on all those years they but appear as dreams,
I was a boy, you reached that stage when love
the heart enthralls,
The power it gained, the act performed, this night fresh back recalls.
That night how bright the flush of youth shed
lustre on your brows,
Light beat your hearts as you stood up to pledge your solemn vows,
Your joys were full, your hopes were high,
life's cares you did not know,
While entering on your married life just fifty years ago.

Contrast two nights—how changed the scene youth leaves no trace not one,
Your silvered hair, your furrowed cheeks show what times hand has done;
The merry laugh, the sports that night, in each you took your part,
Has lost their charms—to-night you sit, with old but grateful hearts,
With joy and sorrow mingling, the marvellous change behold
As your loved friends lay down to you their precious gifts of gold.
It shows respect, true proofs of love, the presents they bestow,
But fails to bring back hours that fled since
fifty years ago.

Gay, thoughtless marrying in your youth, perhaps you little knew
The cares, the toils, the grief or joy that was in store for you;
Experience soon stripped off the mask love
vauntingly displays,
And proves that matrimonial life has bright and clouded days.
Throughout your wedded life, I know you have shared loves truest bliss;
No doubt you had your household jars, few joined in wedlock miss,
Pleasures and sorrow was your lot, alternate joy and woe:
To-night calls back much that transpired, from fifty years ago.

Four daughters and their husbands kind, with pleasure I behold:
Their prattling children add fresh proof both you are getting old.
Two sons are absent from your home by separation's rod;
Two daughters and one son sleeps, quiet beneath the grassy sod.
To-night rejoice o'er all the trials that you through life have shared,
Your bitter cup God oft made sweet, likewise your lives he spared,
He smoothed your path and free he did preserving mercy show
His loving arm was round you both since fifty years ago.

Few in the matrimonial state are spared in life to see Their Golden Wedding; but your God has drawn it out to thee.
Rejoice with friends but bear in mind God's goodness unto you,
Your numerous years of union proves you are his favoured few.
Each time you view that nice gold watch dear friends unto you gave,
Remember every tick you hear is warning from the grave.
I earnest hope you will enjoy many happy years below
Before death breaks your youthful ties bound fifty years ago.

IS COMING!

The Attention of Every Lady and Gentlemen that has THIN HAIR or that is BALD is called to the visit of

PROF. DOREWEND

To PETERBOROUGH, who will be at the GRAND CENTRAL HOTEL, ON Thursday, Nov. 1.

There are indeed very few Ladies or Gentlemen in America but what have heard of the skill of PROF. DORENWEND as a manufacturer of Hair Goods of all styles, and there are very few places on the globe but what one or more of his styles are worn. Those that live closer to his manufacturing place, like all the Ontario cities and towns, are more fortunate than people of United States, Australia or England, and it is because he visits this place once a year, they are able to see his goods before ordering, and having them tried they see the effect his Hair Goods Coverings give to their general appearance, but his business has so rapidly grown in the last few years that he is unable to visit these places so often, for this reason. All who require these Goods should not miss the opportunity given by this visit.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the BEST makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

A Mammoth Turnip.

Mr. John Fowler, of lot 1, concession 2, Smith, has left at the EXAMINER office mammoth specimens of the Greystone turnip. The largest measures thirty-six inches in circumference, one foot in diameter, and weighs 18 pounds. The other specimens are nearly as large. Very few can turnip their nose at the quality of Mr. Fowler's fertile soil.

A Picture of Gladstone,

Which readers of this paper can obtain for a nominal price. A very fine portrait of Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Great Britain's greatest statesman and orator, has been published by the Montreal Herald Company. It is 12 by 18 inches in size, is printed on superior toned paper, and makes a handsome picture for framing. It is a companion to the Laurier picture which last year had an enormous sale throughout Canada. Readers of the WEEKLY EXAMINER desirous of obtaining this can get it by sending their name and address, accompanied by six cents to pay the cost of mailing and tubing, to the Montreal Herald Co., 646 Craig street, Montreal.

A High Class Concert in Prospect.

Mr. A. F. Hoover, who has, in the past, held the people of Peterborough under great obligations by bringing the very best concert talent to Peterborough, is arranging for a grand concert at a date yet to be fixed, which will be the only concert he will manage this season. He has been fortunate in securing the services of Herr Yunck, one of the greatest if not the greatest of the violin virtuosos on this continent. This great artist was soloist at the Massey Festival in Toronto last June. His splendid playing always brings him a triumph. Herr Yunck will be assisted in the presentation of a programme of first rate merit, by Mrs. Martin Murphy, soprano, Mr. H. M. Blight, baritone, and Mrs. Blight as accompanist. This concert will be a musical treat of the highest order.

Another Opportunity. Don't Miss it.

Prof. Dorenwend advertises another visit to our town with a full line of his celebrated human hair coverings. St. Paul's Choir Concert.

The choir of St. Paul's church will give a "high tea and concert," on Friday evening, Nov. 16th, in the school room of the church. Two years ago, a similar entertainment was given by the choir and the great success of that occasion furnishes a guarantee that the forthcoming entertainment will be of a high order of merit and well worthy the patronage of the congregation, who have been well and faithfully served by the choir in the musical portion of the services of the church. Not only the choir but the choirmaster, Mr. John Crane, for the willingness they have always shown in promoting the interests of music, are deserving of liberal recognition at the hands of the congregation and the public generally. Proceeds in aid of the church fund.

Young Women's Association.

Rev. Mr. Beer will address the gospel service this evening at 8:30. Come early in the evening and enjoy the excellent music furnished by Miss Rose. Classes in physical culture, cutting and fitting will not be opened before the second week in Nov. Before entering these classes, a membership ticket, which is only fifty cents a year, will necessarily have to be presented. Non-members, who have just given in their names for classes, are kindly requested to bear this in mind. Members in arrears please remember this also. A social will be held on the evening of Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 22nd. An opportunity will be given those, who have received any blessing from the Association, to express it by making a thank-offering. Let all the members look forward to this social and do what they can to make it a success.

The Late Thomas Donovan.

Later intelligence received is to the effect that the late Mr. Thomas Donovan, who died on Wednesday night, at Marquette, Michigan, has been for some time lying ill in the hospital at Marquette. Last fall he broke his leg and was for some months in the hospital at the American "Soo," and it appears that since his departure from the hospital he has been unable to work. The nature of his last illness is not stated. It is not probable that he thought his illness was serious, as he had not communicated with his friends here. Deceased was unmarried, and leaves three brother, (Messrs. J. M., James and William Donovan), the two former being in Peterborough and the latter in New Orleans, and one sister, Mrs. Napolean Trombly, town. The remains are expected to arrive this evening. The funeral takes place from the residence of his brother, Mr. J. M. Donovan, corner of Charlotte and Park streets, to-morrow afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

Fined For Fighting.

A court was held by S. W. Crabtree, Esq., J. P., on Wednesday. Under the direction of the Directors of the Agricultural Society, Constable Nichols had Garner Hunter and Andrew Falls, two young men of South Verulam, before the magistrate, charged with disturbing the peace, on show day, at the Agricultural grounds. It appears that a difference has existed between them for some time, and that when they met on this occasion in question, Falls challenged Hunter to fight. Hunter declined to fight on the grounds, as they would be fined, but words lead on and the challenge was accepted. Falls pleaded guilty and was fined $3 and $2.50 costs. Hunter pleaded not guilty, as he contended that he merely acted in defence. His case was argued by Mr. Robt. Hunter, of Lindsay, who endeavoured to show that the defendant should not be fined. The magistrate said the evidence showed conclusively that Hunter fought, and thereby disturbed the peace. He must therefore inflict a fine, but as Falls had been aggressor, and Hunter had made some effort to avoid the disturbance, the fine would be merely $1 and $2.50 costs.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

—The arson case which was brought before County Magistrate Edmison yesterday was dismissed as the prosecution did not materialize, in fact the plaintiff himself was not present, thus leaving himself open to an action for malicious prosecution.

—Exchanges report a second crop of raspberries and apple and other trees in bloom in October. This is all very well but these things have a strong family resemblance to the ante election promises of municipal candidates—a good deal of "blow" and very little fruit.

—The market to-day was perhaps the best attended one which has been held in Peterborough for some time. The farmers waggons were arranged on both sides of the sidewalk enclosing the market square, while inside the quadrangle they were ranged up and down in rows. The buyers were out in numbers, and the prices obtained for all the produce was good.

—If the druggist would take a portion of the time he now devotes to bewailing his lot and wondering how he can get old time prices for his patent medicines, and devote it to a study of advertising, he would, if experience is any criterion, soon find his position not quite so lamentable as he believes it. The druggist is too prone to incase himself within a professional reserve, and expect people to come to him without direct solicitation. If he is to be a merchant, he must pursue mercantile tactics, and one of the most successful of these is advertising.—Pharmaceutical Era.

—An abusive language case was up in the police court this morning, and the windows of that apartment should be kept wide open for a week to air the place and clear the atmosphere of the taint imparted to it by the repetition of the sample of the language which was used by a man to his wife on the street last Saturday, and which led to a complaint being lodged. The defendant advanced the plea that as the words used were true it was a palliation of the offence, but the magistrate didn't see in in that light at all. The defendant stated his intention of leaving town within a week, and judgment was suspended until next Saturday to give him the opportunity.

THE OUTFALL SEWER MUDDLE.

Renewed Efforts at a Settlement Being Made this Afternoon.

Between forty and fifty labourers were duly on hand this morning at the outfall sewer fully expecting to be engaged on the job of filling it in, but there was no one there to engage their services. The interim injunction, which was taken out by the town yesterday, as stated in last evening's EXAMINER, was thought by some to be the cause of the non-appearance of the township authorities, but it is hardly probable that the work would have gone on anyway. Monaghan is anxious to have the matter settled, and the posting of the bills calling for men to do the work was most likely done simply to bring the town to a settlement.

A joint meeting of the councils of North Monaghan and the town is called in town for this afternoon, but up to three o'clock no meeting had been held, and some of the local councillors knew nothing of the matter. The members of the North Monaghan council were in town. It is understood that Mayor Kendry arranged the meeting.

At the Sherbourne Street Methodist church her solo work has for some time past been one of the most pleasing features of the service." Mrs. Green was contralto soloist in the Charlotte street Methodist church before her removal to Toronto, and the members of the congregation recollect her singing with delight.

PETERBOROUGH HUNTERS—PARTIES COMING AND GOING.

Two Camps Broken up Already—Mr. LeBrun's Party Leaves To-Night

Mr. Harry LeBrun's party leave to-night for the northern part of Stony Lake, where tents will be pitched and a week or ten days spent in hunting. The party is well supplied with hounds, canoes and all the other paraphrenalia accessory to a camp, and expects to be able to render a good account of itself up north. The party is composed of Mr. H. LeBrun, captain, and Messrs. Harry Phelan, W. H. Robinson, Peter Campbell, W. A. Bradburn, C. LeBrun and J. W. Taylor. Mr. Baptiste O'Dette goes along as guide and cook.

Mr. E. B. Stone, his son and Mr. John Armstrong returned last night after spending four or five days up north in the vicinity of Eel Lake. A nice fat buck and a heavy bag of partridges were brought back to town. Both deer and birds are reported scarce around Eel Lake, and those that are there are exceedingly shy. Mr. Stone heard that the other parties who were farther north were having royal sport and making heavy bags of game.

On Wednesday last the Snowden party had already bagged four deer, and a Buckhorn party were even more successful, laying low five large ones.

Mr. Harry Long and a large party of fishing enthusiasts arrived home from Lake Ketche-um last night. The party camped near the mouth of Bottle Creek, and made excursions up into Beaver and Sucker lakes after trout, of which about 150 fine ones were brought home, the largest averaging between seven and eight pounds. The party was composed of Messrs. Harry Long, Arthur Tebb, Felix Brownscombe, John Mein, Harold Rye, V. E. Rye, John Richardson and Harry Lacheur, and all express themselves as delighted with their piscatorial outing.

Quite a number of Edison employees took advantage of the fine weather to-day and shouldering their guns, boarded the train and journeyed south-east to try their luck. Among the boys were noticeable Messrs. Elliott, Carson, Cluman, Knowles, Tanner, Good, Harper and Hiller, who are reported to be exceptionally fine shots, and we expect a good report from them and hope they don't get lost in an Otonabee swamp, a fate that befell the same party last week. As they are accompanied by four fine hounds, it looks as though they had taken proper precautions to ensure their safe return.

Mr. H. Corby, M.P., and his hunting party are reported to have killed two deer and eighty partridge.

John Brown returned from Mud Lake to-day. He brought with him a very heavy deer, four years old. On the hunting expedition he was accompanied by J. Craig, S. Asselstine, of this city, and J. Godfrey and G. Purdy of Sydenham. They shot three large deer. Mr. Brown says there are thousand of wolves in the back country. In the vicinity of his camp he could hear wolves barking all night.—Kingston Whig.

Another day of excitement visited our sister village, Norwood, last week. Some one who knows the Nimrodic pulse, reported a bear in the neighborhood of Gardener's swamp. The report spread like wild fire. Tom Fraser blew his bugle blast, and in a few minutes hounds were baying, guns were clicking, ramrods adjusted and all was ready. Tom was chosen captain, Gosh Darn, lieutenant, George Taylor, commissariat, James Raddon, skinner and meat carver, Josh Pace and Isaac Puffer, outside skirmishers, and Pearce, reserve. In solid phalanx they made for Bruin's abode. On arrival at the swamp dogs were let loose, the swamp surrounded, guns cocked, and all made ready for a bear's "broadside," but the broadside of a head or tail could not be seen or found, and like all other bear hunts of Norwood the bear would not hunt out, so the boys had to return the same as they went. We sympathise with the boys, so many disappointments are bad. Bear meat will soon be at a premium out of the village.—Hastings Star.

Word was sent into town late this afternoon that the Snowden party had killed six deer up to Friday, and that they intended remaining in the woods until the end of next week.

The proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery take all the chances. They make a straightforward offer to return your money if their remedy fails to benefit or cure in all disorders and affections due to impure blood or inactive liver. The germs of disease circulate through the blood: the liver is the filter which permits the germs to enter or not. The liver active, and the blood pure, and you escape disease.

When you're run down, debilitated, weak, and your weight below a healthy standard, you regain health, strength, and wholesome flesh, by using the "Discovery." It builds up the body faster than nauseating Cod liver oils or emulsions.

FAINTED IN CHURCH.

THE DEPLORABLE CONDITION OF A YOUNG LADY IN BROCKVILLE.

A Case That Created Much Interest—Weak Almost Bloodless and Frequently Confined to her Bed—Again Enjoying Complete Health.

From the Brockville Recorder.

Readers of the Recorder have no doubt followed with interest the many instances related in these columns of recoveries—sometimes of a very remarkable nature, of persons affected with diseases of different kinds, by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Apart from the marvellous recoveries, the accounts were interesting to the people of Brockville and vicinity from the fact that this town is the home of the Dr. Williams' Co., and the place where the celebrated medicine is made. The family of Mr. Thomas Humble, residents on Park street north, furnish a case of such recovery no less notable than many previously published, that will be of particular interest in this community. Mr. Humble is an employee of Bowie & Co., brewers, and is well known and highly respected by many of our citizens. The member of his family whose cure we have mentioned, is his eldest daughter Carrie, a girl of about nineteen years of age. The facts in the case were first brought to the notice of the Recorder by Mr. Wm. Birks, a well known merchant tailor, who on one occasion assisted in removing Miss Humble, who was attacked with a fit of extreme weakness while attending service in the George street Methodist church. The other evening a reporter visited the home of the family in question, and upon stating his mission to Mrs. Humble, the story of the case was briefly related, not however, with any desire for notoriety, but rather a determination on her part that it should be given if it might in the least be of benefit to others similarly afflicted. According to her mother's story, Miss Humble's illness dates back to the summer of 1889. Her trouble was extreme weakness and exhaustion, caused by weak and watery blood. She was subject to severe headaches, heart palpitation, and other symptoms which follow a depraved condition of the blood. Often while down street on business the young lady would become so exhausted by the walk as to be scarcely able to get home, and she was frequently confined to her beds for weeks at a time, and had to have her meals carried to her. For a period of over three years she was almost continually under medical treatment. The doctors' medicine would prove of benefit while being taken, but as soon as the treatment was discontinued, the patient would become worse. Her friends were much discouraged and feared she would not recover. In the winter of 1893 Mrs. Humble read of a similar case where a cure was brought about by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This prompted her to give them a trial in her daughter's case, who was at the time so weak that she could not leave her room. The result was remarkable. There was soon a marked improvement, and by the time two boxes were used Miss Humble appeared to be so much recovered that the treatment was discontinued. But it later became evident that the patient had not been fully restored, for after a few months there was a return of the troublesome friends in the United States, in the hope that a change of air would prove beneficial, but she returned to her home worse than when she went away. Her mother was then determined to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a further trial, and the result proved most gratifying, as the girl's health has been completely restored, and she is to-day as well and strong as any girl of her age. Mrs. Humble told the storo of her daughter's illness and recovery with an impressiveness that carried conviction of its absolute truthfulness. Miss Humble also corroborated her statements, and they can be vouched for by many of her friends in the church, the Sunday school and others.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an unfailing cure for all troubles resulting from poverty of the blood or shattered nerves, and where given a fair trial they never fail in cases like the above related. Sold by all dealers or sent postpaid at 50 cents a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N.Y. See that the registered trade mark is on all packages.

NEW PLEA FOR A MURDERER.

His Lawyer Says Truskey is Subject to Pulse Apoplectic Mania.

OTTAWA, Oct. 27.—Wallace Nesbitt Q. C., of Toronto, yesterday had an interview with Mr. Power, Q. C., of the Justice Department, who has charge of all capital cases; also with Mr. Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice, and finally with the Premier asking for intervention in the case of Jos. Truskey, sentenced to death for the murder of Wm. Lindsay. He made a strong case in asking for a commutation on the ground that the prisoner was subject to "pulse apoplectic mania," and was not responsible for his act., or rather could not resist it. Sir John promised to carefully consider the representations made to him.

A company is talked of here with a view of building an electric railway from here to Brockville, a distance of about seventy miles.

West Bruce Reformers Elect Officers.

KINCARDINE, Oct. 27.—The annual meeting of the West Bruce Reform Association was held here yesterday, upwards of 150 delegates being present. Mr. John Humberstone, Ripley, president, in the chair. The officers elected are: President, J. G. Murdock, Lucknow; first vice-president, James Steele, Amberley; second vice, John Pierson, Burgoyne; third vice, Jas. McLeod, Holyrood; treasurer, William Millarton; secretary, William Henderson, Bervie. The date for a convention to select a candidate was, after some discussion, left in the hands of the executive committee.

Sanford Fleming in 'Frisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 27.—Sanford Fleming, commissioner of the Canadian Government in the matter of establishing cable connections between Canada and Australia, and English Commissioner Mercer arrived on the Alameda from Honolulu yesterday morning. Both gentlemen express themselves as sanguine of the success of the cable project. In an interview with a representative of the United Press Mr. Fleming said that he and his colleague were very warmly received by the members of the Hawaiian government, and that the people are more than anxious for a consummation of the project.

Great Vines.

While in the public mind the great vine at Hampton Court Palace is esteemed the most remarkable, even that is excelled in dimensions by the still greater vine at Cumberland Lodge, Windsor Park. Not only these giants, but probably all other vines in the kingdom, have to give place for extent and productiveness to that most remarkable vine which is just at the present moment carrying the enormous quantity of 852 bunches and a total weight materially exceeding half a ton.

Queer Custom.

Asia exaggerates all things, and the virtue of penance among the rest, but the virtue is still believed in, even in Western Europe. The writer has seen a gentleman of Bengal, remarkable at once for wealth and fatness, crawling, stretched at full length, along a road before the image of Juggernaut, suffering, in fact, torture such as no one would inflict upon a convict.

A Brantford Compositor has Diabetes—He Drops 40 Pounds in Weight in a Short Time—How He Was Cured.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 15.—Thos Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier in this city, has seen some ups and dows in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr. Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six boxes worked a complete cure. Mr. Hazelhurst is to-day better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

S. P. SMITH, of Towanda, Pa., whose constitution was completely broken down, is cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He writes:

"For eight years, I was, most of the time, a great sufferer from constipation, kidney trouble, and indigestion, so that my constitution seemed to be completely broken down. I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and took nearly seven bottles, with such excellent results that my stomach, bowels, and kidneys are in perfect condition, and, in all their functions, as regular as clock-work. At the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, my weight was only 129 pounds; I now can brag of 159 pounds, and was never in so good health. If you could see me before and after using, you would want me for a traveling advertisement. I believe this preparation of Sarsaparilla to be the best in the market to-day."

Shipping Trade Is Dull.

MONTREAL, Oct. 27.—The Canada Shipping Company contemplate a big reduction this winter and a meeting will be held shortly to take steps in this direction. It has already been decided to lay up all the company's steamers from the close of navigation to the St. Lawrence until the shipping business gets better. The stock of the company is all held in Montreal and the last transaction in it was made some few weeks ago at 11 cents on the dollar. It is now offered on the stock exchange at 5 cents on the dollar with 1-8 cents bid.

Says Sunday Cars Are Legal.

HAMILTON, Oct. 27.—At the last meeting of the Finance Committee County Crown Attorney John Creerar sent a written opinion as to the legality of running cars and steamboats on Sunday. Mr. Creerar was of the opinion that the running of cars and boats, except for excursion purposes, was quite within the statutes, and advised that no such prosecution as the Lord's Day Alliance wanted the Council to institute would be likely to have any result.

Three Men Burned to Death.

HALIFAX, N.S., Oct. 27.—Two barns of Holmes Kirkpatrick, a farmer of Aylesford, were burned with horses, cows and all the season's crops. Edward Moriarity, a neighboring farmer, rushed into the burning stables to save the horses and lost his own life. Subsequently the remains of two other men were found in the debris. It is thought two tramps slept in the barn and started the fire with their pipes.

Protection for Civil Service Clerks.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—In consequence of the danger of a smallpox epidemic the Interior Department was yesterday ordered closed until Monday for disinfection. Those clerks who have been exposed to infection by contact with the employes of the afflicted law division were granted leave of absence for twelve days. The department will be opened on Monday, but no clerk will be admitted who has not been vaccinated.

The War Against Tyler.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—It is said that Sir Henry Tyler has proxies enough to retain his position as president of the Grand Trunk. The Financial Times this morning publishes six letters urging concerted action on the part of the stockholders with a view to thoroughly investigating the affairs of the Grand Trunk.

Colonization Frauds.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Extensive colonization frauds were discovered by the police yesterday in the twelfth assembly district. Nine men were arrested, each of whom was supplied with a list of twenty or more names and had registered several times. Supt. Byrnes says that before to-morrow night he will have arrested every man in the least connected with the fraud.

Montreal Police Investigation.

MONTREAL, Oct. 27.—The investigation in the workings of the Montreal police detective force was continued last night by the special committee. Chief Detective Cullen was again placed on the stand and examined regarding the prevalence of gambling houses. He admitted that the police had refused to take action in regard to gambling houses unless complaint was laid. He also admitted that the police had received money from outside parties, but it was for expenses. There was nothing of a very startling nature in the evidence.

THE RULING MARKETS.

TORONTO, Oct. 27, 1894.

The tone of the London stock market market was good, but prices finished generally under the best. This movement was concluded with ease. Americans are still neglected and were irregular in their movements, with Louisville and St. Paul strong and the coalers weak.

In Chicago wheat was dull and steady, closing at about the same prices as the previous day. Corn was dull, closing 1-8 to 1-4c higher. Oats showed a similar gain on light trading. Provisions were lower.

On the street 300 bushels of wheat sold at 52c for white and 51c for red; 3,000 of barley at 40 to 45c; 600 of oats at 31 to 31 1-2c; and one load of blackeye peas at 60c. Outside prices were unchanged. The Oswego barley market is unchanged with Canadian still at 61 to 65c.

On the New York stock market, contrary to the week's earlier expectations, no gold was taken for export. Sterling exchange ruled quite as high even this morning as it did when last Saturday's half million of gold was ordered, but it has not presumably been as easy this week to market the requisite drafts against new shipments. One factor which at present seems to have little influence here is the fall in Paris exchange on London below the specie or gold importing point. Berlin exchange on London is also within a fraction of the gold import level. These two items have not at this season been simultaneously touched in many years, not even in 1893, when sixty day money ruled in London at 1-2 per cent.

There is no better medicine for family use than Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Their sugar coating makes them easy and even agreeable to take, and as they contain no calomel or other injurious drug, they are perfectly safe for patients of any age.

A Remarkable Event.

An event which has been the talk of the town for some weeks is the cure of Mr. Edward White, whose sufferings from Salt Rheum (Eczema) were well known. Mr. White's statement is as follows:

For 12 years previous to the last few months I have been a sufferer of the worst kind from Salt Rheum. I tried twelve different doctors, besides many patent medicines but received no benefit, but gradually became worse. Last January I was advised to try B. B. B. by the postmaster here. I soon perceived a decided change for the better, and it only took six bottles to make a complete cure.

EDW. WHITE, Victoria Corner, N.B.

Mr. J. B. Bowser, Merchant; Mr. Jas. W. Boyer, Manufacturer, and Mr. Thos. W. Letson, J. P., can certify to the truth of the above statement.

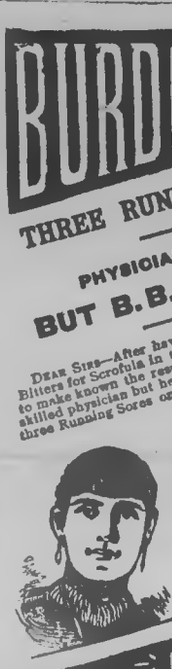
BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS
THREE RUNNING SORES
PHYSICIANS FAILED
BUT B.B.B. CURED



DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

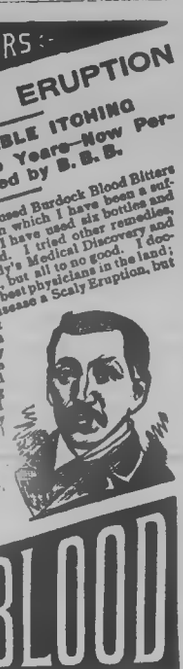
A SCALY ERUPTION
UNENDURABLE ITCHING
Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.



GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

OUT FOR ANNEXATION.

The American Union Party to Make it the Leading Issue.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 27.—The United Press correspondent at Honolulu, writing under date of October 19, says: On the 13th inst. a convention of thirty delegates of the American Union party of this island met and adopted a platform of seventeen articles and nominated for the approaching election on the 29th inst six senators and six representatives. The senators are all well known and trusted men. This ticket represents the great majority of the registered voters, and will undoubtedly be elected. The leading plank in the platform declares annexation to be the foremost mission of the party. Three planks oppose the further introduction and employment of Asiatic labor. Reform is asked in land distribution and in taxation, and homesteads for the native Hawaiians are recommended. The action for annexation will be in the hands of the senate. While some of the planters are dissatisfied toward annexation the great body of the whites are urgent for it as the great security of a stable government.

ANOTHER RELAPSE

The Czar of Russia is Growing Steadily Worse.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—The Lokal Anzeigner publishes a despatch from Livadia saying that the Czar has suffered a very serious relapse and it is not expected that he can survive the night or to-morrow at the very furthest.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 27.—The marriage of Princess Alix and the Czarewitch has been set for October 29, subject to change. The last bulletin from Livadia was issued at 9 o'clock last evening. It says: "During the day the Emperor ate with a good appetite, but felt some weakness; otherwise his condition is unchanged."

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Daily News correspondent in St. Petersburg says: "The Princess Alix's conversion and the exchange of rings has been effected already. According to private advices the Czar is growing steadily worse." Private letters received in Vienna say that the development of the cancerous symptoms in the Czar's case has extinguished all hope.

Japs Win Again.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—A despatch to the Central News from Tokio says that Field Marshal Count Yamagata has reported to the Emperor that at daybreak on Oct. 25 the Japanese army under his command completed its crossing of the Yalu river and in the forenoon attacked and defeated the Chinese near Fu-Shang, also capturing a fortress on the right bank of the river Ai. According to the statement of a Chinese officer who was made prisoner the enemy was eighteen battalions strong. The Chinese lost 200 killed and a large number wounded, though it is not known how many. The number of Japanese killed or wounded was five officers and ninety men. Count Yamagata adds: Col. Sato with his detachment has rejoined the main army and we expect to attack Kulienchao at daybreak on October 26.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—A despatch to the Times from Tien-Tsin says that thirty-seven transports were sighted Wednesday making toward Tatung-Kao (Hai-Yun-Tau) near the scene of the late naval battle. The Yokoham correspondent says it is believed in that city that the Japanese army numbering 22,000 men landed at Shang-Ting, north of Talian Bay, Tuesday.

Bradstreet's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Bradstreet's review says: Merchant's interviewed in various portions of the country report in some instances, the condition of business not having realized anticipations and at other points that the recent bright outlook for trade is modified. Such advices are based in part on the practical conclusion of the fall trade and delays in demand for holiday goods. Dealers in dry goods, clothing, groceries, shoes, hats and a few other lines have had relatively the more satisfactory volume of business, although in many instances faults have been found with the totals shipped. General trade continues checked throughout some portions of the regions supplied by Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha, Minneapolis and St. Paul due to unseasonably warm weather. Exports of wheat and flour as wheat from both coasts of the United States and Canada for six business days ending with October 25 equal 3,353,000 bushels as compared with 3,192,000 bushels last week.

McKinley's Tariff Speeches'.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 26.—Gov. McKinley in his tour through the state, stopped yesterday at Auburn and said: "What we want in this country is good money, good times, good wages and steady employment. The American farmer wants a good home market. He sells ninty per cent of his produce in this country. The Democratic party has been troubling itself about the other ten per cent. You cannot have steady employment at good wages if you give part of the work to foreign countries. You can't import a single competing product from a foreign country without displacing the American product.

American Cattle Excluded.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The German ambassador notified the Secretary of State that in consequence of the introduction of Texas fever by means of two shipments from New York the importation of fresh beef and cattle from the United States to Germany will shortly be prohibited. Shipments made from the United States up to the 28th inst. will be allowed to enter German ports, but only on condition of being slaughtered upon landing.

Pathetic Scene in Court.

BUFFALO, Oct. 27.—Clarence Robinson and his wife, Sarah Robinson, were arraigned in the Supreme Court yesterday for the murder of Montgomery Gibbs. Both pleaded not guilty to the indictments. As Mrs. Robinson was being led from the room she sprang away from the deputy sheriff and threw herself on her husband's neck. They kissed each other with passionate fierceness, and the officers had to pull them apart. Nothing was said by either of them.

When Others Fail

Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the shattered system by giving vigorous action to the digestive organs, creating an appetite and purifying the blood. It is prepared by modern methods, possesses the greatest curative powers, and has the most wonderful record of actual cures of any medicine in existence. Take only Hood's.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. 25c.

AN ADDRESS AND A FAREWELL AT THE Y.M.C.A.

Mr. George J. Early Once More the Recipient of Kind Wishes Expressed in an Address—Regrets at his Departure.

A farewell by the Board of Directors and Ladies Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. was tendered Mr. George J. Early last evening.

About fifty guests were present, and Mr. J. Williams Bennett occupied the chair. The proceedings were opened with religious exercises, after which the chairman in a few remarks briefly stated the object of the assemblage, which was to give evidence of the esteem in which Mr. Early was held, and to express the regrets of all at his departure from Peterborough. Mr. Bennett stated that it afforded him great pleasure to occupy the chair on such an occasion, in order that he might publicly compliment Mr. Early on the progress which the Y.M.C.A. work had made during his regime.

THE ADDRESS.

Mr. A. L. Grover, recording-secretary of the Association, was called upon to read the following address, which will be richly engrossed and framed in Toronto, from where it will be forwarded to Mr. Early in his new home in Cannington:

Peterborough, 16th Oct., 1894.

To Geo. J. Early, Esq., First Vice-President Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association:

DEAR MR. EARLY—The Board of Directors of the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association meet to night to take leave of you with profound regret, but cannot do so without at least testifying their gratitude for your eminent services to the Board and Association for the past ten years. Whether you occupied the highest position in the gift of the Association or that of the ordinary member of the Board, you always displayed the utmost zeal in and attention to all the details of the work, but probably in no department did your efforts prove so beneficial and absolutely necessary as when a member of the Finance Committee.

Little did the members of this Association and even some of the members of this Board know what time and effort you devoted from year to year to keep the Association free from debt, what anxiety you suffered, when fruitless visits were made to your fellow townsmen, and what sacrifice of your own desires and domestic enjoyment you made at all times for the social and spiritual welfare of your fellow beings. Rest assured you leave a blank in the work that will be hard to fill. It is the prayer of the Board that you and Mrs. Early may enjoy many years of happiness and usefulness and that you may yet see many grand results of your work here, in which you have always had such a warm interest and prominent part.

Signed on behalf of the Board,

J. W. BENNET, President.
A. L. GROVER, Rec.-Secretary.

Mr. Early in reply thanked the Board for the many kind words which were embraced in the address and explained the origin of his connection with the Y.M.C.A. work. Eighteen years ago in Cobourg he was brought to Christ through the influence of the Association, therefore the Y.M.C.A. always had a warm place in his heart. When he first came to Peterborough he joined a temperance lodge and, and shortly afterwards was drawn into the active work of the Y.M.C.A. Ten years ago he had been appointed to serve on the Invitation Committee and continued to occupy various positions on the Board, until five years ago when he was elected to the highest office in the gift of the Association. This he had considered a very great honour as well as a great surprise.

He stated that he would feel it very much—leaving the work here and he would miss it more than he could tell in Cannington, where he was going. He trusted that the Association would soon have a secretary to take his place, who was worthy of the cause.

The following gentlemen then spoke in the very highest terms of Mr. Early, both as an officer of the Association and private individual,—Messrs. Sutherland, G. M. Roger, J. Richardson, A. J. Pickle, J. W. Garvin, Bruce Anderson, Alfred Parker and Sheriff Hall. Many others who were present would have been pleased to add their testimony also, regarding Mr. Early's worth, but as the hour was growing late, this portion of the "Farewell" was closed with the singing of that singularly sweet and touching hymn, "God be with you till we meet again."

The Ladies Auxiliary now took their share in the evening's entertainment by inviting all to the supper room, where a most bountiful repast was spread. During the evening, most excellent music was rendered Miss Jewett and the Messrs. Miller.

While President of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Early was successful in working the Association up to the highest pitch of perfection to which it had ever attained.

THE LATE MRS. POOLE EASTLAND

Death of One of the Oldest Residents of Peterborough.

Last night at 12 o'clock Catharine A. Beatty, relict of the late Mr. Poole Eastland, died at the family residence, 199 Simcoe street at the age of 66 years. She had been ill for about two years with dropsy, which resulted in her death last night. The deceased was a native of Port Hope, and when three years of age came to Peterborough with her father, the late John Beatty, who on his arrival in the place took up a lot from the Government, part of which was occupied by Mrs. Eastland at the time of her death. Doubtless Mrs. Eastland was the oldest resident of Peterborough, having lived here 63 years. She was highly respected, and will be held in revered remembrance by, especially, the older residents of the town. The funeral takes place from the family residence, 199 Simcoe street, on Sunday at 2.30 o'clock.

LACROSSE.

The Port Hope Evening Guide has the following to say:—"Peterborough has asked the Shamrocks and Capitals to play off their tie at that place!! We suppose it can be done if a third of the men of each side play the necessary time, and the other two thirds do their share respectively, and then count up the score, but for both teams to play in Peterborough's coop is as difficult a feat as the proverbial entrance of a camel through the eye of the needle. Have they decided yet in what part of the town they will hold the next World's Exposition before they communicate with the directors about it?" The Guide is a little "off" in its statement—the first advance was made by the clubs in question and not by Peterborough. The less Port Hope has to say on the lacrosse question the better, until its disgraceful flunk in the C. L. A., series is a little less fresh in the minds of the people.

LIGHT WANTED.

A Teacher of a Bible Class Otonabee S. S. Asks for Information.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly allow me through the EXAMINER to ask the Normal and Institute Association of the Township of Otonabee Sabbath school, what is meant by the words "destroy us" in the 24th verse S. S. lesson, Oct. 21st, and recorded in Mark I, 21-34. Had the unclean spirit reference to himself and his demaniac associates being destroyed, or did he mean himself and the man possessed that our Lord was about to destroy and in what sense could it be said that Jesus destroys a spirit, though unclean, or man even possessed of a devil. An answer that will throw light on this (to our mind) a very obscure passage of Scripture, will be thankfully received by

FRANTIC WITH BOILS

And Itching, Would Scratch Until Blood Ran Down His Limbs. Forced to Take to His Bed. Whole System Affected. Doctor after Doctor Without Cure. Instant Relief, Speedy Cure by Using Cuticura Remedies.

My sufferings might have been stopped if I had only known of your CUTICURA REMEDIES eighteen years ago. I contracted the fever and ague, and it settled my kidneys, badly that I had to have an operation, from which resulted blood poison, and I suffered untold agonies. To make my sufferings more, my left leg below the knee broke out in large blood boils, and commenced a scaly, itching irritation, so that at times I was almost frantic, and would scratch until the blood would trickle down my leg. In the summer these large boils would commence, during which time I would have three or four which were so painful that at times I was forced to take to my bed. Every winter a dry itching scaly mass would gather on my leg, which with the boils, seemed to effect my whole system. During all this time, a period of three to nine months, I had doctor after doctor, but they gave me only temporary relief. This last fall I commenced using your CUTICURA, CUTICURA SOAP, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, and now the scales have all gone, the itching all gone, I have not felt sick, and have worked all winter. I would not suffer again as I have for the past eighteen years for anything. I had doctors from the west to the east, all to no purpose. I have not felt so well or been so long without a sick spell since taking your remedies. Thanks to them and to you, and the great Maker of mankind for my returning health.

LONDON CABLE LETTER

England Awaits Anxiously the Result of the Czar's Illness.

CROWN PRINCE'S ATTITUDE

Thought to be Friendly Towards England and Likely to be Less So Towards France Than His Father—Secretary Asquith On Labor.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—George Smalley cables to the Tribune from London: The great issues which hang upon the Czar's life have kept all eyes fixed all the week on Livadia. Down to Wednesday his death was thought a question of days if not hours. Since then the bulletins have been slightly better, and there is now some hope that he may live for weeks; none that he may recover. Probably there is no responsible statesman in Europe who does not look with dread to the possibilities which his death opens. What Lord Rosebery said at Sheffield on Thursday is no more than what all Europe feels. He spoke for all Europe when he described the Czar as "a monarch whose watchword and whose reign and whose character have been the worship of truth and the worship of peace." The Prime Minister and late foreign minister of Great Britain knows whereof he speaks when he affirms publicly that "if peace had not been broken in more than one instance during late years it is due as much to the character and influence of the Emperor of Russia as to any other cause we can mention."

Such a tribute from such a source and from the head of a state often necessarily in collision with Russia has never been paid to another sovereign nor was ever better deserved.

France may learn from it that she has no monopoly of interest in the ruler of Russia. There are European interests less selfish than hers. France, indeed, has been in a panic since it became known that the Czar's life was in imminent danger. She sees slipping away from her the support on which she counted. She would not take warning by the recent declaration of the Czar's minister most in his confidence that Russia would be no party to an aggressive war, whether France or any other power began it. She relied blindly on Cronstadt and Toulon and on a few civil words from Copenhagen, where the Czar was visiting, while Paris was in delirium.

It is no secret that on his visit here the Czarewitch showed himself cordial and sympathetic.

The Queen's influence over him was thought to be great, and an influence of that kind still counts for much. His marriage with Princess Alix of Hesse brings him near to the royal family of England. The days of alliances based on marriage ties are not quite over. They are certainly not over in Russia, where old ideas and old feelings of consanguinity and connection are still strong. Russia would not understand her new Emperor if he showed himself hostile to a fellow sovereign whose granddaughter he weds. The French know all this, vaguely if not accurately, and it adds to their depression. Elsewhere it adds to the security of the future, for it is everywhere felt that aggression is more likely from France than from any other power and that it is less likely if the new Emperor lends it no countenance.

But the shadow of death is a warning which even the French cannot disregard. It covers France with gloom, and it is the more menacing because no man quite knows what the Czarewitch thinks and feels and intends. He may prove as friendly to France as his father. It is more probable that he will prove less so. He has kept his own counsel. No word publicly spoken by him can be quoted but those mostly likely to know privately describe him privately as anti-French and friendly to England. Anti-French in the sense that he will not strengthen, but probably loosen the ties, whatever they be which bind or are supposed to bind France and Russia. Friendly to England from personal predilections and family connections.

France will draw comforting conclusion from that part of the Prime Ministers Rosebery's Sheffield speech, touching Madagascar. He declares that in no recent negotiations between France and England has the word Madagascar been mentioned. She will at once understand that she is to have a free hand in Madagascar and a message is doubtless already on its way to her Buccaneering envoy, M. LeMyre de Vilers that he need give no thought to England. True Lord Rosebery limits his remark. He assumes that France will do nothing more than she may rightly do under her protectorate. Is Siam forgotten so soon? the French idea of what may rightly be done under pretence of protecting Madagascar will soon be made clear and England is likely enough to find France solidly established on the flank of her one road to India over the high seas.

The French press, never well or quickly informed, had received yesterday but an imperfect summary of Lord Rosebery's words, and their comments are cautious. They snatch at his recognition of a French protectorate over Madagascar, as if there had been some doubt whether Lord Rosebery might not repudiate the unlucky Salisbury agreement of 1890. This is absurd. They will like much less his frank declaration next day against the channel tunnel, that mad scheme to which Mr. Gladstone under Sir Edward Watkins' influence, and in his most cosmopolitan mood, lent his ill-considered sanction.

The Prime Minister's Sheffield speech is a clear appeal to the patriotic sentiment of the nation and there is a clear response. He has set his foot on the little England faction. He describes it in terms which they will not forgive and others will not forget as "the party of a small England, of a shrunken England, of a degraded England, of a neutral England, of submissive England." That party, says Lord Rosebery, has died. It is at any rate now buried beneath all these adjectives. The Sheffield speech is its funeral oration. The fact that certain conspicuous members of it are also members, conspicuous and otherwise, of Lord Rosebery's cabinet, gives point to the oration.

Nobody ever supposed that the present Prime Minister had the least sympathy with that party. His predecessor perhaps had. More than once Lord Rosebery came into collision with Mr. Gladstone on questions which involved the greater question, whether little England or greater Britain was to prevail. More than once Mr. Gladstone had to decide whether he would give way or lose his foreign minister. He always gave way. Now that Mr. Gladstone is gone Sir William Harcourt and Mr. Labouchere are commonly supposed to be the leaders of the clique which regards Holland as the ideal commonwealth which England ought to copy. Mr. Labouchere has hardly a following. Sir William's sphere is finance. The policy of the Liberal party is the policy of the Prime Minister.

Mr. Asquith, who may be called the labor member of Lord Rosebery's cabinet, has been speaking on labor. This is his third speech this week. The others are of no great importance, but this is important because of the Home Secretary's relations to the labor party. It is to both sides a disappointing speech, and for the same reason that it is the speech of a politician not of a statesman. It is an open attempt to catch votes. The workingmen see that just as plainly as those who are not workingmen. Mr. Asquith, while civil, extremely civil, to every shade and set of labor leaders, depreciates the formation of a labor party as such. He invites laborers to put their trust in Liberalism, and tells them truly enough that to organize a third party will help the Conservatives.

The purient fanatics of the London county council have triumphed, and a license has been refused to the Empire Theatre, except on condition that the promenade be closed and no drinks sold in the auditorium. The music halls are, I hear, waiting, all considering that a stand must be made unless they are all to be made or all placed under petticoat ordinances. The effect on the next county council election promises to be considerable. The workingmen of London don't like their amusements interfered with, and don't like being told they cannot take care of themselves. Grandmotherly government, whether parliamentary or municipal, is unpopular in this country. Unpopular also is the obvious unfairness of the council in singling out one hall, condemning it on the volunteered testimony of amateur purists and leaving two others in full blast. The Empire has closed and its 600 employes are on the streets.

Slowly, but I think surely, the project for rescuing Carlyle's house in Chelsea from decay and desecration is taking shape. Messrs. Lumsden and Miller, who conceived it, have shown tact as well as energy and patience. They have secured some very strong names for their committee, including the Duke of Argyle, Baroness Burdett Coutts, Dr. Garnett, of the British Museum, and Mr. John Bigelow. More good American names would be welcomed and, of course, American subscriptions. Carlyle's niece lends her sanction and name and has promised gifts of relics, including the furniture, books and pictures which once belonged to Carlyle. The house, if acquired, will soon become a museum. Those concerned hope that Americans will be not less interested than Englishmen in thus setting up an international memorial to the great writer.

CAPRIVI'S SUCCESSOR.

The Chancellorship and Prussian Ministry's Presidency United.

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—Prince von Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst, as the result of his conference with the Emperor at Potsdam, has accepted the appointment of Chancellor to succeed Gen. von Caprivi and also the portfolio of President of the Prussian Council of Ministers, vacated by the resignation of Count Bothe Zueulenberg.

A story is in circulation that the Emperor while at Liebenburg was shown an article in the Cologne Gazette violently indignantly requested Chancellor Caprivi opposing Count Zueulenburg. The Emperor to disown the article. Caprivi replied that he had not written it, nor had he ordered it written, but he declared that its contents were absolutely true. A breach between the Emperor and the Chancellor was the result and the latter immediately received his conge.

The newspapers comment thus on Caprivi's fall and the cabinet crisis:

Hamburger Nachrichten (Bismarckian): It does not matter who his successor may be, for he will merely execute the Emperor's will. We hear that Count Zothe Zueulenburg before resigning earnestly advised the Emperor to re-unite the chancellorship and Prussian premiership.

Reichsbote (Con.): Caprivi fulfilled the prophecy that he made when appointed, namely, that he must sacrifice himself. Even his most violent opponents must admit that he was a man of noble thought and action, although he lacked the power and energy which Germany expects from her chancellor.

Vossiche Zeitung (Radical): Nobody of sound judgment desires more severe legislation against the socialists. It is a strange dispensation of fate, that Bismarck went because he wanted too severe measures and Caprivi because he wanted too mild ones. Prince Hdhenlohe has proved by his deeds his friendship for Prussia. His name is connected intimately with the history of German unity. He is of a peaceful, conciliatory nature and is opposed to police legislation. His appointment is a guarantee that the foreign policy will remain in the old course. Baron Koeller is a person of an entirely different sort. He won his spurs as a police president of Frankfort. He is a friend of Dr. Miguel, and is well fitted to spin the yarn of the Puttkamers and Eulemburg.

CHATTELLE'S HISTORY

His Early Life at St. Hyacinthe and His Wanderings Abroad.

AWAY FROM HOME FOR YEARS

Then He Returned Suddenly, and as Mysteriously Disappeared Again Last September—He Was a Miner, a Sailor and a Tramp—His Folks Shocked.

MONTREAL, Oct. 29.—A special despatch from St. Hyacinthe states that Almeda Chattelle was born in that town 38 years ago. He has two brothers and several sisters alive and married there. In his youth Chattelle was one of the altar boys there in the Roman Catholic church, and was rather a commonplace youth. While in his teens, however, he became restless, and one day disappeared from St. Hyacinthe. Year after year passed and no tidings of the missing boy reached his parents, who mourned him as one dead.

Chattelle told his friends when he was in St. Hyacinthe in September last that he never had time to make the trip from Montreal or Quebec back to St. Hyacinthe. He deserted from a ship when in New York and made his way across the continent and it was then that he fell in with the James boys. But he had been west before this, for when the gold fever broke out in the State of California Chattelle, youth though he was, joined the army of "forty-niners," and tried his fortune in the western gold fields. His luck was but indifferent, and he shipped from San Francisco for New York and thus first took to sea.

After having thus, as it were, roved from clime to clime for 30 years, Chattelle took a notion last summer to return to St. Hyacinthe. His father and mother were dead and his brothers and sisters had houses of their own. The old home had passed into other hands. It was near the first of July when the long absent man came back. No one knew him, he had to impress his identity upon his friends before they would receive him. Chattelle was well dressed, and expressed a desire to settle down in his birthplace. He cast about for employment and shortly after he reached here procured work with the Electric Light Co. In September he disappeared. He left suddenly and without warning one Saturday night, after being paid by the Light Co.

News of Chattelle's arrest caused a sensation in St. Hyacinthe and the confession he has made caused another and greater one. It is believed some of Chattelle's relatives will go from St. Hyacinthe to Stratford to see the unfortunate man.

Chattelle had a conversation with a reporter, in which he told of his loathsome crime. He met Jessie on the track and attempted to assault her.

"Did you accomplish your purpose?

"No; she resisted me on the track, and was too strong for me, and after a struggle I hit her on the head with a stone, rendering her insensible. I then half-carried, half-supported her across the field to the bush, where I cut her throat and then inflicted the other wounds."

"What did you do with the organs you removed?"

"I buried them in a field near where the valise was found. I can't describe the place exactly, but if a bloodhound was put on the scent it would find them."

"Why did you remove the parts?"

"I don't know; after I found I could not accomplish my purpose I became maddened and did not know what followed."

"Why did you strip the body?"

"I don't know."

"There was a strong case against you?"

"Yes, and the witnesses told the truth for the most part."

"They say you have been guilty of similar acts before this?"

"No, never; and I would not do it again for all the world. I am sorry I killed the poor girl."

"Were you not afraid of being lynched?"

"I would not have cared. I might as well die to-day as to-morrow. What difference does a day make? I did it. I have confessed it, and I have got to die anyway, and the sooner it is over the better."

A bad smash up took place at the junction of the Parry Sound and Canada Atlantic railways in this city Saturday. A train backing up on the C. A. The roadbed was torn up for some distance, but everything was in repair and in running order yesterday.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1894.

THE Evening News says:—"There are few more eloquent men on this continent than the Hon. Mr. Laurier. His position in this respect is already established; but, if it were not, the beautiful passage in which he, last night, took leave of his western friends would of itself be sufficient to stamp him as one of the greatest orators of the day. Of the fifteen representatives now sitting in the Commons for the territory west of the lakes, only one is a Liberal. But at the banquet given to Mr. Laurier, in Winnipeg, last night, the chairman predicted that three-fourths of the delegation returned at the next election will be found supporting the Reform leader. Nor does the boast seem altogether unreasonable. The election of Mr. Martin about a year ago, and the reception tendered Mr. Laurier during the tour just concluded, are indications that a great change of public opinion has taken place in the west."

TENDERS are asked for the construction of 2½ miles of canal on the Lake Simcoe and Balsam Lake section of the Trent Valley Canal, and 3½ miles on the Peterborough and Lakefield section. When completed these works, the Globe remarks, will increase the navigable water by nine miles, but their result in the ridings of Victoria and Peterborough cannot be so easily estimated.

THE protectionist doctrine is to care for the rich that the rich may care for the poor. The correct principle is to give the poor a chance and they will take care of themselves. Making paupers for the sake of caring for them is a poor way to build up a strong national life. But taxing the poor to enrich the rich is abominble.

THE Empire is now moving for the abolition of the Ontario Education Department. One could not expect a man without arms or legs to have a very strong personal interest in the maintenance of a gymnasium.

HON. MR. LAURIER'S TRANSCONTINENTAL TOUR.

A Remarkable Progress of the Great Liberal Leader.

Mr. Laurier's speech at Winnipeg on Thursday night was the close of one of the most remarkable political journeys ever undertaken and carried out in this country. It began with a speech at St. Lin in the County of Assumption, Quebec, on the 17th of August, so that in mere duration as well as in the extent of country traversed, and the number of people addressed, it exceeds all the records. Mr. Laurier spoke to great audiences at Brampton, Brantford, North Bay, Mattawa, Sudbury, Sault Ste. Marie, Fort William and Rat Portage, and at each place was accorded a splendid reception. The capital of the Province of Manitoba was the next stopping place, and here Mr. Laurier was surrounded by the leaders of public opinion in that Province. The plan of the journey was to make the distance from Winnipeg to the coast almost without stopping, so that the actual work of the educative campaign would be commenced in British Columbia, and then continued without interruption through the Province, through the Territories and so working homewards through various points in Manitoba until the grand close in Winnipeg on Thursday night.

This plan was carried out, with the exception that, although no formal speeches were made after leaving Regina on the way westward through which the Opposition leader passed made a point to be on hand for the brief time that the train stopped at stations to give their leader a kindly welcome and speed him on his way. When the stop was long enough to permit of it addresses of welcome were read and a brief speech made in reply. Of this nature were the warm welcomes extended to the Liberal leader and his colleagues at Calgary, Medicine Hat, Mission City, Westminster Junction and other places. These were only a symptom, however,, of the enthusiasm which was exhibited at these points when the real work of the tour began on the return journey. It would be of little avail to trace Mr. Laurier from place to place on that remarkable tour, but it will suffice to say that every considerable community that came within the geographical scope of the return journey in the Province of British Columbia in the Territories of Alberta Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, and in the Province of Manitoba, was visited and the Liberal policy explained and expounded to the thousands of men who gathered from the surrounding country.

Whatever variety the art of the orator imparted to Mr. Laurier's addresses, he took care to tell his hearers that the burden of his song was the same everywhere. The people of Canada to engage their attention, but the paramount one is that of the tariff. It is the broad line of division between the two parties, and is the leading feature of the platform of the third party that has appeared in Canadian politics. This therefore formed the central theme in all Mr. Laurier's utterances. Whether in Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan, Alberta or British Columbia, the burden of his story was the same—the injustice, the partiality and the oppressiveness of the protective tariff. In the west his tour creates a new political epoch. In the past, to a large extent, political contests there were fought on personal lines. In newly-settled lands the settler has so many relations with the Government, his interests are affected so materially by the attitude of the official class towards him that election contests are apt to be decided by considerations altogether dissevered from the question as to which of the policies of the political parties is most likely to promote the prosperity of the greatest number of individuals in the community. This era is well passed now, and Mr. Laurier's visit has administered the touch that was needed for its final overthrow.—Globe.

HAVE MANY POLITICAL PROBLEMS

A POPULAR MONTH FOR WEDDING

Marriages in Which Many or Those in the Vicinity are Interested.

FELL—JEWISON.

(Omemee Mirror.)

A very happy event took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. David Jewison, Fairview Farm, South Monaghan, on Wednesday evening, October 17th, when their youngest daughter, Miss Cora Eliza Jewison, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. William Fell, of Baillieboro. The bride looked charming in her beautiful costume, as also did the bridesmaid, Miss Eva May Fry, of Millbrook, cousin of the bride, in a facsimile dress. The groom was ably supported through the trying ordeal by his cousin, Mr. Edward Dawson, of South Monaghan. The marriage ceremony, which took place at seven o'clock, was conducted with dignity by the Rev. T. S. McKee, of Baillieboro. There were only a few of the most intimate relatives of the contracting parties present to witness the pleasing affair. Immediately upon the nuptials being made, all present sat down to a sumptuous supper that had been prepared for the occasion by the bride's mother. The evening was spent very pleasantly by those present, until about 11 o'clock, when the newly-married couple left for their future home in Baillieboro. The presents to the bride were both costly and numerous, among which were: A very fine solid gold watch and chain presented by the groom, a beautiful lemonade set by the bridesmaid, and a lovely and useful set of flat irons with heavy gold plating on them, by the groomsman. Space does not permit me to enumerate the total list. Your correspondent joins heartily with the many friends of the newly married couple in wishing them peace, happiness and prosperity throughout life.

REEVES—DICKSON.

The Renfrew Mercury speaks in the following complimentary terms of a marriage which took place in Calabogie recently:—"On Wednesday morning of this week the home of Mr. Stephen Dickson, Calabogie, was the scene of an interesting event, it being the occasion of the marriage of his daughter, Bella, to Rev. A. C. Reeves of Lakefield, Ont. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. Taylor, of Lochwinnoch, in the presence of the near relatives and a few intimate friends of the bride. Miss Mary E. Dickson, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. M. H. Wilson supported the groom. In the marriage of Miss Dickson Calabogie loses one of its best citizens, and the Presbyterian church one of its most active and painstaking members, but this much Lakefield has gained. The bride was the recipient of many presents, which bear their own testimony as to the esteem in which she was held. Mr and Mrs. Reeves have set out in life accompanied by the good wishes of the citizens of Calabogie, for future success and usefulness in their field of labour. They left by the noon train for Kingston, Montreal, etc., where they will spend some time in visiting friends before returning to Lakefield."

MONTREAL, Oct. 29,—Dr. A. G. McCormick, of Richmond Que., whose remarkable cure of Bright's Disease, by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, has been set forth in his letter, recently published, is a graduate of McGill College, this city. He is well known, not only to the medical profession in Montreal, but throughout the entire province, as a careful and reputable physician, and his testimony to the worth of Dodd's Kidney Pills is accepted by physicians generally as a guarantee of the efficacy of the remedy. Such a communication, coming from so eminent a graduate of McGill, will have the effect of making Dodd's Kidney Pills universally popular in Quebec.

that you stand on—with a cough or a cold, and your blood impure. Out of just these conditions comes Consumption.

You must do something. In the earlier stages of Consumption, and in all the conditions that lead to it, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a certain remedy. This scrofulous affection of the lungs, like every other form of Scrofula, can be cured by it. In severe, lingering Coughs, all Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, and every disease that can be reached through the blood, it is the only medicine so effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure you have your money back. Nervous prostration and debility are conquered by it.

Coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, and all lung troubles are quickly cured by Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam.

Indigestion Cured.

GENTLEMEN,—I can safely say that B. B. B. is a successful cure for Indigestion. I had this trouble bad last summer and two bottles of B.B.B. built me up again. It's a good reliable medicine, both for Indigestion and as a blood purifier.

No Strength, No Ambition

Hood's Sarsaparilla Gave Perfect Health.

The following letter is from a well-known merchant tailor of St. George, N. B.:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen—I am glad to say that Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills have done me a great deal of good. I had a severe attack of the grip in the winter, and after getting over the fever I did not seem to gather strength, and had no ambition. Hood's Sarsaparilla proved to be just what I needed. The results were very satisfactory, and I recommend this medicine to all who are afflicted with rheumatism or other

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

MRS. HARTLEY IS FREE

The Jury Say She Is Not Guilty of Her Husband's Murder.

CHEERS GREET THE VERDICT

To Subdue the Enthusiastic Demonstrations of the Audience the Judge Sends Three of the Offenders to the Cells—Osler's Grand Effort.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 29.—On the fourth day of the Hartley murder trial a large number of farmers from the vicinity of New Durham crowded the court and listened to all the details of the trial with intense interest.

The defence was commenced, and Mr. Osler put forward witnesses to show that Ling has a bad reputation for veracity.

The first witness was John Hill, of New Durham. I know Louis Henry Ling. He has not a very good reputation for veracity in the neighborhood of New Durham. I would not like to believe him on oath. His reputation was not good for truthfulness before the death of Caleb Hartley.

I have been called "Mr. Slick" as a nickname, but I do not know the reason why.

I think his reputation is attributed to the rumors regarding the relations between himself and Mrs. Hartley.

I have heard his character for untruthfulness spoken of before last Christmas but cannot recall the names. Most of the talk I have heard concerning Ling's untruthfulness has been spoken since Hartley's death, and the chief reason I have for not believing him is a talk I had with him myself.

Jacob Moore, of Norwich, said: Ling had made no reputation for telling the truth. I would not care to believe him on oath. Ling worked for me about nine years ago, and while with me he lied to me several times. What he told me, together with what my neighbors said about him since, leads me to say I would not believe him on oath.

Robert Kelly, of Wyndham Township, said: Ling worked for me two years ago. I did not find him truthful and his reputation for veracity was not good. From my own knowledge and what I have heard about him I would not like to believe him on oath.

The whole day was taken up with this kind of evidence.

After producing twenty witnesses to swear that they would not believe Ling upon oath, the defence rested their case. Counsel began at one o'clock to address the jury.

Mr. Osler made the most powerful address of his career. He began by pointing out the gravity of the case, and drew the attention of the jury to the fact that it was a woman and not a man with whom they were dealing. He claimed that there was a marked absence of sufficient motive for the crime, inasmuch as the amount of money to be realized was small. He then proceeded to castigate Ling. He pointed out the fact that twenty people who had known him for some time (some for many years) had said on oath that they would not believe him. Most had declared that even his sworn statement could not be relied upon. Ling, he said, was the man who had committed the crime and not Mrs. Hartley.

There was a motive for this. Once Hartley was dead Ling would have the money and the woman.

Mr. Osler then asked the jury not to condemn Mrs. Hartley, but to do what was just—to acquit her.

The jury retired at 7 o'clock.

At 10.15 they returned to court, when the foreman announced that they had found the prisoner, Marie Hartley, not guilty of the charge.

A loud cheer at once burst from the audience, which was immediately suppressed.

The judge ordered three of the offenders to the cells for forty-eight hours as a punishment.

The prisoner was warned of the narrow escape she had and was thereupon discharged.

There Will Not be War.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Senor Lazo Arriaga, the Guatemalan Minister to-day made the following statement regarding the boundary dispute between his county and Mexico: "I believe that war between the two nations is a very improbable contingency not only because the present difficulties are not of great importance but chiefly because the treaty between the two counties provides that all questions incident to the demarcation of boundary lines shall be settled by arbitration. Should the actual difficulties reach this point the president of the U. S. of America will be invited to act as arbitration."

A LUCKY MAN.

Laid up for Months by a Severe Form of Kidney Disease—The Simple Cure he used—He's Well Now.

THEDFORD, Oct, 22.—Some men don't know when they are in luck and some do. Albert Malthers, of this place, is one of the lucky ones who knows of his good fortune and tells about it. He says he was laid up and could do no work for months because of kidney disease. When kidney disease has such a hold on a man as that, he is in a serious condition. Mr. Malthers recognized this and used every remedy he could think of, but without getting any help until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes cured him and he is attending to his affairs once more and is as hearty and happy as ever.

Another Voice From Smith.

SMITH, July 7, 1892.

I was troubled with a nasty pain in the back and shoulders for a long time, and had tried several remedies without getting any relief. I thought at first it might be my lungs, as the doctor's say such pains are symptoms of lung trouble coming on, but I was induced to try a bottle of Mumbray's Kidney and Liver Cure, for sale at Tully's Drug Store, and after taking the second dose I was surprised to find the pains all leaving me. It acted like magic. I never knew anything that acted so quick on man or beast before.

AN ENCOURAGING REPORT.

A Very Hopeful Statement on the Czar's Case Received at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Prince Cantacuzene, the Russian Minister to the United States, yesterday received the following satisfactory bulletin as to the condition of the Russian Emperor, from the Minister of Foreign Affairs:

"ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 28.—The Emperor slept well on Friday night. Yesterday his appetite was good and the function of the heart more satisfactory. General condition better. Œdema has not increased."

The Prince feels very greatly encouraged at the receipt of this telegram, which carries the story of the Emperor's condition down to Saturday night. The fact that the Emperor is improving, however slightly, is in itself a matter for congratulation and encourages the hope that he may ultimately recover.

The further fact that the marriage of the Crown Prince and the Princess Alix has not been performed is regarded in diplomatic circles as additional proof that the Emperor's condition is not as serious as has been reported. Had his death been imminent the wedding would have been expedited. Its postponement justifies the belief that the Emperor is improving and that the hope is indulged by his family that he may rally sufficiently to be present.

Twelve Burned to Death.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 29.—A fire which resulted in the death of at least twelve persons and the injury of three more broke out in the West Street House at Coinmbia and West streets yesterday. The flames broke out so suddenly and so fiercely that the occupants of the building were taken by surprise, and there was a wild panic, men and women jumping from the windows in their night clothing. An explosion was heard in the kitchen in the rear part of the second story by S. F. Butler, a son of the proprietor, and immediately the flames began to spread rapidly through the dry inner timber of the corrugated iron building.

Five Years in Alaska.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29.—Count V. E. Degainville of Paris has arrived at this port on the steam whaler Jeannette after a five years' hunting trip in the unexplored wilds of Alaska and the Northwest territory. All the country he passed through was mountainous and generally wooded. He saw many rich coal lands which could be developed, and found traces of gold on the Upper Yukon River, but no rich deposits. He was unable to discover the reputed big Esquimaux lake east of the Mackenzie River, but found many small lakes in clusters.

The only way to cure catarrh is to purify the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and tones up the whole system.

ROBERT HALL.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the BEST makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

ROBERT HALL,

385 George Street.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscriptions to the "EXAMINER" are payable strictly in advance. The date label upon your paper will show the date to which you are paid. If in arrears kindly call and have date changed to 1895. The expenses of publishing a local daily in Peterborough are very heavy and a compliance with this request will materially assist the publishers in furnishing an even better paper.

Telfordian Temperature Topics.

Monday, Oct. 29th.—At this morning's observation the thermometer indicated 37 degrees above, with a sharp white frost. Our change of weather is fast approaching. —THOS. TELFORD.

Farm Sold.

On Saturday afternoon at the Morgan House the Branch homestead farm of 100 acres, in the township of Smith, was sold by auction by Mr. John Haggart for the sum of $4,000, a pretty good figure considering the stringency of the times.

A Delayed Funeral.

Through a deplorable delay, the funeral of the late Thomas Donovan did not take place yesterday afternoon as announced. The body was delayed en route at Port Hope, Saturday night, and by an oversight, not to be explained, the friends were not notified in time to carry out the funeral arrangements. The funeral took place this afternoon and the body was interred in the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Young Women's Association.

Rev. Mr. Rae gave a very interesting and helpful address to the young women on Saturday evening. The attendance to these services is increasing. Members of reception and entertainment committees are requested to meet in the rooms on Tuesday evening immediately after the Bible class, to make arrangements for the Thanksgiving social. Let there be a full attendance. Regular meeting of the Board of Management will be held next Monday afternoon, Nov. 5th.

Willing to Work.

A paragraph appeared in the EXAMINER a few days ago, respecting a father's neglect to provide for his household during the absence of the mother in the hospital. The father claims that he was as anxious as possible to provide his children with food. He went to Havelock and procured work and sent his earnings to his family, and when work failed, he even walked the distance from Havelock to town in order to look after his family. He does not drink and is always ready to work when work presents itself or is to be found.

Still Improving.

Nicholls Park—the Quarry was visited by hundreds yesterday. The work of improvent still goes on. The dam at the northern end of the park to form a bathing reservoir is completed and painted. The dam is a well built and rather ornamental piece of timber work, and the top forms a bridge that gives access to a very cosy nook in the further side of the bathing basin. It is floored and railed, and the bridge will make a favourite loitering place in summer time. This is the making of a beautiful spot. Nature has done much for it and art has worked hand in hand with nature.

Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, etc.

A BLAZE IN OMEMEE.

(Special to the Examiner.)

A brick cottage occupied and owned by Mr. K. Murphy, in Omemee, took fire at about six o'clock this morning and was burned to the ground.

The contents of the house were nearly all saved, and the cottage, which was valued at about $1,000, was fully insured.

The fire originated in the woodwork adjoining the chimney, and obtained a lodgement between the ceiling and the roof, where it was so difficult to obtain access, that a sufficient headway was secured by the sparks as to render their suppression an impossibility.

THEY WILL CONFER SOME TIME TO-DAY.

The Township Agrees Not to Put the Town to the Trouble of Moving for a Continuance of the Injunction.

The outfall sewer is like the earth when it started business—"without form and void." Everything about the work is at a standstill. The contractor and his staff are out of town and nobody could for hours be found that knew anything about anything in connection with the sewer.

A conference of the powers was to have been held on Saturday afternoon, but the parties did not materialize. There were rumours floating around to-day that a conference would be held some time to-day—in fact Mayor Kendry and the reeve of North Monaghan have agreed on a meeting of the authorities to talk the question over. In the meantime Messrs. Edmison & Dixon, on behalf of the township, have written to Messrs. Edwards & Murray, the town's solicitors, stating that no interference would be made by the Monaghan authorities regarding the excavations already made, and that, therefore, it would be unnecessary for the town to apply for a continuance of the injunction. Due notice will be given if the township intends taking any steps.

The congregation of St. John's church will more especially regret Mr. Lambe's departure as he occupied the position of lay reader in the church, and always most cheerfully gave his services.

The Wrong Dose.

Early on Sunday morning Mr. William Spillsbury, a farmer of North Monaghan, by mistake for salts took a large dose of sugar of lead. A town young man who happened to be in the vicinity with his bicycle, was dispatched for Dr. Boucher, who found on his arrival that the powerful emetics administered by the neighbours had in all probability saved a life. The patient is doing nicely.

The duties of bridesmaid were performed by Miss Angelena Pitrie, of Cardiff, while Mr. John McAuliffe of Water street assisted the groom. The newly wed will take up residence in Smith's Falls.

—"We notice," says the Omemee Mirror, "by the Peterborough dailies, that the 57th Battalion, who had in contemplation a sham battle, on Thanksgiving Day, have given up the idea. Probably they were afraid of attacking No. 5 Company, 45th Battalion. We are sure that Omemee would have given them a hot chase, had Peterborough attacked us. We presume that the 57th was afraid of our reserve forces, composed chiefly of Italians and Chinamen."

—A retiring newspaper man gives this philosophical reason for quitting the business: A child is born, the doctor in attendance gets $10, the editor notes it and gets 0; it is christened, the minister gets $4, the editor writes it up and gets 00; it marries and the minister gets another fee, the editor gets a piece of cake or 000; in a course of time it dies, the doctor gets from $5 to $10, the minister gets another $4, the undertaker gets $25 to $50—the editor publishes it and receives 0000—and the privilege of running free of charge a card of thanks.

AN OTONABEE FARMER TAKES A TUMBLE.

The Street Car Tracks are Instrumental in Throwing Him from his Waggon.

Mr. Goselin, an Otonabee farmer, met with what might have been a severe accident at about three o'clock this afternoon. He was driving his team along the street car track on Charlotte street, and when just opposite the Wm. English Canoe Company's factory, he attempted to turn off the track to the watering trough. The track held the wheels for an instant, but as the pressure increased, as the horses swung around more fully, the wheels freed themselves with such a violent jerk, as to throw Mr. Goselin from his seat and cause him to lose his hold on the lines.

The horses were caught a little further on down the street and, miraculous as it seemed to the onlookers, neither driver team or wagon were hurt in any way.

Sewing machines repaired, and supplies kept at the Peterborough Music Co., 404 George street.

CRUDEST KIND OF HOG-WASH.

This is the Term Used by a Correspondent in Speaking of Mrs. Shepherd's Play.

Although Margaret L. Shepherd is reported to have abandoned the stage, accounts of her crude acting still come to hand:

The Peterborough correspondent of the Bobcaygeon Independent says: Margaret L. Shepherd, no doubt judging from her past experience with the town, imagining that it was as green as grass, decided to put on her play, "Tried as By Fire," a penny dreadful portrayal of portions of her life.

The play is the crudest kind of hog-wash—the woman as an actress is what might be expected of a woman without talent or training. Her company is admirably chosen, so as not to overshadow her own powers. The performance, intended as a mixture of drama and melo-drama, is accordingly a hideous farce. It was presented on Monday night, and to the credit of the town the attendance was very small.

On this occasion Margaret was not chaired to the opera house with a procession and a brass band. At one point in the performance a prominet citizen was taken by a bad fit of sneezing. As it occurred at at a professedly pathetic part of the holy horror, the ludicrousness of the position struck the gods, and there was a general howl. The louder Thomas sneezed the louder the gods roared, and one of the performers requested that the sneezer retire and permit the performance to proceed. It might be hinted to the gentle Margaret that grinding the teeth, thought it may be at times effective, is a vulgar, and exceedingly vulgar, mannerism—Shoreditchy.

The management of the opera house will not likely book the thing a second time.

LAKEFIELD HUNTERS.

The Luck With Which Some of its Hunters and Fishermen Met.

The men employed in the Strickland & Co's. canoe factory took a trip up to Deer Bay on the opening day of the hunting season. They had splendid luck, capturing three deer in the one day they stayed. Mr. W. Baptie, jr., was lucky in securing two fine bucks.

The Bell-Cochrane fishing party have returned home. They report having experienced very unpleasant weather during their stay. They captured eighty-five trout besides a number of partridge and ducks.

The Gordon-Grylls hunting party which is camped at Crane Lake, are having very good luck, they having sent down one deer. They have also caught a number of trout.

We recommend you buy direct from Grafton & Co, the manufacturer of their own clothing.

If you are shipping and receiving goods that are liable to damage from wet, Kingscotte's black oiled canvas waterproof covers "fills the bill,"—nothing better or cheaper. They have no tar in their composition, being an OIL preparation, which keeps them soft and pliable. Awnings taken down and stored in a careful and agreeable manner. Halls decorated for assemblies, balls and meetings of all kinds. ALF. KINGSCOTTE, tent, sail and awning maker, 344 Water street.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Quarterly service in the George street Methodist church next Sunday. Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at the close of morning service.

The evening sermon at St. Jean's South Ward Mission was delivered yesterday by Rev. C. W. Hedley, the service being taken by Mr. A. B. Lambe.

At the conclusion of the regular Sunday School services yesterday the delegates to the Sunday School convention held last week in Belleville, gave their reports.

The missionary Committee of the Bay of Quinte Conference meets in Toronto on Nov. 13th. Rev. W. R. Young, B. A., Peterborough, and Mr. John Hull, Lakefield, are the delegates from the Peterborough district.

The Rev. Dr. Torrance preached a special missionary sermon in St. Paul's church yesterday morning. At the close he asked that a special effort be made this year towards the missionary fund, on which a large drain had been made during the past year.

The service in the George street Methodist church on Wednesday evening will be a missionary prayer meeting at which Mrs. Kendry will give a report of the meeting of the Board of Managers of the W.M. Society, which met in Cobourg last week. An interesting programme is promised.

Anniversary services will take place in St. John's church on Thursday next. In the morning there will be an early celebration of the Holy Communion, and in the evening, service will be conducted by Rev. G. W. Webb, of Colborne. The offeratory will go into the fund for general improvements of the church and Sunday School building.

Mr. Pady, of McMaster University, conducted the services in the Park street Baptist Mission yesterday. His morning sermon was taken from the text: "And the spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst, Come. And whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely."—Rev. xxii, vs. 17. The choir at the morning service sang as a voluntary, "Hold Thou My Hand," and in the evening, "Come away to Jesus."

Rev. Mr. MacWilliams preached in the Charlotte street Methodis church yesterday morning. The choir sang the anthem "There is a Fountain Filled with Blood," in good voice, the solo being taken by Miss Fawcett, and the duet by Miss Fawcett and Mr. Steers. In the evening Rev. Mr. Rae occupied his own pulpit. The anthem, "Now the Day is Over," in which Miss Fawcett and Mr. W. J. Squires took the duet, was rendered in a most acceptable manner.

MORE NEWS OF OUR HUNTING PARTIES.

Ten Deer Have Already Been Bagged—Other News.

Word was received at the Snowden House, this morning, to the effect that the party, of which Mr. Snowden is captain, had succeeded in bringing down ten deer, one of which has already been received in town, weighing a little over 200 pounds, which is above the average weight of deer this season, as for some reason it appears that they are in poor condition just now.

Mr. Toby Fitzgerald and party have returned from a week's trip in the north country. Accompanying Mr. Fitzgerald were Mr. Michael O'Brien, town, and Mr. J. G. Howarth, of the Toronto branch of the Home Life Association, of Canada. Three days were spent in going to and coming from the camp, which was located on Bottle Lake, the other four days were spent in hunting and fishing. Great success was met with, as the party brought down five fine deer—a buck and four does, besides bagging seven brace of partridge and catching forty-eight plump trout, all averaging a good weight.

On Thursday half a dozen nimrods went down to Rice's swamp in Otonabee on a rabbit hunt, but were only successful in potting two of the cottontails.

The hunt club of the Canadian General Electric Works has returned from its weekly outing. Eleven of the members constituted the party and the result of the hunt was an owl and a woodpecker. Unfortunately the commissary of the party left a satchel on the train, which contained the entire store of "cold tea" which had been taken along. A meeting of the hunters is called for Wednesday evening next, when arrangements will be completed for a bear hunt to take place next Saturday afternoon.

A BURGLARY IN BROAD DAYLIGHT.

Thieves Enter and Make Away With Their Plunder Undiscovered.

Mrs. M. M. Richardson, of Dublin street, was absent from her home the other day, for a few hours, and upon her return to the house, discovered that a window had been raised in her absence and that a clock, a needle case, a silver pencil and two hammers had been stolen. The police are in possession of the facts and are working on the case.

The thieves must have become alarmed in some manner and have hastily left the house, as everything else was left undisturbed. It is thought that the act was committed by local parties and suspicion already rests upon some rough looking individuals, who were seen hanging around the street at about the time the robbery was committed.

Very Artistic.

A. Clegg is showing a line of fine gilt brass tables with polished oak tops, decidedly the finest of the sort ever offered in Peterborough, see his window. Also a great variety of other fancy parlor tables in choice woods, and an artistic line of highly finished antique oak chairs, with cobler seats of embossed leather, and a larger line of floor rockers at greatly reduced prices, in fact we have so many new things that we have no space this week to enumerate them. Our stock is complete in every line. A. CLEGG, 427 George street.

The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Another Break in Prices brings the crowds. Another link to the great chain of Unmatchable Bargains. Eager multitudes buying Winter Clothing while the weather is actually too warm to wear them. Crowds buying ahead to save money and share in the GREAT SNAPS now going at Gough's.

No matter how low our prices, for certain lines, you may rely on the Fit, the Workmanship, the Material. This great selling of Clothing. Hats and Shoes is making history for us.

It's a Chance of a Lifetime.

The fascination of Low Prices is the inspiration of this business. Salespeople declare they never knew such values in Clothing as we're giving now.

The busy hum of trade makes merry music all hours of the day and the dollars you save come back to us through other departments.

The great past of our Clothing business is but a prophecy of a greater future.

Want to find out how much honest wear can be put into a suit of clothes that costs but $4.00? Come in and look at our $4.00 Suits. Perhaps you may want to see what $10 buys, in a Suit of All-Wool Cheviot. We carry a line of $10 Suits entirely unlike the clothes usually offered at this price. Our $10 Suits are all made a bit finer than we have ever before been able to sell, thanks to the tremendous purchasing power of cash during the past summer.

The Latest in Overcoats now in full array. The popular smooth goods—Kerseys, Meltons, Beavers, etc. There's nothing missing—style, cut, shade, pattern—all well represented. While we have heretofore dwelt largely on the values we offer at $5 to $12, we want to impress the fact that our stock of higher grade OVERCOATS—ranging in price from $8 to $15—offers a saving that cannot be secured elsewhere.

NEALE IN MONTREAL.

The Absconding Sub-Collector of Customs on His Way to Regina.

MONTREAL, Oct. 29.—Captain Perry Neale, the absconding sub-collector of customs, St. Mary's, N.W.T., is in Montreal, and will leave to-night for Regina in charge of Inspector O'Leary, of the Dominion police force, Ottawa, where his trial will take place in due course. The prisoner is accused of having embezzled some $6,000 of government money collected in the course of his duties. He fled on August 30th last, and, crossing the line, left New York on one of the Cunarders. but electricity is faster than steam, and long before he set foot in England the news of his flight had been flashed across and he had spent but one day in the metropolis when he was apprehended, the arrest taking place on the 18th September. Inspector O'Leary was sent over to bring him back.

The prisoner is but another added to the long list of alcohol's victims. He has always enjoyed an excellent character, was very well known in the territory, where his good conduct and ability had earned him the position of captain in the North-west mounted police, an office which he filled with honor for many years before accepting the position as sub-collector. Neale feels his position keenly and now that it is too late expresses the deepest remorse for his rash act. What adds to the sadness of the event is the fact of his having left behind a wife and family, on whom the brunt of the misfortune will fall. At the time of his arrest the larger part of the amount of his defalcation was found on his person.

ROSEBERY'S PROGRAMME.

How He Will Probably Handle the House of Lords.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The Sun's London cable says: "Somewhat contrary to general expectation, Lord Rosebery at Bradford Saturday night made a good rousing speech, which will be likely to satisfy every Liberal, except perhaps Henry Labouchere and two or three eccentric politicians who follow his lead.

"Lord Rosebery cannot see his way to abolish the Lords off-hand. That could only be done, he says, by a revolution, but his announcement amounts to this, that the House of Commons is to pass at the next session a couple of good radical measures, say the disestablishment of the alien church in Wales and a land bill in Ireland. As soon as the Lords attempt to mutilate these bills or actually reject them the Commons will pass a resolution declaring themselves supreme in legislative matters and calling the attention of the peers to their unjustifiable assumption of despotic power.

"Then the Government will appeal to the country upon the direct understanding of the issue of the Commons against the Lords. If the general election should shoulder the result by a strong Liberal majority the Government would be in a position to deal with the Lords in more drastic fashion, without much fear that they would have the courage to offer serious resistance to the expressed will of the people. The programme is not heroic, but is sensible and practicable, and as such the country is certain to approve of it."

A Serious Charge.

BRAMPTON, Oct. 29.—Detective Wasson of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in company with High Constable Hurst, Saturday, arrested Andrew Vanwink on a charge of attempting to procure an abortion. Prisoner was brought up and remanded pending subpœnaeing of witnesses.

Franch's Execution.

BARCELONA, Oct. 29.—Salvator Franch, the anarchist who threw the bomb in the Liceo Theatre a year ago, will probably be executed on November 7, the anniversary of his crime.

Ringing Noises

In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood.

Hood's Pills are the best after dinner pills, assist digestion, prevent constipation.

A Baby Saved.

DEAR SIRS,—My baby had a terrible cough. The doctor said it was Whooping Cough, but it got worse all the time until baby was just like a skeleton. When he was four months old I tried Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion, and after using one and a half bottles my baby is entirely cured. No other remedy but the Emulsion was used, and baby is now strong and healthy.

MRS. J. G. THOMPSON, Callender, Ont.

ARE THEY RETALIATING?

The Probable Cause of Germany's Prohibition of American Cattle.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The World has the following despatch from Washington.

The German Ambassador has informed the Secretary of State that Germany will prohibit the importation of beef and cattle from this country on the ground that cattle imported from this country have been found to be infected by Texas fever. While this is the ostensible ground, there is little doubt that Germany is seeking to retaliate for the imposition by the tariff law of a discriminating duty upon German beet sugar.

During the consideration of the tariff bill the German Ambassador called attention to the fact that the discrimination would violate an existing treaty stipulation. In a treaty made many years ago with Prussia, a treaty still in force, this Government agreed that Prussian imports should not be discriminated against but should receive the treatment accorded to the most favored nation. Notwithstanding this fact, congress passed the tariff bill with the 1-10 cent discriminating tax included. Of course the state department will not talk upon the subject as it is the rule of the diplomats to cover themselves with the cloak of secrecy; but there is good reason to believe that the officials of this Government admit to themselves at last that the attitude of this country is indefensible. The law must be executed, however, and it seems that the state department can do nothing. The supposition that the action of Germany is meant as a retaliation finds support in the fact that Texas fever is non-communicable by diseased cattle and that the meat of cattle afflicted by the ailment is not considered harmful.

Secretary Morton sent to the Secretary of State this communication, in reply to a notice of the action of Germany:

"Referring to your communication in regard to the prohibition of American cattle and fresh beef by Germany, please represent to the American Ambassador that the Texas fever is not communicated by diseased cattle so that even if the reported discovery of this disease is correct there is no danger to German cattle; also that meat of the cattle affected by this disease has never been shown to be dangerous to the consumer. This Government inspected all meat exports and certifies that the cattle were free from disease when slaughtered. A vigorous protest should be entered against the proposed action."

CRUEL BRAZILIANS.

They Bury Men Alive and Set Fire to the Women.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 29.—An American newspaper correspondent, who has just arrived here overland from Rio de Janerio, having passed through the entire intervening country, reports that he saw on the way the bodies of fourteen men who had been buried alive in a standing position by order of Brazilian commanders, but with their heads exposed, and would have perished either from starvation or from the attacks of the vultures, which had eaten out their eyes and picked the skulls bare of flesh.

At San Mateo the clothing of women suspected of sympathy with the revolution had been saturated with oil and set on fire. While the women were burning the soldiers were ordered to shoot and wound, but not to kill them. The correspondent says some of his fingers were torn off after she had been subjected to torture by the extraction of the nails.

Attention

In time to any irregularity of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels may prevent serious consequences, Indigestion, costiveness, headache, nausea, biliousness, and vertigo indicate certain functional derangements, the best remedy for which is Ayer's Pills. Purely vegetable, sugar-coated, easy to take and quick to assimilate, this is the ideal family medicine—the most popular, safe, and useful aperient in pharmacy. MRS. M. A. BROCKWELL, Harris, Tenn., says:

"Ayer's Cathartic Pills cured me of sick headache and my husband of neuralgia. We think there is

No Better Medicine, and have induced many to use it.

"Thirty-five years ago this Spring, I was run down by hard work and a succession of colds, which made me so feeble that it was an effort for me to walk. I consulted the doctors, but kept sinking lower until I had given up all hope of ever being better. Happening to be in a store, one day, where medicines were sold, the proprietor noticed my weak and sickly appearance, and, after a few questions as to my health, recommended me to try Ayer's Pills. I had little faith in these or any other medicine, but concluded, at last, to take his advice and try a box. Before I had used them all, I was very much better, and was able to work. I am now 80 years old; but I believe that if it had not been for Ayer's Pills, I should have been in my grave long ago. I buy 6 boxes every year, which make 210 boxes up to this time, and I would no more be without them than without bread."—H. H. Ingraham, Rockland, Me.

CABLE AND TELEGRAPH

SOMETHING ABOUT THE NET-WORK OF WIRES AROUND THE WORLD.

How the Work First Got a Start in China—Getting a Line Across Australia—Description of the Work of Construction—Some of the Lines Now Operating.

It is commerce and competition which explain, as a rule, the extraordinary system of land and cable lines. They have been laid to meet the demands of business, and for the most part a business already assured. Not that there are no examples of that admirable daring which, foreseeing a chance, makes its venture, preferring to create a demand rather than to follow one. A remarkable case of just such a venture was the laying of the first cable along the Chinese shore in 1871.

Russia had finished the land line across Siberia—the line which, it will be remembered, was intended to be part of the route so long projected into the United States by Bering Straits. But the American end of the project had failed, and she found she had an interminable stretch of line across her barren steppes and now had nothing to attach the end to. In fault of anything better to do with the straggling terminus, it was carried to Vladivostock.

The Northern Telegraph Company of Denmark saw the possibility of utilizing this end for a European communication with China and Japan. Not that China and Japan had expressed any desire for such a union. The wily Danes took care not to ask permission, but slipped the land end of their cables into shore in inoffensive drain pipes, and quietly made their connections until they had a cable running from Hong Kong to Amoy, Gotzlaff, Woosung, Nagasaki (Japan) and connecting with the land line at Vladivostock.

When the Chinese wakened up to the presence of the cable it was too late to object. They simply professed themselves utterly skeptical of its usefulness and refused to have anything to do with it. However, they soon had a practical demonstration of its capabilities. An Oriental, more bold than his compatriots, resolved to act on the price of rice; telegraphed down to Shanghai from Pekin, and to buy up a quantity. He did so, and made a big sum. Soon after a lottery drawing came off in Pekin, in which many residents of Shanghai were interested. The lucky numbers were telegraphed down, but the majority of the holders felt it unorthodox to trust to the impious Western contrivance which disdained time and space, two things which the Imperial Dragon himself had always respected, and they let their skepticism go so far that they sold their tickets for a song to more progressive gamblers. The next week when the recognized post arrived the report of the telegraph was confirmed. The new contrivance could not have had a more impressive advertisement.

The success of the Danish company in laying its cable along the coast induced it to attempt to run wires inland. It made a successful beginning, but was stopped oddly enough. There are no burial grounds in China, each family making a sepulchre for its dead upon its own premises. Dead ancestors are so reverenced that a shadow upon the grave is looked upon as an insult which must not be passed by. Now, when the Danes began to put up poles for their wires the shadows were sure, at some time of the day, to fall on the grave of some Celestial ancestor. There were constant disputes between workmen and natives, and the enterprise was seriously interrupted for a time. However, the convenience of the telegraph became at last so evident to the Chinese that the Government decided to go on with the work; and since, even the shadows on the ancestors' tombs have not prevented the men from setting up poles.

It was the year before the Eastern Extension carried its cable to Hong Kong that it concluded to go on to Australia, on condition that one or all of the colonies combined would lay a land line across the continent to meet it. The offer was accepted by the South Australian Government. This colony then numbered 170,000 inhabitants; it was in debt heavily for railroad and telegraph lines in the settled parts of its territory, but it bravely set aside the money for the new undertaking.

The work was begun early in 1870. The history of telegraph does not include another so dramatic chapter. All but 200 or 300 miles of the 2,000 from Adelaide on the South to Port Darwin, the cable terminus, on the north, was through a land of either the worst reputation or utterly unknown, save from the reports of the one explorer who, after infinite risk and hardship, had traversed it nearly 10 years before.

The expedition was to be baffled by nothing, however. It carted every inch of its wire, most of its poles, all of its supplies, across a country often waterless and so hot that a thermometer burst and pork melted in the brine. The men saw their cattle die of hunger and thirst. They were forced literally to crawl through miles upon miles of scrub of the most exasperating character. The natives harassed them constantly, stealing their supplies, rigging up their insulators as spear heads, to use when the native boomerangs were not up to the occasion, and threatening their finished work. The northern portion of the work was once abandoned, so hopeless did it seem. Again terrific floods drove the expedition entirely from the field. In spite of the loss and discouragement, the line was finished in two years and a half, and after October 21, 1872, the London papers were publishing daily despatches from Australia. On November 15, 1872, a grand banquet was held in London, celebrating the completion of the work, and at it was read a telegram of thanks in response to one of congratulation which had been sent to Adelaide just two hours before.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumour form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

"DON'T SHOOT—I'LL COME DOWN."

"'Scurious like," said the tree toad,
"I've twittered for rain all day:
And I got up soon,
And I hollered till noon;
But the sun hit blazed away,
Till I jest clumb down in a crawfish hole,
Weary at heart and sick at soul.

"Dozed away for an hour.
And I tackled the thing again;
And I sung, and sung,
Till I knowed my lung
Was jest about to give in;
And then, thinks I, of it don't rain now,
There's nothin' in singin' anyhow.

"Once in a while some farmer
Would come a-drivin' past;
And he'd hear me cry,
And stop and sigh.
Till I jest laid back at last,
And I hollered rain till I thought my throat
Would bust wide open at ever' note!

"But I fetched her! Oh, I fetched her!
'Cause a little while ago,
As I kind o' set,
With one eye shet,
And a singin' soft and low,
A voice dropped down on my fevered brain,
Saying, 'Er you'll jest hush, I'll rain'"

WORE SMUGGLED GARTERS.

Richly Jeweled Hands Brought Ashore in Spite of Government Officers.

On the promise of seeing something new, if not startling, I accompanied an acquaintance to meet an incoming steamer from Europe. My acquaintance had informed me that his cousin was bringing over goods of very great value, and I expected that considerable trouble would be consumed in examining and appraising the articles. The "cousin" was an attractive young lady and looked rosy and healthy as she tripped down the long plank. She had had a delightful voyage, etc., and had been good enough to bring only two trunks. These were found, an inspector made a hasty examination of the contents, saw that they were only ordinary wearing apparel, chalked the backs and we started off. We went up town and made for a good restaurant. The interesting small talk of travelers filled in the time until we three were seated at a table and the order given for luncheon. The lady sat next to the wall.

"I suppose everything is all right, Julie?" asked my friend.

"Yes, indeed," she replied, smiling triumphantly.

"I promised to show this gentleman something," he said. "There's no danger that anybody will catch on, so if you've no objection——"

He paused. She blushed furiously and replied: "Well, I don't know that I care, but it's unusual."

Then she reached down toward the floor on the side next the wall, and of course I don't know exactly what she did, but when her hand appeared again it was closed over something. She held it toward me, saying: "Open both hands and be careful." I did as she told me and she laid upon my palms a garter that fairly blazed with diamonds. I took one look and whispered "Smuggled?" She nodded vigorously, while her companion smiled approval, and remarked: "I shall keep that interesting piece of ribbon. It saves me several thousand dollars in duties."

"There's another like it," said the fair cousin, "but I guess I won't take that off." The other, of course, was on the side not next to the wall. "You have to get a cab now for your curiosity," she added, "for that article was worn for use as well as profit, and if I walk—well, it might come down, and that wouldn't be pleasant."—Atlanta Constitution.

Defence of Bull-Fighting.

The terrible death of a promising young torero in the bull ring has once again attracted the attention of the English public to the Spanish national sport. One is accustomed to hear bull-fighting denounced as both cruel and cowardly—cruel because of the suffering it inflicts on animals, cowardly because the risk run by the bull fighter is infinitesimal. The first charge is absolutely true, so far, at least, as concerns the unfortunate horses. The second is equally false, as the tragic death of Espartero the other day should serve to teach the amateur critics who, for the most part, have never seen the spectacle they denounce in such unqualified terms.

If the Spaniards would only revive the original form of the sport they borrowed from the Moores—that is to say, the riding, not of wretched cab horses, only fit for the knacker, and mounted by professional picadores, but of valuable horses, with "owners up," who would, of course, exercise their skill in trying to save their mounts—there would be little to be said against bull fighting on the score of cruelty.—London Graphic.

Electric Lighting in Alaska.

A system of electric lighting is being put in at Juneau, one of the best known of Alaskan settlements, but a place nevertheless of only 2,000 inhabitants. When completed this will be the first central electric light plant in the territory. Electricity, however, is not altogether new in Alaska. It has been used for some time in a limited way in the mines. Water power is abundant everywhere and the current is generated on the streams and carried to the mines by cables.

Hungarian Opals.

Most of the finest opals come from Hungary, but the principal vein has been exhausted lately, so that the gem in its finest variety is exceedingly rare. The clear bright opals with the luminous fire come from Mexico. Any opal, and particularly the Mexican stone, becomes dull by washing the hands with the ring on, and all lose their brilliant play of color. The stones are not durable like diamonds, nor will they stand the same wear.

Two Faithful Servants.

In London there are two faithful servants who have probably beaten the record of domestic service. They are sisters, one of whom is sixty and the other six years younger. They have been in the same family for the better part of half a century, the one having served for forty years and the other for thirty-five.

POSITION OF LIBERALS.

A LETTER TO THE PATRONS FROM SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

The Liberal Party Lost Office Rather Than Sacrifice Principle—Their Record in Office Economy and Honest Administration—The Danger of Division.

(From the Farmer's Sun).

The following letter was recently received by a Patron in Lennox county from Sir Richard Cartwright, and has been handed to The Sun for publication :

"My Dear Sir.—I can very well understand the difficulty felt by you as well as by many other Liberal farmers as between the claims of your party and of the Patrons of Industry.

"Permit me in the first place to say that in its main features, so far as they affect Dominion politics, I am heartily in sympathy with the new movement. I agree with you that the farmers of Canada, and especially of Ontario, ought to assert themselves more than they do, and as you well know, I have always maintained that they are, from the very nature of the case, in a very special degree victimized by the protective system.

"I know, no man better, how utterly fatal any protective system must be to liberty and to honest and economical government ; and it was the profound conviction of this fact, quite as much as any belief in the material injury it was certain to work to the chief interests of Canada (as I pointed out in my budget speech of 1876, and have done continuously ever since), which induced Mr. Mackenzie and myself and our colleagues to set our faces determinedly against the introduction of that most pernicious system here.

"I know, no man better, how enormously the real taxes paid by farmers (and by all wage earners) have been increased of late years and how greatly their difficulties have been augmented by the deviopmnts which have taken place in other great food producing regions. I may add also that very few farmers in Lennox have suffered more than I have done from the very self same causes which have injured them. If their lands have shrunk in value, so have mine. If their incomes have been reduced from the causes I have enumerated, so has mine. If they find themselves in a very much worse position after, and in consequence of, fifteen years of protection, so do I : nor do I believe there is one single individual in this county of Lennox—(quite apart from all questions of politics)—who would be a greater gainer then myself from the removal of these oppressive trade restriction and by the introduction of a wiser and honester system of taxation.

"I am, therefore, on every account, strongly in sympathy with the Patrons of Industry as far as Dominion politics are concerned. I consider their objects to be good. I know they have suffered greatly already, and that they are in danger of suffering still more in the near future if no relief can be obtained—nay, are perhaps in even greater danger than many of them as yet realize. I believe the necessity for immdiate action to be urgent and for all these reasons I am most desirous that they should commit no blunder in their crusade against political wrongdoing.

"Nevertheless, I feel that there is great danger of their making a very grave mistake at this juncture. The foes of liberty and good government are a very powerful body in Canada to-day. They are strongly entrenched and very highly organized indeed. Protection has many roots. It has a full treasury and a great hold on a large part of the press of this country. It holds the reins of government, and it has a very large proportion of the active wealth of the Dominion on its side. You may be sure it will die hard here as well as in the United States. Now, this being so, for the opponents of such a foe to quarrel with each other on the very eve of a pitched battle against the common enemy, is, as the French statesman said, even worse than a crime—it would be an irreparable and unforgiveable blunder.

"Under such circumstances it becomes every Liberal who may have joined the Patrons to consider the position seriously. Wherever there is an honest difference of opinion on questions of importance I have nothing to say. But what are the differences between the Liberal party and the Patrons of Industry at this moment ? It is true that in matters affecting local affairs there may be differences on one or two minor points,—certainly not on any questions of vital importance. But as regards Dominion politics their professed objects are literally identical. The Patrons desire economy in administration. So do the Liberals, and what is more, when they were in power from 1873 to 1878 they practiced it. For five whole years the public expenditure was kept stationary at a very moderate figure as compared with the present outlay, and this was done although the Liberal party was compelled to provide for a vast mass of costly engagements contracted by their predecessors before they took office and against their votes and protests. Nay, more, in these five years the 'controllable' expenditure of Canada was reduced about 20 per cent, from eight and a half millions to about six and three quarter millions, a thing no government has attempted before or since ; and the gross amount of expenditure was kept steady at twenty-three millions and a half instead of thirty-seven millions, which it cost last year, being a difference of full thirteen and a half millions—the exact value, I believe, of our whole export of cheese in 1893, so that the whole fruit of that most important industry, which it has taken thirty years to build up, barely equals the waste of the last fourteen years.

"Then the Patrons desire to reform the tariff and to improve the system of taxation. Good again. By all means let us do so. This is the very cardinal plank of the Liberal platform, and has been so ever since 1878, as the records of Parliament testify most abundantly. The Patrons ask that the interests of the farmers be fairly considered. Was it not solely and simply because the Mackenzie government would not agree to deliver over the farmer bound hand and foot to the tender mercies of the ring or would-be protected manufacturers that Mr. Mackenzie was defeated in 1878 ? Let me ask, too, by whose votes was Mr. Mackenzie defeated then ? I do not say it as a reproach, but it is a matter of history, that Mr. Mackenzie was defeated by the votes of Liberal farmers who were cajoled by the false promises of home markets, high prices and general prosperity held out by the reckless and ignorant charlatans who foisted this precious protective system on Canada in 1878.

"Let us further analyse the Patron platform. Let us take the first plank, the abolition of the Senate. Here the vast majority of Ontario Liberals will certainly agree with the Patrons. The existence of such a body in its present shape is absolutely indefensible and a most manifest blot on representative government. It represents nothing, except the very worst element of a faction. It is irremovable and entirely irresponsible either to the Crown or to the people, and is as nearly absolutely useless (besides being expensive) as any institution of the sort well can be. But waiving the question whether it may or may not be possible to create a senate which might be of some real service to the state, we must remember that ours is a Federal constitution and that whether the House of Commons or the people of Ontario like it or not, the Senate can only be abolished by an Act of the Imperial Parliament, which act will assuredly not be passed without the concurrence of a decided majority of the several local legislatures On this point, therefore, while there is no difference of opinion, there is no great possibility of immediate action.

"What are the other planks of the Patron platform affecting Dominion politics ? They are these : 1. Economy of administration. 2. Purity and independence of Parliament. 3. Tariff for revenue only. 4. Reciprocal trade. 5. Protection of labor from monopolies. 6. No railway bonuses. 7. Voters' lists by local officials. 8. No gerrymandering. 9. Lands for settlers. Now, there is simply no single one of all these objects which the Liberal party have not been fighting for, moving resolutions for and doing their very best to obtain any time during the last twenty years. Look at the records of Parliament. Look especially at the several motions on the budget. Look at their platform and at the very last resolution moved by myself in Parliament, and you will see that as regards Dominion politics there is absolutely no ground for difference between the Patrons and the Liberal party. When the Liberals were in power, as I have shown, and proved, they were in fact as well as in name a most economical party. No party either has ever suffered so severely as they have done, more especially in Ontario, by Franchise Acts by gerrymander bills, by the incessant briberies practiced against them by means of railway bonuses, by the creation of monopolies privileged to plunder the people on condition of sharing the spoils with the opponts of the Liberal party.

"Tariff for revenue only and taxes on luxuries and not on necessaries, reciprocity and reservation of lands for the actual settler, are things the Liberals, collectively and individually, have always advocated, nor is there any single argument which has ever been advanced in favor of all these things either by the Patrons or anybody else which had not been previously stated and most generally stated many times over by the members of the Liberal party in Parliament and out of it. All this I make no doubt is quite well known to a man of your intelligence and does it not prove the truth of my contention ?

"You see as I have said that the objects of both organizations are absolutely identical. The Liberal party for fifteen years and more have been fighting at heavy odds for the very objects the Patrons profess to desire. The Liberal party lost office rather than forsake these priciples. The Liberal party might have long since regained office if they would have betrayed them and yet we find certain Patrons continually declaring that both parties are alike and advising their associates to make no distinction between a Liberal and a protectionist candidate. Take the evidence of our life-long opponents. You know what Mr. McCarthy said on this subject. Here are his very words :

Mr. McCarthy—"And to get into power, my friend says. He is a politician. No doubt in the world that we were out of power, and by going in for the N.P., and taking the wind out of Mr. Mackenzie's sails we got into power. We became identical with the protective policy, and if Mr. Mackenzie had adopted the protective policy we would have been free traders. I am willing to make this confession. If Mr. Mackenzie had been a protectionist there would have been no thing left for us but to be free traders. But Mr. Mackenzie was either too honest or too rigid in his views to bend to the wake of public opinion, and the result was that he was swept out of power, and had only a corporal's guard to support him when the House met. We adopted the N.P., and we told you, at least I did, because I was very young and simple at the time, that we were going to make everybody rich."

"Now Liberal Patrons are asked to desert their party and destroy their friends—to kill the very man who risked their political existence time and again for the sake of the very objects the Patrons desire to gain. Why commit this ingratitude ? Moreover is it not as clear as the sun at noonday that to do so is to destroy all their own chance of permanent success ?

"For what are the Government and their protectionist supporters praying and intriguing to-day but that the Patrons of Industry and the Liberal party may cut each other's throats ? For what end are their emissaries so diligently stirring up opposition to Sir Oliver Mowat on very trifling grounds except that they hope to make bad blood thereby between you and the Liberal party out of which the protectionists expect to make their political profit in the Dominion elections which cannot be very long delayed ?

"Suppose we have a series of three-cornered contests all over this province and that the Patrons carry a large number of seats. Suppose, for a space, they come to hold the balance of power and are able to make any stable government an impossibility so long as the old political parties continue to preserve their present relations towards each other. Suppose further, that they succeed in driving out of Parliament a considerable number of those Liberal representatives who have in time past, through good report and evil report, proved themselves the staunchest opponents of the protective system and the staunchest champions of the very ideas the Patrons of Industry are now pleading for. Suppose all this and suppose that the Patrons have so seriously weakened the Liberal party as to make its parliamentary success impossible, do you imagine that this will secure the Patrons' own success ?

Not by any manner of means. What it may and very likely will do is to make various other combinations possible which but for such action on the part of the Patrons would never be dreamed of. We will do well to remembered that after all Ontario is not the whole of this Dominion and that under certain conditions the two existing parties may coalesce and tariff reform, in any genuine and valuable sense, may then be shelved for another quarter of a century, in which case the Patrons for all useful and practical purposes will find themselves nowhere—will in fact have most completely defeated themselves and nullified the whole purpose of their existence.

"Now you will bear in mind that I am very far from saying that such a coalition would be justifiable or desirable. My point is, and it cannot be brought too clearly before the minds of all those Patrons who desire to promote the real welfare of their country, and who I make no doubt, constitute the vast majority of the order, that such a move would be always on the cards in the event of such proceedings on the part of the Patrons as I have indicated; and I may add that they of all men would have the least right to condemn such a coalition seeing that it would be the natural outcome and result of their own deliberate action. The choice in such a case as I have described would have lain with the Patrons themselves all through. They would have deliberately quarreled with their own friends. They would have shown that they utterly ignored long and faithful service under circumstances of aggravated temptation and they could not complain if the average member of Parliament, Liberal or Conservative, took them as he found them and acted accordingly. In such an event also you might be perfectly sure that the Patron organization would soon crumble, and what is more important that the objects they have in view would be further from attainment than ever. This, I for one, would greatly regret. I believe that it is now in the power of the Patrons of Industry to secure great things for themselves and for the country at large by adopting a rational course of policy.

"The time is ripe for very extensive and far-reaching reforms. We have suffered much and have, it is to be hoped, learned something. I for my part would be sorry to see the issue dwindled down to a mere question of revenue tariff. This is a good thing in its way but very much more than this is needed now, and very much more than this can be got if only our chances are not recklessly thrown away. We need among other things a radical readjustment, not only of our tariff but of our whole system of taxation. Great evil has been done, but out of evil good may come and the colossal villainy of the protective system may be made to pave the way for so thorough a reform that it may prove possible for the first time in the history of Canada so to distribute the pressure of taxation that every man shall be compelled to contribute to the public needs according to his means and not according to his pleasure.

"I have no intention and indeed no desire to see your organization put at the disposal even of the Liberal party. Let it remain distinct but friendly. This is pre-eminently a case for mutual concessions. Both Patrons and Liberals profess to have the same ends in view. Let them meet and adjust their difficulties. Differences of principles, there are none. The demand for an adequate representation of the great agricultural interests is a fair and proper one, and so also on the other hand, is the claim that tried and faithful representatives should not be lightly discarded, because they do not happen to be Patrons. Such men are none too plenty anywhere and you cannot afford to lose them. The position of Canada in many ways is a difficult one and you will not help your country or yourselves by dispensing with experienced public servants except for good cause.

"One of the greatest difficulties with which my esteemed friend, Mr. Mackenzie, had to contend lay in the fact that he was compelled to form his Cabinet entirely out of men who had no official training or experience, and it was partly in consequence that he himself committed the serious error of attempting at one and the same time to administer a large and most laborious department and to act as leader of a great political organization. It was no wonder at all that his physical powers broke down under the strain and it was very largely indeed to this mistake in judgment that the defeat of the Liberal party in 1878 was due,—as I have myself heard his rival, the late Sir John A. Macdonald, admit in conversation in my presence. For these reasons I would for the last time repeat my warning. The one thing which can defeat the Patrons—the one thing which can prevent their attaining the objects they wish to obtain—and the one thing which the advocates of protection desire more than aught else is for the Patrons of Industry to quarrel with the Liberal party.

"Now whatever some few may have said or even done up to this time I do not believe that the Patrons as a body, on calm consideration, will be so ill-advised as to commit any such suicidal act; and I would most certainly urge you and all Liberals who have seen fit or who may desire to join the ranks of the organization to use your best endeavors, alike in the interests of the Patrons themselves and all true friends of honest government in Canada, to prevent such a disaster. As I have said there is a hard fight before us in any event and you may rely on it that both Liberals and Patrons have their work cut out for them in advance if they expect to vanquish a tyranny which in the last fifteen years have cost Canada a thousand millions of treasure and over a million and a half of people besides debasing and degrading the whole tone of public morality, and of public life to an extent which no other system ever did

With very sincere regards,
RICHARD J. CARTWRIGHT.

LA JA RIO DESTROYED

Two Thousand People Killed by an Earthquake in That Province.

SAN JUAN BADLY DAMAGED

Shocks Lasted Nearly Half a Minute—Two Nuns Among Those Killed—Boiling Water and Mud Burst Forth From the Earth—20,000 Homeless.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The Herald has the following from Buenos Ayres: A correspondent from La Ja Rio Ja, capital of the province of the same name, telegraphs that the city has been ruined by Saturday night's earthquake. The churches, schools and public edifices are all thrown down. At times the shocks lasted 95 seconds. The scene was a horrible one, women shrieking and fainting on every hand, as walls came crashing down. Two sisters of Mercy were killed, and many more are now entombed beneath the ruins.

The Governor fears that the killed and wounded throughout the province must number at least two thousand, as many of the outlying towns also suffered greatly.

At San Juan not a house in the town is without damage. It is reported that in various parts of the province the ground opened and a geyser of boiling water and mud spouted forth. The village of Arbordon has been completely swallowed up in the huge gaps which opened in the ground. It is estimated at least 20,000 persons are homeless.

It is claimed that the Express Company cannot identify the money. Morganfield's attorney says they have proof that their client was not engaged in the robbery.

TOLD TO THE CROWN

Ante-Mortem Statement of Young Westwood.

BRINGS OUT SOMETHING NEW

He Mentioned the Names of Two Men Who Might Be Implicated, But Had No Idea of Who His Assailant Really Was—Adjourned.

TORONTO, Oct. 30.—Once more the old Parkdale Town Hall was crowded last evening, for the people of the west end have not yet lost interest in the Westwood mystery and at each resumtion of the much adjourned inquest, cling to the hope that something new will be brought on. The "Parkdale Mystery" as it is now commonly termed is indeed a mystery deep and dark. Still does the pall of the black unknown hang over it and still are the officers of justice wholly at sea as regards a plausible explanation of the dark deed or the identity of the dastardly perpetrator. Other crimes more horrible have since darkened the annals of the province, but their perpetrators are now within the grasp of the law and the interest of the ever-curious public has reverted to the Toronto murder case. Every possible theory has been formulated and evidence advanced to substantiate it, but still the sleuth hounds of the law are baffled and the people are beginning to believe that murder will not out.

The first witness examined last evening was C. E. Vanzant, 13 Close avenue. He heard both shots, with an interval of three minutes between, at about 10.50.

P. C. McLennan gave official evidence of no importance. The blinds of the dining room were in such a position that a view of its interior would be obtainable from the lawn. A search of the grounds revealed no tracks.

Attorney Curry first saw Frank Westwood the Sunday afternoon after the shooting, when Mr. Westwood gave him an account of the affair. His story differed from the version given by Mr. Westwood at the inquest in some slight particulars. One expression Frank muttered was, "We fooled around the hall a few minutes." The boy did not seem to care to say much that day. On Tuesday he, in company with others, listened to Frank's ante-mortem statement, which he produced and read in court. It repeated the same old story, with this addition: "I had some trouble with Gus Clarke. The man who shot me looked like a chum of his, James Lowe, who worked in the nail works." The boy himself, however, seemed to attach no importance to this statement. He would, he said, not care to have any person get into trouble on his statement. He was positive it was not Clarke who shot him. He (Frank) had put his foot against the door and only partially opened it. Frank was fully conscious and stated that he had never had any trouble with any female. Mr. Westwood, father of the boy, had told Mr. Curry that he had not yet retired when Frank came in on the night of the shooting. Those words: "We fooled around in the hall" might or might not, Mr. Curry thought, have related to the case. The peculiar wording of Mr. Westwood's message to the police, "There's a man in the hall with my son," however, brought back the boy's words to him.

Dr. Lynd said that Frank was in a condition to make an intelligent anti-mortem statement and fully realized that he could not recover. He thought Frank's apparent reluctance to talk was due to exhaustion. The boy had told Mr. Curry that he (Curry) could not pump him.

Police Sergeant Coombs had made notes of Frank's statements on the night of the shooting. They agreed substantially with many statements already made. Frank had spent the evening with his chums, Cooper, Lennox and Andrews, with whom he parted at 10.15. It was only about 10.30, he said, when the bell rang. Frank had said, "Don't search my clothes." Later he had muttered while the officer was alone with him: "I saw you on Queen street to-night. Gus is in the cooler, isn't he?" The officer said, "Do you mean Gus Clarke?" and on Frank replying in the affirmative, said: "No, he's not arrested." Frank then said, "That settles it." Replying to a question, he said he did not think it was Clarke who shot him. It was a man with a black moustache. The officer had mentioned Clarke name because he knew the latter to be a wild youth and thought some of the boys of that section of the city were afraid of him.

William Peer, jr., of Port Credit, one of "those stonehookers," gave evidence which amounted to nothing, but it amused the audience. He had heard nothing of any of "the boys" being shot in the city. A thorough examination elicited nothing.

Albert Beer, father of the previous witness, knew nothing either. Roars of laughter greeted his queer sallies. He evidently didn't want to tell much.

William R. Jeffry, who knew Frank Westwood well, never knew that he had any girl friends.

Chas. H. Westwood, the married brother of Frank, first heard of the shooting from his brother Willie on Sunday morning. He detailed how he spent the whole of Saturday evening with his wife and Mr. German. He knew little of Frank's affairs during the past eighteen months and had never had any difficulty with Frank over any girl. Neither he nor Frank had had any trouble, as far as he knew, with any person. He knew of no person bearing his father or any member of the family any ill-will. He was positive he knew of no South Parkdale girl with whom Frank kept company.

Once more the inquest was adjourned, this time till Monday, November 5.

Were Women's Clothes for Three Years.

WINFIELD, Ills., Oct. 30.—Peter Cline, son of Farmer Cline, residing near here, was arrested in an Iowa town three years ago for robbery. He made his escape before he was taken to prison and never recaptured until last night. Two years ago, a woman made her appearance at Farmer Cline's, and was introduced as a sister. Miss Cline had gentleman callers and everything went well. An officer from Iowa, however, put in an appearance and arrested the supposed woman, who proved to be Peter Cline, and who for three years had worn female garments and made his home here entirely unsuspected. Cline has been taken to Iowa.

PRESENT DANGER OVER

The Czar's Life May Be Prolonged for Several Weeks Yet.

HEART TROUBLE IMPROVED

This and the Oedma Are the Symptoms Which Are Dangerous and Which May Cause Death—His Mental Condition Much Improved.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 30.—It is considered that for the present the danger of a fatal ending to the Czar's illness is over. It is probable that the doctors will succeed in prolonging his Majesty's life for some weeks. The oedma of the legs causes less anxiety than general organic weakness and the diminution of the heart's activity. These symptoms constitute the real danger, as it is possible that these conditions may lead to sudden death. The mental state of his Majesty, on which much depends, has improved since he has seen all the members of his family and Princess Alix assembled and preparations made for the marriage of the Czarewitch. The regular publication of bulletins of a slightly more favorable nature has had the effect of quieting the people of St. Petersburg. The general impression here is that the end is inevitable, but that it will not occur for some time.

A despatch from Yalta says that the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg arrived there yesterday morning to perform the ceremony of anointing Princess Alix. For the next four days the princess will attend the services of the orthodox church, and at the final service will partake of communion, after which the marriage ceremony may be performed at any time.

The following bulletin, signed by the physicians in attendance on the Czar, was issued at 11 o'clock yesterday morning: "The Czar slept less last night. His appetite is unchanged. The oedma does not decrease."

The official bulletin sent from Livadia at 8 o'clock last evening said: The Emperor ate a little yesterday. He felt weaker. The cough, with which he has been long troubled in consequence of chronic catarrh of the throat and trachea, has grown perceptibly worse and interferes with his breathing. His expectoration is tinged with blood.

The anniversary of the Czar's escape in the railway accident near Borki was celebrated with a special Te Deum in the chapel at Livadia yesterday. Among those present were the Czarina, the Czarewitch and Princess Alix of Hesse.

SAID TO HAVE DIED.

Rumored Death of the Young Empress of China.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The Central News correspondent in Shanghai says it is rumored in Tien-Tsin that the young Empress is dead, but the fact will not be announced nor mourning be worn by the court until after the birthday of the Dowager Empress. The Central News correspondent in Tokio telegraphs: It is not believed here that the Japanese will attack Port Arthur before the end of the week. Gen. Nozu, who commands the advance force of the Japanese army, has abandoned the pursuit of the fugitives from Klienchao, as he does not wish to be burdened with more Chinese prisoners. The Japanese march upon Feng-Huang-Chang has begun. The London correspondent of the Berlin Kreuz Zeitung had an interview with a Japanese attache here yesterday. The attache said he learned privately from friends acquainted with Manchuria that for a trained army campaigning in that region would be easier in winter than in summer. The ice in Corea bay would not suffice to prevent the free movement of the Japanese warships.

Awaiting a Better Opportunity.

ROME, Oct. 30.—The text of the Pope's speech to the conference held to consider the union of the eastern and western churches has just been made public. After praising all who had helped to bring about the conference he said: "We wish that all governments alike had embraced this grand ideal, inasmuch as the work achieved will be for the interest and benefit of the entire world; but political views, and still more, we regret to say, the unreasonable jealousies of some of the governments, which show in what condition the papacy is placed, have prevented these reunions from having the large and solid results rightly expected from them. Above all, we must lament the absence of the patriarch of the Armenians. We shall not on this account, however, recede from our purpose, and even if we can count only within certain limits on political union, nothing will prevent us from solving the grand problem from the religious side, while awaiting more propitious times for the rest of the work."

An Inventor is More Than One Way.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The Daily News correspondent in Paris says: "M. Turpin's much discussed invention was published yesterday, in accordance with the French patent law: It is merely a rocket charged with powder and shrapnel. Almost every assumption of the inventor in designing it is an exploded fallacy." This is the invention which Turpin said the German government was bargaining to buy from him. His statement raised a great hullaballoo in France, and eventually two Paris reporters induced him to decline the German offer and give his war machine to the French War Department.

To Investigate G. T. R. Accounts.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The Financial News says that Sir Henry Tyler may not find the general body of shareholders of the Grand Trunk quite as easily satisfied as the selected deputation which waited on the directors on Friday. The directors of the Grand Trunk have agreed to the demand of Friday's deputation to allow a thorough examination of the accounts of the company by an expert in Canada.

Italians Are Satisfied.

ROME, Oct. 30.—The appointment of the Prince of Hohenlohe to be German Chancellor and Prussian Premier has made a good impression on Italian politicians. His brother Prince Gustav Adolf of Hohenlohe, Cardinal Priest, has received numerous messages of congratulation.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

We are all interested in the Trent Valley Canal construction; some because of the chance to sell lands for right of way; some because they expect to get a paying contract on construction; some because they want to supply picks and shovels, some because they wish for a chance to use the picks and shovels; some because they think it would be a useful public work, and some because it will strengthen the hands of the government and again delude the people into voting for a high taxation candidate in the interests of the Conservative Government. This latter circumstance will show how easily the average elector is satisfied. The appropriation of some $130,000, after the expenses of surveying, etc., are met, wont dig much canal; so the balance is to be distributed where it will do the most good. If the whole of the balance were spent on the Lakefield-Peterborough section, which to many seems the common sense way, where would be the election pull for Victoria county and Simcoe county? So a little ditch a mile or two long is to be dug between Balsam lake and Lake Simcoe, and another section of ditch three and a half miles long between here and Lakefield. Is this three and a half miles to be constructed at the Lakefield end, or the Little Lake end, or in the middle? Wherever it is built it will lead to nowhere and be of no earthly practical use. Of course if the section from Little Lake to Nassau is constructed this portion of canal could be used to ship potatoes or some such farm produce to town. Otherwise the work will be without any practical benefit beyond giving employment and influencing votes. If the entire section between Little Lake and Lakefield were put under construction and completed, great practical benefit would ensue. By connecting Lake Katchewanooka with Little Lake, the ten miles between here and Lakefield would be added to the navigable stretch of about 45 miles between here and Hastings, or in other words there would be uninterrupted navigation from Hastings to Balsam Lake, a distance, counting lateral navigation, of about 200 miles. And here is the very place where we want increased water connection. Cordwood is now brought for a nominal freight, by boat from the back lakes to Young's Point or Lakefield. If we had the Lakefield-Peterborough section completed, we could have cordwood laid down as cheaply in Peterborough almost as at Young' Point. According to the present programme the work to be done on the Lakefield-Peterborough section is practically useless as an extension of navigable water. Three and a half miles at either end or in the middle will reach to nowhere; and judging by the past it will be a dozen years before anything more is done. In 1883 the locks at Burleigh, Buckhorn, etc., were built. After a wait of nearly twelve years another spurt is engineered, and we have little three and a half mile sections proposed, and in another twelve years we may see (if the political situation suggests it worth while) another three or four mile section put under contract. We should have the entire section between here and Lakefield put under construction and completed; something would then have been done that would be of some use—and not a mere hole in the ground. If the government had turned over to us the thousands that they allowed to be squandered on the Lachine bridges, we might have had enough to have completed the section between here and Lakefield and then we would have had something to show for our money. But "monkeying" with a little two or three mile shift of a ditch is trifling with an important public work. We want the Trent Valley Canal to use for navigation purposes—to carry cordwood, building stone, minerals, grain, etc.,—not to carry elections.

THE verdict in the case of Mrs. Hartley, charged with the murder of her husband, is somewhat of a surprise in that it was in pretty direct contrast to the charge of the learned judge to the jury. While there may have been reasonable doubt in the minds of the jury as to Mrs. Hartley's guilt, yet there seems to be no doubt that the verdict of the jury was to some extent the result of the popular feeling against the man Ling, who, as Mr. Osler pointed out was trying to save his own neck at the expense of the life of Mrs. Hartley, whom his evidence sought to condemn. We are all human, and it is difficult for even a sworn juryman to subordinate entirely the instincts of chivalrous sympathy with a woman who is blamed by a cowardly cur of a man with the ignoble intent of saving himself at her expense.

IT is admitted on all sides that the farewell banquet of Mr. Laurier, on Thursday night, was the finest event of the kind ever held in Winnipeg. The Tribune editorially says:—"No public man has ever received such a tribute in his country as was accorded the Liberal leader in the banquet, at the Manitoba, last Thursday evening, which was a fitting climax to the triumphant tour which he and his distinguished colleagues have just completed over greater Canada. There was a spontaneous enthusiasm about the vast company, which is rarely witnessed in such a gathering." The Free Press says:—"The banquet to Mr. Laurier, Thursday night, eclipsed any previous gathering of the kind that has taken place in Winnipeg."

THE world in general keeps moving, but the Empire in reiterating its stale and disproved charges that there is systematic and extensive misuse of public funds in the administration of asylum affairs, does not advance—it simply lies still.

Proposed New Freight Line.

BOSTON, Oct. 30.—Donaldson Bros., the steamship owners are desirous of establishing a freight line between this city and Bristol, England, and negotiations are in progress which give promise of the plan being tried this winter. Donaldson boats now run to Montreal from Bristol but during the winter it is necessary for them to change their eastern terminal owing to ice. This therefore gives them the opportunity to try Boston and the firm is now looking at the Hoosac tunnel docks which will be their Boston headquarters if they come here.

Burglars Go Through a Town.

HALIFAX, N.S. Oct. 30—Sunday night the post office at Wallace, Cumberland County, was burglarized and $45 in cash besides valued papers and notes of land secured. The office of G. B. Sherwood was also entered and a large number of valuable papers extracted from the vault, which was forced open. R. S. Fines office was also broken into, the safe was blown open and cash and cheques to the amount of $1200 taken, besides notes of land and private documents.

Murdered His Affianced.

VOLOQUA, Wis., Oct. 30.—Last week the body of Miss Mary A. Jones, aged 40, was found suspended by the neck in a chamber of her house near this city. It was supposed that she had committed suicide but this morning Samuel S. Buxton who was arrested Saturday at the instance of the dead woman's brother confessed to having murdered Miss Jones. He ruined her under promise of marriage and when she pressed him to keep his agreement strangled her to death.

A PERFECT FOOD.

Adopted in Thousands of Homes.

Lactated Food the Best.

Doctors, Mothers and Nurses Say So.

A perfect and intimate knowledge of what babies required for a life-giving diet, produced Lactated Food.

The old fashioned foods were too heavy, too strong, too irritating for the stomach, and in many cases were positively dangerous to health.

Since the advent of Lactated Food the majority of the old foods have disappeared and are almost forgotten. To-day, infants nourished on Lactated Food are bright, vigorous and happy, they grow fat and strong, and are free from all the common infant sickness.

Our ablest physicians strongly recommend Lactated Food for children when weaned. The little ones like it, and are easily led to the important change in diet.

Are you using Lactated Food for your baby, dear mother? If not, we strongly urge you to do so, the change will delight your heart, and bring joy to your home.

Big Fire In Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 30.—J. J. Porter & Co., wholesale dealers in millinery and notions at 820-824 Liberty street were entirely burned out last night. The fire started shortly after 9 o'clock and it took the entire fire department to keep the flames confined to the Porter building. Porter & Co.'s loss on stock is $200,000. The building which is owned by B. F. Jones and valued at $50,000 is almost entirely destroyed.

Canada Loan Freely Subscribed.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Tenders for the new Canadian loan were opened yesterday afternoon in the Bank of Montreal in the presence of Hon. G. E. Foster. The amount subscribed was more than double that asked. The tenders at £97 8s 6d will receive 45 per cent. of the amount applied for, and above that allotments will be made in full.

Crawford's Assailants Captured.

SPRING HILL MINES, N.S., Oct, 30.—The other two Italians implicated in the shooting of Edward Crawford were captured yesterday afternoon by Constables Fraser and McRae near River Phillip station and lodged in the lock-up.

Running Down Bandits.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—A Herald special from Sapulka, I.T., says: The Cook gang, undiminished in numbers, as defiant as ever, were sighted near here yesterday. They were not moving and seemed in no hurry to break camp there. If such be the case a battle between the bandits and pursuers will surely be fought within the next few hours, as the two bodies are only a short distance apart. Matters in Fort Gibson are growing worse daily. Cook men were riding and shooting in the streets all last night.

A CONFESSION.

Thousands Poisoned.

Many are Dying Weekly

Past Attacks of "Grippe" Have Left the Seeds of Death.

Ordinary Prescriptions Fail to Cleanse the System.

Paine's Celery Compound is Curing the Poisoned Victims.

The ablest medical men in the world say that all who have been attacked by "Grippe" and who have not thoroughly recovered, have the seeds of disease in their bodies working surely towards death. A deadly poison is implanted in all the nerves of the body. We see around us nervous and trembling men and women; we see the melancholic, despondent and sleepless who are weary of life, and we note with alarm the haggard appearance of hundreds whose expression of face indicates coming insanity.

For such unfortunate individuals wise and prudent physicians have recommended Paine's Celery Compound as the safest, surest and most efficacious medicine for eradicating all traces of poison and impurities from the system.

Past experience has fully proved the superiority of Paine's Celery Compound over every other form of medicine. It quickly purifies the blood, braces the nervous system, gives tone and vigour, health and bodily strength.

The following letter of testimony from Mrs. Mary E. Lampman, of Woodstock, Ont., is assuring, comforting and consoling for every sufferer:

"After serious consideration I think it my duty to acknowledge the great good that I have derived from Paine's Celery Compound. No living mortal can imagine the sufferings that I endured for four months. That demon 'La Grippe' got a fast hold of me, I became nervous and was so prostrated that I could not sleep night or day.

"Life became a burden, and I was reduced to a mere skeleton. My appetite was very poor; and I was so extremely nervous that I could not bear to have any person in the room with me.

"One Sabbath afternoon I read one of your papers, 'Our Album,' and found that Paine's Celery Compound had cured many people. I thought I would try a bottle, and bought one that afternoon, and commenced to take it according to directions. The relief was almost instant. I continued the use of the Compound, with the result that I can now sleep well all night, and feel well when morning comes. My appetite is good; I am gaining in flesh and feel like a new person.

"I cannot find words to express my gratitude for your great Paine's Celery Compound, and for the wonderful cure it has brought about. I am now 73 years of age, and can walk five miles without feeling very tired. I am telling my friends and neighbours who are sleepless and nervous and suffering as I was, about your medicine. Wishing you unbounded success, and hoping this may be read by some one who is afflicted and anxious for relief."

Markham Station Dynamited.

MARKHAM, Oct. 30.—At 1 o'clock yesterday morning burglars entered the Grand Trunk station by smashing in the door. They drilled a hole in the safe and blew it into pieces with dynamite. For their trouble they secured only 16 cents. The dynamite charge was about five times stronger than was needed. As a result the station is badly shattered. The stove and furniture of the office were smashed to atoms and all the windows of the building broken. The report aroused many of the villagers from their beds.

They Blame Their Pastor.

HAMILTON, Oct. 30. There is a little unpleasantness existing in Knox Church at present, which may force Rev. Mungo Fraser, D. D., to resign. James Ogilvie sent a letter to the pastor complaining that a new Sunday school building has been erected, on account of which the church has been run into debt, and he thinks the pastor is greatly responsible for it. Rev. Mr. Fraser has stated that unless the over-officious member resigns or withdraws he will himself retire.

Wheat Mixing Frauds.

TORONTO, Oct. 30. The alleged irregularities and frauds in the mixing of wheat at Fort William led the grain section of the Board of Trade to decide to complain to the department at Ottawa. Mr. James Carruthers complained that he had received from Crow & Co. of Winnipeg a car load of wheat, partly number one, but mixed with number three, and classed by the inspector at Fort William as number one. A resolution was passed protesting against the practice.

Halifax Fire Brigade Dismissed.

HALIFAX, Oct. 30.—The city council last night voted by 10 to 7 to summarily dismiss the fire department of Halifax. It was on account of the refusal of the Union Engine Company to obey an order of the council. New firemen have been provided to man the apparatus in case of emergency and until permanent arrangements can be made.

A LUCKY MAN.

Laid up for Months by a Severe Form of Kidney Disease—The Simple Cure he used—He's Well Now.

THEDFORD, Oct, 22.—Some men don't know when they are in luck and some do. Albert Malthers, of this place, is one of the lucky ones who knows of his good fortune and tells about it. He says he was laid up and could do no work for months because of kidney disease. When kidney disease has such a hold on a man as that, he is in a serious condition. Mr. Malthers recognized this and used every remedy he could think of, but without getting any help until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes cured him and he is attending to his affairs once more and is as hearty and happy as ever.

Valuable to Know.

Consumption may be more easily prevented than cured. The irritating and harassing cough will be greatly relieved by the use of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam that cures coughs, colds, bronchitis and all pulmonary troubles.

HIDDEN TREASURE FOUND.

Many Thousand Dollars Dug Up at East Otto.

BUFFALO, Oct. 30.—A Times correspondent at East Otto writes. Some time ago a middle-aged man came to this village and secured employment as a mill hand. On Sunday evening and whenever he could get a day off he would start out with a pickaxe over his shoulder, as though in search of something. His peculiar actions aroused interest and when questioned as to the motives of his trip he would give no satisfactory reply. Last Thursday after finishing his day's work the man shouldered his pickaxe and started out as usual, but this time he was followed at a discreet distance by some of his fellow-workmen.

The man went directly to the creek which flows through this village and proceeded down its banks and began to dig. In a few minutes he uncovered a box. One blow of the pickaxe broke open the affair, and those who were watching saw him gather up and put into a bag what appeared to them to be gold pieces in large quantities. They were too astonished to speak or move, and when they recovered the man had picked up his bag, put it under his coat and disappeared through the woods.

The watchers hurried to the spot and found a single gold coin of English mintage, bearing the date of 1802. It is believed by those who saw the man gather up the coin that its value must be away up in the thousands of dollars. Nothing has been seen since of the man. How the money came to be hidden in that spot is a mystery which puzzles all the residents of this village. It is generally believed, however, that it was buried here by the British during the war of 1812, and that the stranger was a descendant of one of the men who hid the treasure.

The Newfoundland Elections.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Oct. 30.—Both political parties are preparing for the final struggle which takes place on Saturday week. The Government nominated strong teams for all the districts. Placentie will be contested by Receiver General Donnelly, Walter Grieve and John Foran; Burin by George Buffet and Marmaduke Winter, brother of Justice Winter; St. Johns West by Charles Tessie Tessier, the new Superior General, James Callahan and Joseph Downey; St. Johns East by Robert Moren and John O'Dea. The Whiteway-ites have nominated James Pittman and Henry Grear for Burin. Michael Tobin, John Dunphy and William Bonia for Placenda. The teams for the city division were chosen last night.

Common Sense

Should be used in attempting to cure that very disagreeable disease, catarrh. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local applications can do no permanent good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Pills cure constipation by restoring peristaltic action to the alimentary canal.

ROBERT HALL.

Seasonable and Opportune.

Always forearmed for all the shopping demands of our customers—this store is never behind—the right goods at the right time and at the right prices. October suggest the need of such things as

Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

We have too many kinds to attempt any detail, but in addition to the BEST makes in underwear we carry a full line of the celebrated "Health Brand" in all sizes and combinations.

Blankets and Bed Comforters.

The buying of these lines was done with extreme care, as we have an exacting constituency to chose for, who are wide awake judges of qualities and prices. The stock is right and the values correspond.

Along with these we would also mention our new fall selected Shawls, in many sizes, qualities and shapes—very exclusive—and from makers who warrant their goods.

Millinery and Mantles.

Style is everything in these lines. You don't want a last years' hat, or bonnet, or jacket, at any cost, and you won't find one here. You don't even want this season's unless the style is distinctive, and that is just where we excel.

We continue to show full range in all the newest novelties in Dress Goods.

Enthusiasm.

Last night there was a fair attendance assembled in the Baptist church to listen to an address on "Enthusiasm," delivered under the auspices of the B. Y. P. A., by Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, of Port Hope. The reverend gentleman gave a splendid address of about an hour's duration. He dealt with the subject in an able manner, and pointed out to the members the advantage of properly directed enthusiasm in conducting the work of the Young People's Union. At the close of the address, Mr. Stanley, president of the B. Y. P. U., and Mr. Inspector Garvin, moved a vote of thanks to the speaker of the evening for his admirable and helpful address. During the evening the choir enlivened the proceedings with excellent special music.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Items of Interest to Local Sportsmen

THE TURF.

"For the past ten days, says the Cobourg Post, negotiations have been in progress to arrange two races at Donegan Park. The result of the late fall races aroused considerable discussion as to the speed of the different horses, finally ending in the owners of the local horses agreeing to throw in $25 each, providing the owner of Nettie Wood put in the same amount, the winner to take all. The owners of the trotting horses are also willing to put in a like amount on the same terms. Should the race be made, a good afternoon's sport will be provided." Mr. Fred Jones, the owner of Nettie Wood is willing to take the mare down to Cobourg providing the purse put up is sufficiently large.

Miss Crawford, of New Orleans, who has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. 'Gus. Sawers, returned south on Saturday, accompanied by Mrs. Sawers, who will spend the winter in New Orleans.

Mr. D. O. Roblin, traveller for H. Corby, last week, received a beautiful silver mounted grape vine stick from the firm of Messrs. Warre & Co., grape wine manufacturers, Oporto. Mr. Roblin is their Canadian representative.—Belleville Ontario.—Mr. Roblin is a son-in-law of Mr. Wm. Snowden, of the Snowden House.

Mr. Wm. Graham, son of the late James Graham of Verulam, who has been visiting his numerous relatives in the Falls and its vicinity, called in last Friday to bid us good-bye before leaving for his home on Manitoulin Island. Mr. Graham when a boy, learned the printing business, and worked about 16 years at in in Peterborough, and then opened a store in the village of Dunsford, where he lived for 25 years, during a greater part of which time he held the position of postmaster. Five years ago he moved to Manitoulin, where he owns a farm, and has a store and post office at a little village about 25 miles from Gore Bay. He likes the islands well, and says the air is wonderfully exhilarating, but as far as we could learn, almost everything except fish is dearer there than here.—Fenelon Falls Gazette.

Mr. A. H. R. Sproule, of "Denamona House," Fintona, Ireland, is on a visit to his relatives in Peterborough. Mr. Sproule left Peterborough fourteen years ago. He visited the town eight years ago and notes a marked improvement in the place, the southern part especially being almost unrecognizable on account of the improvements. Mr. Sproule thinks that our more modern public buildings or business places compare favourably with Belfast and Dublin. Mr. Sproule intends paying a lengthened visit to Peterborough, proposing to visit the Northwest and other parts of Canada before he returns. He was accompanied by his eldest daughter, who will spend the winter in Peterborough. Mr. Sproule has, during his residence in Ireland, felt the loss of the annual outing in the back country. He intends taking a turn at deer and duck hunting in the northern townships, and will doubtless find a great change in the regions that in his younger days was literally a howling wilderness. As to Ireland, there is a great improvement in the industrial condition of the people, who are more contented. He considers the Irish the most hospitable warm hearted people in the world. They and are not the fire-eaters that outsiders consider them to be. There is, in his part of the country, a great lessening of party feeling—the results of superior educational advantage being plainly apparent.

The Fast Atlantic Project.

MONTREAL, Oct. 30.—Robert Grayson, the London manager for Jas. L. Huddart, the promoter of the fast Atlantic service, arrived here yesterday from New York. He is here to see the Canadian Pacific railway people, and will go to Ottawa to see the Government. He expresses confidence that the scheme will go through as soon as Lord Jersey's report is made public and that their funds for the project can easily be raised in London. Lord Jersey's report will doubtless carry with it a financial subsidy by the British Government. Mr. Grayson says the scheme has already the moral support of the British public.

A Baby Saved.

DEAR SIRS,—My baby had a terrible cough. The doctor said it was Whooping Cough, but it got worse all the time until baby was just like a skeleton. When he was four months old I tried Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion, and after using one and a half bottles my baby is entirely cured. No other remedy but the Emulsion was used, and baby is now strong and healthy.

THE LATE EX-PREMIER MERCIER

This morning at eight o'clock Hon. Honore Mercier, ex-Premier of the Province of Quebec, died at his residence in Montreal, of the painful illness which has prostrated him for some weeks. Hon. Mr. Mercier has been a prominent and active figure in the political arena of Quebec for many years. He was of French parentage; his immediate ancestors came from France, and settled in the Montmagny district, afterwards removing to Iberville. Hon. Mr. Mercier was born at St. Anthanse, Oct. 15th, 1840. He was educated at St. Mary's Jesuit College, Montreal. He was called to the bar in 1867, and became in 1873 one of the directors of Le Parti National. He was for some time editor of the Le Courier de St. Hyacinthe. In recognition of his services to the church he was appointed a knight of the Order of Gregory the Great, in 1888 and in 1891, was made a Count of the Holy Roman Empire. He represented Rouville in the House of Commons from 1873 to 1874. Hon. Mr. Mercer was returned to the Legislative Assembly, of Quebec, as solicitor general—to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. P. Bachand in 1879, a position he held till the resignation of the government in 1879. He was returned by acclamation at the general elections of 1886 and 1890. On the resignation of the Taillon administration, on January 27th, 1887, Hon. Mr. Mercier formed an administration, in which held the position of Premier and Attorney General. Succeeding to Conservative administrations of many years, whose lavish rule had sunk the Province of Quebec deeply in debt, Mr. Mercier had a difficult task, and he showed great energy in the administration of public affairs. But he failed to be proof against the temptation to follow the example of Federal Ministers and was compelled to retire from office. His Government was defeated on appeal to the people, being succeed by Hon. L. O. Taillon. Hon. Mr. Mercier, however, was himself elected to represent Bonaventure. Mr. Mercier is to be credited with the virtue of a desire to serve his native Province to the best of his unusual abilities. His faults were the faults of the times and of his political environments.

A Christmas Book.

THE publishers of Toronto Saturday Night may well offer to place their Christmas Number of this year alongside anything produced anywhere. The book itself is extremely handsome. The cover is designed by Mr. John D. Kelly, of Toronto, and is one of the most brilliant and attractive things in the way of a cover ever done in the Dominion. Three pictures, instead of one, are given away with the Number this year, and "Charmed by the Song Bird" has only to be seen to be admired. The subject is a group of children listening to the birds. It was painted by G. A. Reid (whose famous pictures, "Mortgaging the Homestead" and "Foreclosing the Mortgage," our readers will remember having seen at the Toronto Fair) and is reproduced in the cheerful colors of real life by the newly discovered process called photo-lithography. It is a great picture. No. 2 Supplement, "Playmates," is a French pastel and a marvel of dainty coloring. No. 3 in black and white, called "A Difficult Trick," is the first popular reproduction of an old-fashioned steel engraving by T. Webster. On the expiry of the copyright The Shepbard Publishing Co. (Ltd.) at once had a plate made, of which they are proprietors, and what formerly could not be bought for less than ten dollars they now give with the Christmas Number free. As a study in faces it cannot be equalled. The three pictures have been admired by all who have seen them. The leading story in the Christmas Number is by Robert Barr, recently associated with Jerome K. Jerome in publishing the London Idler, but better known as Luke Sharp, whose writings made the Detroit Free Press famous. His story, One Day's Courtship, occupies fifteen pages. The scene is laid in Canada, and the illustrations are capital. Other stories are: The Shade of Helen, by Francis Morison; Le Loup Garou, by Clifford Smith; Why Johnnie Went Back, by Edmund E. Sheppard; The Passing of Baggs the Club Man, by Margaret Harvey, and An Heroic Imbecile, by Joe Clark. There are beautifully illustrated poems by J. W. Bengough and Reuben Butchart, Keppell Strange and James A. Tucker. There are local canvassers out (if not, someone should take hold of it) and our readers should see the book. It costs fifty cents (pictures and all), and is furnished in tubes ready for mailing.

DIED IN HIS CANOE.

An Old Resident of Alnwick Township Meets Death Mysteriously.

Mr. Wm. Dunnel, sr., an old resident of the township of Alnwick, met with his death in a very peculiar manner yesterday afternoon. The old man made a business of fishing on Rice Lake, on the shore of which he lived. In the afternoon he went out as usual in his canoe, and a few hours later the son noticed from the shore the old man's boat some distance out, and apparently empty, which fact gave rise to such uneasiness that young Dunnel procured another craft and went out to investigate, when he was horrified to find his father's dead body lying in the bottom of the canoe, which was half filled with water. The peculiarity of the death will no doubt warrant the holding of an inquest, when some light may be thrown on the mystery.

We recommend you buy direct from Grafton & Co., the manufacturer of their own clothing.

It was decided to offer the makes of both months together and bids were called for. Mr. Fitzgerald opened with an offer of 9⅜ for selections, Mr. Cook raised to 9½ for September, Mr. Cluxton bid 9⅜ for September and raised himself a sixteenth higher. Mr. Fitzgerald opened 10 cents for both months and Mr. Cook raised another sixteenth for September alone.

A question then arose as to which was the best offer, ten cents for both months or ten and a sixteenth for September alone. Quite a discussion ensued as the majority of buyers appeared to wish to purchase the makes separately. Another vote was taken on the question, but the salesmen again manifested their unwillingness to sell the two makes separately, so Mr. Cook withdrew his offer of 10 1-16. Mr. Fitzgerald's offer of ten cents then stood highest. He called Pine Grove, Peterborough, Otonabee Union, Warsaw and Warminster, which all accepted.

Mr. Cluxton bid 9⅜ for further selections. Mr. Fitzgerald raised to 9⅞ and Mr. Cook to 9 15-16. At this figure he called Shearer, Central Smith, Keene, North Smith, Westwood, Oakdale, Norwood, Maple Leaf. All refused. Mr. Cook then raised his bid to ten cents and was successful in securing Keene, Shearer, North Smith, Oakdale, Westwood, Norwood, Maple Leaf, Ormonde, Bensfort, Lang and Central Smith.

For further selections Mr. Cook offered 9½, Mr. Fitzgeral raised it to 9⅝ and Mr. Cook bid 9 15-16 and called Lakefield, Melrose Abbey, Fraserville, North Dummer, Mount Pleasant, Fleetwood, Darlington Union, Blackstock, Daisy D, which accepted.

Mr. Cook bid 9⅞ for further selections, Mr. Fitzgerald bid 9⅞. Mr. Cook raised a sixteenth more and Mr. Fitzerald went up to 9⅛. Mr. Cook once more raised to 9 15-16 and called Ida, Missing Link and Hope, which all accepted. Brooklin refused.

The bidding was opened again by a bid of 9⅞ by Mr. Fitzgerald. Mr. Cook raised a sixteenth and Mr. Fitzgerald bid 9⅞ and Mr. Cook once more went to 9 15-16, and picked Orono, Cherry Grove, which accepted.

Mr. Fitzgerald opened again with 9½, Mr. Cook raised to 9⅝, and Mr. Fitzgerald jumped to 9⅞ and called Bobcaygeon, and Trewern, which both accepted, Lakeview refused.

Mr. Fitzgerald bid 9⅞ for the Victoria section and Mr. Cook raised to 9⅞. Mr. Cook then raised his own bid to 9⅞ and called Mariposa, Fenelon Falls, Cambray, Lorneville, Cameron, N. Verulam, Perrytown, Newtonville, which all accepted. Dunsford, Scotch Line and Lakeview refused.

The factories who did not succeed in selling were allowed the privilege of selling off the Board and an adjournment till next May was made.

Mr. Abbott, who has acted as salesman for Pinegrove factory during the past season, and who is leaving to take up his residence on the Pacific slope, was thanked by the board through the president, for the manner in which he had worked towards keeping up the general tone of the board while he was a member of it.

THEY SHOULD BE MUZZLED.

Big Dogs Allowed to Run at Large—Harm May Result.

It was suggested this morning by a prominent councillor that the large dogs which run at large in the streets should be muzzled. Last night, he stated, he was talking to a friend who had a magnificent mastiff not muzzled. They spoke of the dog, and the friend assured him that the animal was as gentle as a lamb, and wouldn't bite a mouse. "Why, the children play with him, pull his tail and yank him about every way." Just then a man with squeaky boots came along and the mastiff with a growl made a couple of great leaps towards him. The man showed his nervous excitement by jumping about a yard heavenward. The dog was called off, but it just showed, remarked the councillor, what possibilities there are in letting large dogs go unmuzzled.

BEAUTIFUL SLEEP—is an expression used for sound sleep. Nothing is so gratifying to the nerves, heart, and head, as perfect sleep—a companion of good digestion and a healthy liver. A tired digestion fails to assimilate, or take care of, the food we eat. Something bracing or invigorating is needed for the liver, stomach, and intestines.

This is where you will find Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets do the most good. They are tiny, sugar-coated pills, scarcely larger than mustard seed, made of concentrated botanical extracts. These "Pellets" are easily dissolved in the stomach and absorbed into the blood, stimulating a flow of bile from the liver, and arousing to activity all the glandular secretions. Thus they act in nature's own way.

They're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money refunded, in all Bilious Attacks, in Sick Headache, Constipation, Dizziness, and Indigestion.

OTTAWA NOTES.

Several Important Cases Decided in the Exchequer Court.

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—In the Exchequer Court judgment was given for the respondents in the case of the Toronto Street Railway Co. vs. the Crown. The case was of great importance and involved a sum of $56,000 paid by the company as duty on steel rails imported from England in 1891-2 and '93. The appellants claimed that the rails, which weighed 60 pounds per lineal yard, should be "free," being over 25 pounds in weight. The case will be appealed to a higher court.

Sinclair & Dowdney, G.T.R. contractors, vs. the Crown, another customs dispute over rails, was given in favor of the plaintiffs, who will amend their statement of claim to bring the rails under the 20 per cent. clause in the tariff and thus save a big portion of the $6 per ton duty imposed.

During races of Quebec Yacht Club Senator Landry's Bernadotte ran down the Muriel. The race rules provided that yachts should be sailed by owners. A professional sailed the Muriel and Senator Landry consequenely thought she was out of the race. Mr. Landry kept his course and in so doing ran down the opposing yacht. The judge held that both parties were responsible and ordered costs and damages divided.

Sir John Thompson left at three yesterday for England. He was accompanied by Senator Sanford. The Premier takes his second daughter with him to Paris where he leaves here in a convent to pursue her education. Sir Adolphe Caron goes with the Premier as far as New York.

Lieut.-Governor Mackintosh of the Northwest is already beginning to feel very much better since he arrived in Ottawa. Sir James Grant has made a careful diagnosis of his case and has come to the conclusion that he is not suffering from sciatica at all, but from the effects of injuries he sustained some time ago.

The Ottawa district has been disfranchised from representation at the general assembly of the Knights of Labor which meets at New Orleans on November 11th and this gives cause for trouble. The reason alleged for the disfranchisement is that Ottawa district assembly has not one hundred members, the number required for representation at the general assembly. Local labor men believed that the true reason is that the Sovereign party who are in power in the general assembly and who overthrew Powderly have reason to believe Ottawa would send a Powderly man to the assembly. It is said other districts have been treated likewise.
